Off Again, On Again

President Johnson said recently he had no plans to ask for an income tax increase, and now, less than a week later, it seems likely that just such an increase will be sought.

We are not economists enough to argue the point of whether or not an income tax increase is justified, but it would seem doubtful that there has been such a drastic change that such a reversal of plans would be necessary in the short period of time involved.

The theory is being advanced that the tax increase is needed to clamp down on continued inflation.

Perhaps this is true, but we wonder if an even better means of slowing down inflation would not be cutting back non-essential government spending.

For a very small example—this week, a news story said that a high-income community in New Jersey had applied for federal funds to use for teaching deprived children—despite the fact that none had been located.

The thinking was that the money would have to go back to the federal government, if this particular community did not spend it.

What if it did? That has been one of our major gripes over the years—that every government agency seems to think that it must spend all of its

Farmers' Planting Plans Must Watch Supply Shortages

Chemical Applicators Were Unobtainable Last Spring; Berry Varieties Short

By F. H. Paschal
Cotton farmers are now putting down fertilizer and otherwise getting ready to plant cotton the latter part of April.

James A. Mullins, Extension agricultural engineer, advises cotton growers to plant 40,000 to 60,000 plants per acre, which is three to five plants per foot of row, because experiment stations have found that a thick population encourages the setting of bolls higher on the stalks.

Mechanical pickers are more efficient when the bolls are higher on the stalks.

Mullins also urges farmers to decide now on the machines they will use in applying chemicals to control weeds.

He says that last May 27th there was not a 2 nor 4-row post-emergence chemical applicator that could be bought in West Tennessee.

Farmers now have the most practical post-emergence chemicals they have ever had, but they must be applied at the right time and with the right equipment; so Mr. Mullins advises the purchasing of this equipment now.

One of the most important jobs to do with this equipment is to determine the exact amount of liquid that will be applied per acre. Instructions on this are available at the county agents' office, free on request.

Strawberries Being Set
More than 150,000 strawberry plants have been set in the county, with the end not in sight.

The acreage of strawberries has been going down steadily all over Tennessee, and plant producers are beginning to run out of plants of Dixieland and Tennessee Beauty plants.

A new variety, Surecrop, is available and is highly recommended by our experiment station. It is ready to harvest about the same time as Dixieland, makes good yields, and has larger berries than Dixieland.

The outlook for strawberries is good. J. J. Bird, associate Extension horticulturist, says demand will be far ahead of strawberry supplies for years ahead.

He predicts that processing and fresh markets will be at money-making levels and that high yielding berries can make the highest incomes in years.

Calf Sale April 6th
Calf producers from several West Tennessee counties are working together in putting on a sale of feeder calves at Brownsville on April 6th.

All calves must weigh 300 pounds or more. The maximum weight is 600 pounds for heifers and 750 pounds for steers.

HOSPITAL VISITORS GUIDE The hospital staff can best fill its mission when you cooperate by:

1. Complying with the posted visiting hours.

2. Making your visit short—five to ten minutes at most. The patient will probably have other visitors.

3. Not having more than two visitors per patient at a time.

4. Being cheerful—not discussing your problems with the patient.

5. Not smoking in patient's rooms.

6. Not sitting on patient's bed.

7. Not bringing in food (this could be harmful).

8. Leaving children 12 years of age and under at home.

9. Talking in a low, soft voice, so other patients will not be disturbed.

It is a proven fact that when patients have an excessive amount of visitors, hospital stays can be prolonged by one to three days.

THE POWER FAILURE THAT DARKENED THE NORTHEASTERN PART OF THE COUNTRY A FEW MONTHS AGO could have resulted in far more serious harm! One thing that kept it from being a major disaster was the continuation of reliable telephone service. New York City officials said that the city could have fallen into complete chaos if telephone service had also failed. However, more than 1300 Bell System central offices continued to operate with emergency power. This "back-up" power kept going all through the blackout so that people could get emergency services where needed, and call to reassure worried friends and families. And, of course, what's true of Bell System companies up East is also true of Southern Bell... including the availability of emergency "back-up" power if it's necessary. Whatever the situation and need, telephone service continues as usual... consistently reliable, dependable, always there when you need it!

22 All-Timers Gain HHS Top Ten List
 Twenty-two Halls High School students have made the "Top Ten" list every term this far in the school year.
 The list is sponsored by the Halls Beta Club to encourage scholarship in grades seven through twelve.
 At the end of each six-week term, students who make the highest average in each of these grades are named to the list. The members of the list are: Ann Latham, Sandra Nolan, and Carolyn White. The sophomore class had one member, Mary to Parrish, Phillip Voss, and the freshmen were Nancy Viar and Norma Frazier.

Underclassmen Listed Today
 Clifford Beasfield, a junior, made the list the second year. He was followed by Judy Childress, Daisy Cook, and Linda Patten—and three freshmen—Joy Leggett, McKay Newman, and Samuel Reiser.
 Four are new comers: The senior class welcomed members for the first time on the list: Ann Latham, Sandra Nolan, and Carolyn White. The sophomore class had one member, Mary to Parrish, Phillip Voss, and the freshmen were Nancy Viar and Norma Frazier.

Telephone Talk

BY ROGER GANIER, Your Telephone Manager. Charlie Hardy Ever Calls Information. "When you've seen one phone book, you've seen them all." That's what some people say. And when a new one comes out, it goes on a shelf and everybody forgets it. Nancy may use it to press a corsage. Then Uncle Harry tells his favorite joke... "It's a dull book. Great cast of characters but no plot." Some people say you may as well joke about the directory. "Nobody needs it to look up phone numbers. Just call information." That's what some people say. But not Charlie. The directory in his home is by the phone and used all the time. It's marked, circled, worn... and Charlie likes it that way! He outlines his customers in red and copies important ones in a little book he carries. Charlie doesn't have time to call information for numbers when he can keep them handy. "Why make two calls when one will do?" Mom uses black lines to mark the directory... makes it easy to pick out the grocery, the cleaners, and ladies in the bridge club. Jimmy and Judy mark the directory in their own special way. The arrows are Jimmy's. Judy sprinkles stars. The raspberry jam was added by the baby. That's how handy Charlie's directory is. And that's why Charlie hardly ever calls information. END

When King Ahab went to bed in the daytime, turned his face to the wall and refused his meals, he was sick with a common disease: envy, complicated by covetousness. It is a disease of the mind, and none of us is immune. This was in the days before zoning laws, and so one of the king's neighbors was a property owner named Naboth who had a small piece of land which he used for a vineyard. King Ahab wanted that land for a vegetable garden. Naboth would not sell it to him. Then why didn't the King take it anyway? Because the ancient law of the land forbade it. A man, no matter how poor and obscure, had the right under the law to keep his own land and refuse to sell it, even to a king. LEX REK.

The story might have ended there, if it had not been for Ahab's Queen Jezebel. The upshot of it all was that Ahab took his wife's advice. There is no sin, of course, in taking your wife's advice, provided she is a good and wise woman. Jezebel was neither. Law meant nothing to her. "Take the man's vineyard," she said. "There is one way you can 'legally' get him: have him executed, convicted his vineyard. But what crime has Naboth committed? None, but one can be manufactured. So letters were forged and perfumes were hired, and Naboth was hanged for a crime he never would have thought of committing. This of course was devilish advice; but Ahab, eaten to the bone with envy, was ripe for the devil's picking. By the use of falsehood and murder he committed theft on one of his loyal neighbors and citizens. REXLEX, the King is Law. There is no law that a king may not break. That is what a king is: one whose will is law, one who 'lives above' the law, beyond its reach. According to an old church tradition, that is why the devil left heaven (he is called a 'fallen' angel). He was kicked out for wanting to be God.

Be that as it may, devil or no devil, there are many human beings who follow that bad example and act as if they were superior to all laws. They try to play God, though they may not be conscious of what they are doing. You do not have to travel 100 miles before you will meet someone... perhaps even a church member... who will argue that the Ten Commandments are out of date, that we have outgrown them. Now there are some laws that men make and men may rightly change; but there are other laws, more important laws, which men may not change. They are laws of God, and not subject to repeal. There is only one person who has the right to suspend or repeal the Ten Commandments, and that is God. And he has never revoked one of them yet.
