Childress Ends Sheriff's Race

Citing laws which prohibit a sheriff from holding a county contract, as he does, Billy Joe Childress this week withdrew from the race for sheriff in the Aug. 5th general election.

"When I entered the race, I had a contract with the county to run additional water lines and install a 250,000 gallon water tank," he said.

"I knew that if I was elected sheriff, my company would not be permitted to do any work for the county, but I was led to believe that my company could finish any work that was under contract previous to my being elected sheriff.

"After being informed that there was a good possibility that a law-suit would be filed against me, I asked for legal advice on this matter.

"I was advised that:

(1) The official manual of the Sheriff's Office in Tennessee, published by the Comptroller of the Treasury, states as follows:

"Should any sheriff become directly or indirectly interested in any public contract, he shall forfeit all pay and compensation received from the contract. He shall also be dismissed from his office, and be ineligible for the same or similar position for ten years. (12-402). It is provided that a sheriff convicted of a misdemeanor in office shall be removed and disqualified from further office holding. (39-3219).

(2) 12-402. Penalty For Unlawful Interest. Should any person acting as such Officer, Committeeman, Director, or other person referred to in 12-401, be or become directly or indirectly interested in any such contract, he shall forfeit all pay and compensation therefor. Such officer shall be dismissed from such office he then occupies and be ineligible for the same or similar position for ten years.

"After reading and discussing the above laws governing elected officials, I have no choice but to withdraw at this time.

"I cannot understand why this law applies to some and not to all.

"I deeply appreciate all the confidence that so many people had placed in me."

Name Watlington's To Offices In Peru

The Rev. Elton Watlington, former pastor of Ripley Methodist Circuit, has been elected district program secretary, and his wife, Janice, treasurer for the next two years of the General Assembly of the church in Peru, where they have resumed missionary work.

The Watlingtons worked several days after the Assembly, in First Church, Lima, editing and mailing a "Peru Calling," reporting on the church in Peru.

"We passed our annual physical exams with flying colors," they write Mr. and Mrs. John Peyton, of Cherry.

"Even so, Andy spent two nights in the clinic in Lima (where he was born) ten days later with a stomach infection.

"Joe Thomas joined us Feb. 21st for a month's visit and brought the good news of his acceptance into medical school at the University of Tennessee in Memphis, to begin July 9th.

"John Andrew is getting a scholastic introduction to Spanish these days, especially in its written form, in preparation for school April 1st at our Methodist Colegio Andino."

After returning to their home in Huancayo, the Watlingtons write, "we have made some half-day excursions in the valley—to the glacial ice of Huaytapallana, the beautiful quiet Ingenio River valley, and to ruins at nearby Warivilca and Arwaturo (Ahuac)."

Teachers Present Drama Saturday

A drama, "44 Years In Buckskins," about the career of James Robertson, pioneer Tennessee farmer, soldier, and political leader, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Ripley High School by the Tennessee Education Association Theater Troupe, composed of teachers who have performed professionally.

Ripley is one of 13 cities in the state in which the drama, written and directed by Jennifer Gray, is being staged.

Deadline Trips 11 Candidates?

At least eleven Lauderdale Countians who want their names on the Aug. 5th general election ballot were uncertain Tuesday whether they will make it or not.

And this number may have increased by noon Thursday—which the county election commission originally quoted as the deadline for filing petitions to qualify for being placed on the ballot.

An election time-table sent to the county election commission by Shirley Hassler, state election co-ordinator, specifies Thursday, June 3rd, as the petition deadline for both primary and independent candidates.

This deadline has not been questioned in regard to the party primaries—Democratic and Republican—which will select nominees for the U.S. Congress.

But state laws, including one recently enacted, have been found which some sources believe fix the deadline to qualify for the general election—the one which fills county offices—as the fourth Tuesday in May, which was May 25th.

Other searchers through the tangled web of state statutes disagree with this theory and say the deadline for both primary and general elections remains June 3rd.

Whichever way the state resolves the issue is likely to create an uproar—from those who met the May 25th deadline, if new opponents are allowed on the ballot, or from those who meant to meet the June 3rd deadline but are now told the deadline was May 25th.

County election commissioners scheduled a meeting Thursday evening to discuss the headache.

Better Than Expected

Well as it turned out we were wrong but not much when we predicted that former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would defeat President Ford in last week's Tennessee Republican primary. Mr. Ford had a 2,100 majority in the state but won one less delegate 21-20 to the Republican National Convention.

However, we are even more convinced that President Ford will win the nomination and have a good chance to be re-elected in November despite continued efforts on the part of a few political commentators and writers to make him look as bad as possible.

Gov. Reagan in all probability would have won the Tennessee primary if he had not stumped his toe on his statements about selling TVA.

The fact that he was misinformed enough to make such a statement just prior to primary in Kentucky and Tennessee bears out our belief that he is ill qualified for the job of President of the United States.

As expected, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter easily won in the Democratic primary and presently seems certain to garner enough delegates to win the Democratic nomination, but we're afraid that his personal appeal and not his ability is gaining him the support of the average voter.

Brock Announces

Sen. Bill Brock Monday made it official that he will seek re-election in the Republican primary next August and the general election in November. It seems unlikely that he will have any opposition of any consequence in the primary but the Democratic party is making a strong effort to recover the Senate seat which Mr. Brock gained six years ago.

Speaking to a large group of supporters, including a number of Lauderdale Countians, Monday morning at McKellar Airport in Jackson, Sen. Brock told the group that he is seeking reelection and needed their support.

During his remarks Sen. Brock deplored the growing tendency of the federal government to interfere with public education, the continually climbing federal deficit, and pledged his efforts to work toward restoring the nation's spirit and pride.

The announcement stops included Chattanooga, Jackson, Memphis, Nashville, and Knoxville.

That Time Again

We must be getting extremely old since it seems only a couple of months ago that we were warning motorists that children will be going back and forth to school and here it is time again to remind that they will be playing on the streets.

One moment's carelessness might cause injury or death to a child. Drive with extreme care and keep our children safe.

BEAUTY SPOT

Pansies and roses on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moore on East Main were selected this week for the Halls Garden Club beauty spot sign. Yellow poppies on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. James Hooper on Sunrow St. were selected last week.

SEEKS RE-ELECTION

Maurice Jordan has announced his candidacy for re-election as Constable for the 12th Civil District (Halls) in the general election Aug. 5th.

Jordan, a former city policeman, is a security officer at Ft. Pillow State Prison.

Farm Coverage Highly Ranked

Annual judging of mass media communication by University of Tennessee Extension agents has ranked the columns in this newspaper by Charles T. Peal, county Extension leader, second in West Tennessee.

His direct mail letters placed first in the district and second in the state, and his news-letter to farmers placed first in the district and third in the state.

Rev. Evans Given Honorary Degree

The Rev. Teddy H. Evans, retired superintendent of missions for Big Hatchie Baptist Association, received an honorary doctor of divinity degree in Union University's first graduation exercises on its new campus in Jackson Saturday.

Dr. Landrum P. Leavell, a native of Ripley who is president of New Orleans, La., Baptist Theological Seminary, was baccalaureate speaker.

SETTING FOR LUNCHEON ON THE GROUNDS of the Parthenon replica in Nashville's Centennial Park Monday is tent design by Bill Gernert.

U.N. In Nashville Monday

The United Nations General Assembly will pay its first visit to any state in this country—and assemble outside New York City for the first time since early organizational meetings in 1945—in Nashville Monday.

Assembly members will be escorted from the airport to Vanderbilt University for an official forum, with a major address by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Trackless trains provided by Opryland will move the group to Centennial Park for luncheon on the grounds in specially decorated tents erected for the occasion, in the shadow of the replica of the Parthenon.

The group will then go to Opryland for a special performance of the Grand Ole Opry.

The British Broadcasting Corp., the Japanese Radio Network, and The Pakistan Times are among news agencies expected to cover the events, along with the three major U.S. radio and television networks.

Several thousand Tennesseans are involved in planning the event, including the state and Metropolitan Nashville governments, the United Nations Association, and many private businesses and citizens.

The budget—in excess of $100,000—has been met from private sources. No state tax dollars are involved, except staff time.

"There's great competition—particularly among Southeastern states—to attract quality investment," says Ed Nelson, of Nashville's Commerce Union Bank.

He said Monday's "sharp focus" on the state could lead to "working with other countries and educating them on our resources."

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

During the past week, I joined with a number of other members of the House of Representatives in proposing a bill that will institute the practice of zero-based budgeting in the congressional budget process. This approach to the federal budget is a practical one and one that will require the periodic review of all federal programs and agencies to determine where there are overlapping or duplicative programs. In addition, it will give the Congress an opportunity to determine if these programs are effective and efficient.

Initially, this concept, known as zero-based budgeting and sometimes referred to as "sun-set" legislation, will break all of the programs and agencies within the federal budget down into four categories. Beginning in 1979, each of those categories will expire in successive years and will thus require an ongoing review of each of the programs contained in the categories to determine if they should be extended.

Included in this review would be a complete look at whether the program being studied was effective and whether or not there was a need to extend its life. After this review was completed, Congressional Committees could take the appropriate action to deny the reauthorization of programs or agencies that failed to live up to the need they were created to fill. In addition, even programs that were deemed worthy of keeping would not necessarily be retained at their existing level or at a greater size. Congress would start at zero-base in its re-examination and each program would have to justify every dollar of authorization. This type of approach to budgeting federal expenditures could have considerable benefits for both the taxpayer and the government.

It could eventually streamline the federal bureaucracy by letting unnecessary and wasteful programs expire without reauthorization. It would eliminate the duplication of services within the federal government and would, hopefully, stem the trend of bigger and bigger federal budgets. This could make the federal bureaucracy more responsive to the people it serves and reduce total federal spending.

One of the important parts of this legislation is the recognition of the fact that there is no real basis to the assumption that an agency or program should continue to exist just because it existed last year. It is also important to recognize that even if the program is allowed to exist after it is reviewed, there may be no reason to give it the same amount of money that it received the previous year.

This concept of budgeting can be a further refinement of the still relatively new congressional budget process. The Congress has shown that it can agree on budget limits and hold itself to levels of spending within those limits. However, it is important to begin a process whereby a review of the spending categories is made. Without such a review, Congress has no real method of determining whether or not a program is successful in obtaining the objective that was set out for it. In addition, such a review process gives Congress a greater control over the bureaucracy that has become so cumbersome and unresponsive to the American public, more so than the Administrative Reorganization Act which I co-sponsored last year and which is presently moving through the various stages of the legislative process.

A companion bill to the House version of the zero-based budgeting bill has been introduced in the Senate and hearings have been completed on it in the Senate. Hopefully, action will be forthcoming on the House side in the very near future.

Weather Cools Cotton Hopes

By Charles T. Peal
Cool soil temperatures have made things chilly for cotton producers who had been hopeful of getting off to a fast start.

The Green this year. Scene of the county's cotton planted between April 15th and April 24th was replanted after having succumbed to the "blackberry winter" from April 24th to May 9th.

Soil temperature reached a low of 41° April 30th.

The minimum soil temperature at which cotton will grow properly is 68°.

The writer found the soil temperature at 3 p.m. reached 68° on seven days in April—but only three in May.

Minimum air temperatures in the low 50s prevailed all last month.

Temperatures, herbicides, and fertilizers have produced some unusual foliage characteristics.

White streaks through the center of the cotyledons and leaflets with red and yellow, an uncommon phenomenon.

However, buds and root systems are healthy. Most are well developed with green and yellow, an uncommon phenomenon.

Plenty of warm sun, shade, combined with fertilizer, should cause these plants to grow rapidly.

As a group, the county's cotton growers—who do need a good year—remain highly optimistic.

Thrip Control Required
Considerable thrip damage has been observed on cotton.

Carey Gaines, of Henning, a veteran insect battler, has already used Bidrin for these early insects.

With most cotton still in a stress situation, every effort should be made to protect new terminal growth.

A good way to evaluate thrip populations is to pull several plants, at random, in each field (at least ten per acre); shake the plants individually in a white container; and apply a recommended insecticide if you count an average of one adult or immature thrip per plant.

Boll Weevils Monitored
Over-wintered boll weevil populations increased last week.

This information comes from an extensive monitoring system installed for West Tennessee's cotton growing area.

This year's program is an expansion of one used since 1973. Granular baited traps are set in certain zones of each county, near good sites for over-wintering weevils. Collections are made and recorded weekly.

Six traps are located in Lauderdale County, and many in counties south of this one can help detect migrations.

A trap in this county near Nut Bush showed two weevils collected May 18th and 35 a week later.

A trap near Double Bridge caught 15 the latter week, compared with none the week before.

A new system to monitor boll weevils is also being set up. Black light and Vir-Lure traps will be used to collect both species of the worm, which severely damaged cotton last year.

One of twelve traps in West Tennessee will be located on the farm of Hal Pennington at Gates.

Reports will be mailed to the county Extension office, beginning in mid-June.

An Old-Time Remedy
Anything's fair in the war on insects, when you are a cotton grower.

One in the 1850s came up with a baited trap which called for painting wooden discs with a mix of molasses and vinegar.

Attached to upright posts the same height as the cotton, the disc attracted pests to the sticky mix, in which they became trapped—sometimes as many as 70 to a disc.

According to the grower, the most effective rate was one disc to the acre.

No compatibility data or rates were available on the molasses-vinegar combination.

This practice was extremely sophisticated compared to the more time-tested program of hiring crews of workers to swab boll-worm moths and other pests with wooden paddles.

Army Worms Nearby
Army worms have been discovered in Tipton County wheat fields.

County farmers should check wheat regularly and apply controls when two or three army worms half an inch in length are found per square foot.

Toxaphene at the rate of one-third of a gallon per acre will control these pests.

Methoxychlor, two quarts per acre, or Sevin, 80% wettable powder, two pounds per acre, are also effective.

OSHA Threatens Farmers
Farm field and farmstead equipment and cotton gins are covered by a new agricultural standard issued by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration for which the Congress is responsible.

It is effective June 7th and covers farmers who employ anyone to work on their farms.

It requires guarding of power take-off shafts and nip points of other "power transmission com-

WHERE THE ACTION IS

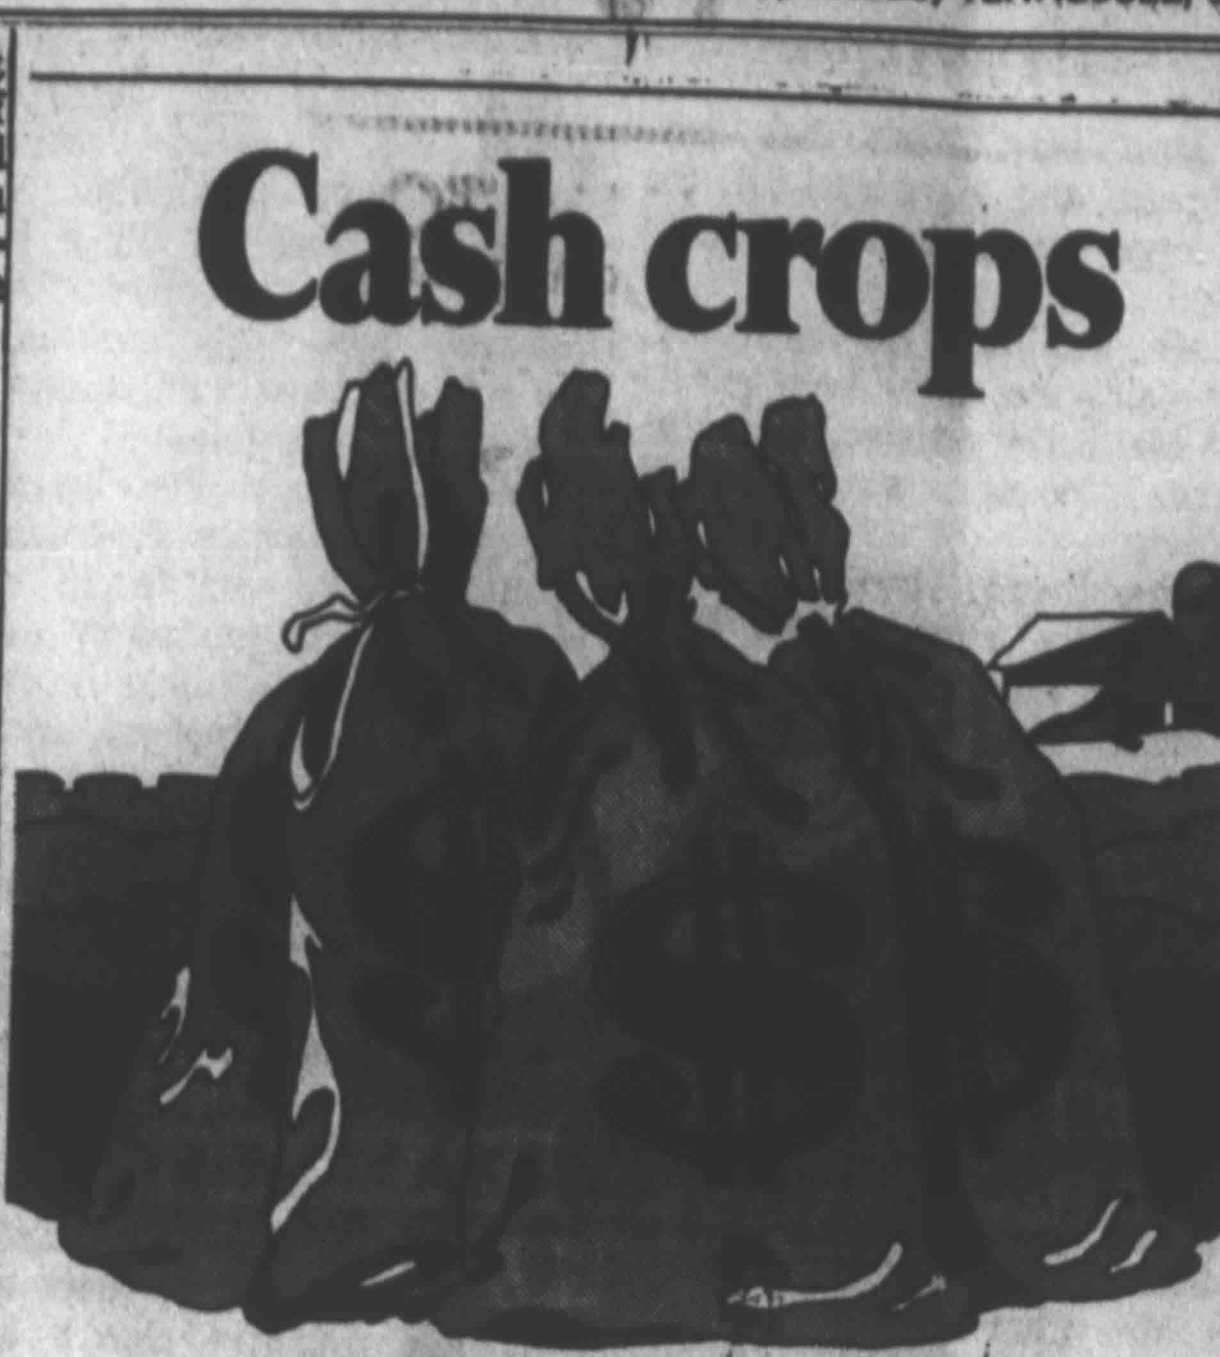

Lesson for June 6, 1976

A number of years ago when English cleric J.S. Phillips wrote his translation of the Book of Acts, he entitled it: THE YOUNG CHURCH IN ACTION.

Rev. Althouse is the author of Acts—might just as easily be chosen to write of the beliefs of the early apostles, but the story of the early church is not one of doctrines, but of a burning, compelling faith expressed in a multitude of actions and deeds that seemed to turn "the world upside down" (Acts 17:6).

preach on that day was the result of some acts by the disciples of Jesus. People passing by heard the "other tongues" that were spoken by the power of the Holy Spirit were foreign languages which could be understood, not unintelligible "tongues". Spectators were amazed and demanded: "What does this mean?" (2:12).

May 25th Deadline Sticks; 14 Candidates Miss Ballot

County election commissioners decided last week the Aug. 5th general election ballot can list only candidates who qualified by the legal deadline, May 25th—though this and many other counties quoted June 5th as the deadline.

First State Notice of May 25th deadline also dealt with county primaries and led some who got it—Lake County says it never did—to interpret it as applying only to independent candidates in county primaries leading up to August's general election.

ON SERVING TABLES

Lesson for June 12, 1976

Background Scriptures: Acts 17:1-9; Romans 16:1-8; Ephesians 4:11-16; 1 Timothy 3:1-13; Devotional Reading: Ephesians 4:1-16.

I have read the sixth chapter of Acts many times, but it was only in preparation for this column that I realized there was something there that had eluded me in the past.

The story seems simple enough: because the Greek-speaking Jewish Christians felt that their duties of preaching and teaching would not permit them to adequately oversee this matter, seven men were appointed and consecrated to be responsible for this function. In some churches today the deacon is still regarded as the person specially set apart to minister to people's material needs, while the pastor or elder devotes himself, as did the apostles, to their spiritual needs.

Murmuring at the tables. Yet, reading between the lines, there seems to be more to this story. I sense considerable conflict in this incident. Luke says that the Hellenists murmured against the Hebrews' (the Greek-speaking) gainst Aramaic-speaking). The point of the dispute is clear: the Hellenists felt there is discrimination against them by the Hebrews.

This is a serious charge and the first indication that the early church had the same kinds of problems which still have today. Whether or not the Ara-ms-speaking Christians were actually prejudiced against their Greek-speaking counterparts, the Hellenists believed that they were the victims of discrimination. Thus was the unity of the church threatened.

The congregation was pleased. In their response to this complaint, the apostles sound as if they are more than a little defensive. Instead of commenting upon the unequal distribution, they protest that their religious duties will not permit them to exercise sufficient oversight of the food distribution. Then, in an attempt to find a compromise, they suggest that seven Greek-speaking Christians be selected to administer the food tables. The tactic seems to satisfy the Hellenists for "what they said pleased the whole multitude..." (6:5).

Farmers Ponder Cotto's Plow-Up

By Charles T. Peal

Farmers with border-line cotton crops are pondering "plow-up" decision in the face of high and very attractive prices resulting from adverse weather.

The weather caused wide-spread seedling disease pressure on early plantings. Prolonged cool temperatures and wet soils rotted tap roots, and it is questionable whether abnormal roots which plants put out from the main stems, just below the soil surface, will support plants to full production.

More than 75 farmers have asked the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for stand counts in preparation for re-planting cotton land to soy beans.

Larry Hawk, ASCS county director, says the destroyed acreage count appears significant.

Consentations on cotton acreage to be retained run around 20,000, compared to 11,002 acres in 1975.

Many farmers are booking at higher prices. Many booked at 56¢ a pound.

Corn acreage—small for the past few years—is around 7,000 this year.

The excellent moisture conditions in the early spring of the last three years have made excellent yields for those who like to grow corn.

Present costs for corn can permit a profit of $10 per acre. Corn can be marketed as a commodity or through livestock for even more profit.

Soy beans, planting reached fever pitch last week as producers raced to plant as much as possible before June 15th.

Beans planted before that date make five eight more bushels per acre.

Many farmers have finished planting and are waiting to plant wheat beans.

Soy bean prices, too, have taken an unexpected jump. Domestic use has been much higher than expected.

The wheat harvest went rapidly, with many growers reporting 60-bushel per acre yields.

Eddie Steelman harvests 35 to 40 bushels an acre.

With wheat harvest a week earlier than normal, the soybean crop following should be a larger yield than usual.

Tomato producers have had their problems this year. Cool weather prevented normal fruiting patterns, but warm days are bringing fast growth.

Estimates are that tomato acreage has doubled from last year's 500.

Marketing should begin in about a week. Tomatoes from this county go to many large cities in the north.

Some producers sell to Memphis stores; other market where they can. This looks like a banner year for this crop.

Field Sanitation Pushed The U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration is setting up standards for field sanitary facilities for farm employees.

Proposed standards appeared

Five years and nine months after Congress authorized the project, the U.S. Corps of Engineers is holding public hearings in Tiptonville and Caruthersville, Mo., on raising the Mississippi River east bank levee—including a projected extension south into this county of the Tiptonville-Obion River levee.

The latter's height was set by Congress in 1941 at three feet below the main line levee on the west bank.

That levee and the Reelfoot levee were set for two and three feet above the river's designed flow-line.

The Tiptonville-Obion River levee is thus one foot below the designed flow-line.

Any change in its height will presumably affect plans for its extension about six miles south of the Forked Deer River into Lauderdale County.

This extension of the levee would put its southern end directly west of Chisholm Lake in this county (see map).

Those interested in expressing their views on the project need attend only one of the two public hearings.

One will convene in the Lake County court house in Tiptonville at 7:30 p.m. July 6th, the other in First State Bank in Caruthersville, two days later.

Those interested may make oral or submit written statements to either hearing.

Written statements may also be sent to the Engineers' Memphis District office. If received within two weeks after the hearings, they will be made part of the hearings official record.

DEBRIS OF SEDAN in which Bobby Kissell, 18, met death Sunday afternoon

HOUSE BURNS

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Young on West Main was badly damaged by fire about 12:15 a.m. last Thursday.

Fire apparently caught from an electrical short in a refrigerator on the back porch and spread to the interior of the house.

They were largely based on recommendations developed especially for California's Harvest Sanitation Code some ten years ago.

Farmers employing 40 or more persons would be required to provide toilet and hand-washing facilities within a 5-minute walk.

For fewer than five employees, facilities must be easily accessible by readily available transportation.

The major question is whether California-type regulations are proper for operations in Lauderdale County.

Public comment can be made to the Department of Labor until July 6th.

OSHA is slowly but surely getting a strangle-hold on farm operations.

New requirements for guarding field equipment and cotton gins are beneficial but include some ridiculous features.

It will pay those involved to keep up with these rules. An Extension letter outlining the basic about them is planned for the near future.

Summer Grazing Planned Lawton Wadsworth gets extra milk production by providing his cows with large amounts of high quality temporary grass.

He is now seeding a sorghum-Sudan grass cross for this purpose.

He selects land moist in summer. For higher yields, he applies lime and fertilizer according to soil tests and uses one of many recommended hybrids.

Lawton uses 30 to 40 pounds of sorghum-Sudan grass seed per acre, broadcast, and begins grazing at 18 inches.

When cows start grass down to four to six inches, he rotates them to another field until plants reach grazing height again.

Best control is, using Sevin, Thiodan, or Methoxychlor. The bacterium which causes the wilt over-winters in the bodies of adult cucumber beetles. When the beetles feed on foliage, they inject bacteria in the vine. The entire plant will wilt and die in a couple days.

Other plants in the same hill or in nearby hills will begin to show the same symptoms.

These animals, which hibernate during the winter, usually have two or three separate homes.

These may be several hundred feet apart and generally have two or more openings.

The entrance hole will usually have a large pile of mud, moved earth, and the exit, or plunger hole, will have none.

In some cases, only one opening may be different openings may lead into the same system.

One control is hunting with .22 or .222 rifles. There is no closed season on this animal in Tennessee, and no bag limit.

Many people never consider eating groundhogs, but they are delicious if properly prepared.

The bait used is use of gas cartridges to fumigate burrows. Permission to use this method, and the cartridges required, are available from the county wildlife officer.

Faulk Finds Fast Moving Balloon

Fred Faulk, of Ripley, found a balloon bearing a Bicentennial message Monday night of last week on Highway 51 north of Ripley.

It had traveled about 285 miles since its release that morning in Clarksville, Ind., just across the Ohio River from Louisville, Ky.

Faulk telephoned Danny E. Davis, 12, to report recovery of his entry in the balloon distance contest staged in Clarksville, Tennessee.

Services were at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Ripley Funeral Home, with burial in Memorial Gardens.

He also leaves a brother, Vincent Lyle Kissell, and three sisters, Brenda Lee, Cindy Lou, and Vivian Denise Kissell, all of Ripley.

Steve Carpenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Carpenter, of 535 Dagwood, Ripley, received his associate of science degree from Dyersburg State College June 4th with honors.

He was listed in the honors group on commencement programs but not listed in a press release which DSC sent to area newspapers in advance of the graduation date.

Magistrates To Control Halls School Architect

The Board of Education won approval from County Court Monday to proceed with plans for a 700-pupil Halls Elementary School, at a cost estimated at $1,029,000, after board chairman Jack Crutcher assured magistrates they will be allowed to approve the choice of an architect.

Some school board members had previously resisted a court voice in selection of an architect—technically the Board of Education's province, with the court's role only that of supplying necessary financing.

Some court members feel that without care in selection of the architect costs will get out of line.

It was suggested that Lawson Chipman, a professional builder who as a magistrate has supervised county construction projects without any compensation, be employed to supervise school construction as a value for its funds spent on schools. It was understood that this would require his resignation from the court.

School Supt. O. R. Taylor had the school budget amended to reflect an insurance settlement of fire damage to Ripley High School of $600,000. He said insurance so far has paid $557,547.50 but that concealed damage will increase the total.

A 3-page petition for paving a road in Smithville Sub-Division was referred to the court's highway committee for a report in July. Elected notaries public were Linda Craig, Marilyn Garrett, and Elnora Hill.

Reviere Expands Ballot; State Pondering Appeal

Circuit Court Judge Herman L. Reviere Tuesday ordered the county election commission to include 14 candidates who filed after the May 25th deadline—whom the commission, and many others in the state, had mistakenly advised candidates was June 3rd—on the Aug. 5th general election.

His ruling came after Bill Smith, the only county-wide candidate affected, filed suit to protest his exclusion from the ballot.

GOD AND CEASAR
 Lesson for June 27, 1976

Background Scriptures:
 1 Kings 22:1-28, Acts 5:29-32;
 Romans 13:1-7, 1 Peter 2:13-17;
 Revelation 13:1-18.
 Devotional Reading:
 Philippians 3:18-21.

It has often been rightly said that, quoted out of context, the Bible could be used to support almost any teaching or religious concept. Used in a careless manner, various passages in the Bible could be used to support polygamy, incest, murder, robbery, fraud, and a whole host of other acts that we consider to be immoral. Thus, it has often been said that when we quote any portion of the Bible, we need to keep in mind the rest of the Bible as well.

Rev. Althouse we quote any portion of the Bible, we need to keep in mind the rest of the Bible as well.

"But I say to you" Jesus himself was aware of this problem. He knew that certain commandments of the Old Testament were superseded by his own message from God. Thus, at times, he would say, "You have heard that it was said of old, but I say to you..." Many of the rules and regulations of the Old Testament are no longer applicable to the Christian because the Gospel has carried us beyond that level of religion.

Even in the New Testament we must be careful to interpret Christian teachings in the context of the whole New Testament. Nowhere is this more clearly illustrated than in Romans 13.

Paul is speaking of the Christian's relationship to his government and his ideas seem clear and concise:

"Let every person be subject to the governing authorities... those authorities that exist have been instituted by God... he who resists the authorities resists what God has appointed..."

"...rulers are not a terror to good conduct, but to bad..." It would seem from these statements that the Christian ought never to oppose or resist the government in any way. Yet, if Christians had followed this concept rigidly, the whole course of Christian history would have been altered. There would have been few, if any, Christian martyrs. The church probably would never have expanded beyond the boundaries of Palestine. Nor would there have been a Reformation or the American Revolution!

We must obey God, not men Paul's words in Romans, however, must be kept in the context of his concern for Christian citizenship. Paul would not want his words about obedience to be construed to mean that the Christian ought never to resist or oppose his government. Paul's own actions are indicative of this. There were a number of times in his life when he was in opposition to the local government and was put in jail for various reasons. When conscience demanded, he resisted the government.

Nor was Paul alone in this. In Acts 5 we find the story of Peter and John being thrown in jail and resisting the orders of Jewish Council. Though respectful, Peter clearly draws the line between obedience to the state and faithfulness to one's God. When it is a conflict between the state and what God lays upon our hearts: "we must obey God rather than men!"

ED JONES
 7th DISTRICT OF TENNESSEE
REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

During recent months, the Tennessee Valley Authority has to get the procedure necessary to get its Browns Ferry, Ala., nuclear generating plants back into operation. As many of you will remember, a fire broke out in one of the nuclear units located at Browns Ferry last year. The fire resulted in the closing of that plant until modifications and new procedures could be developed to prevent such an occurrence from happening again.

In the months that have elapsed since the fire, TVA, in accordance with requirements set down by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, has made extensive changes in the plant and in the procedures used to test the components of the plants. At this stage, the modifications are completed, but the Tennessee Valley Authority must seek permission to reload the nuclear fuel used in the Browns Ferry plant. This is, of course, a prerequisite for restarting the generation of electricity from the plant.

As the summer season tightens its grip on the seven states served by TVA, more and more people in the Valley will be using their air conditioners, thereby using more electricity.

To give you an indication of how much these nuclear units mean to TVA's efforts to properly serve the Valley at reasonable costs, it is estimated that unless they are back on line and producing electricity by the time that most people are using their air conditioners, TVA could suffer losses of up to $70 million over the next three months. Those losses will, of course, be felt by each and every power consumer in the Tennessee River valley.

Most of that amount will be because TVA has to purchase the needed additional power needed to meet the peak demands of power users. In more simplified terms, the loss of Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant for the summer could result in higher electric bills throughout the Valley. TVA officials have indicated that such detrimental effects would not occur if Browns Ferry is allowed to resume operations.

Now, TVA has submitted their application to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for permission to begin the process of restarting the units at Browns Ferry. However, the Commission has indicated a public hearing will be held prior to the resumption of operations at Browns Ferry even though the Commission issued a report that said it is reasonable to assume that the modifications made to the plant will allow it to operate without undue danger or hazard to the public. Also, one person from Alabama has entered into the application process objecting to the resumption of operations at Browns Ferry.

This procedural slowdown and bureaucratic application processing is a real threat to the power consumers in the Valley. It could cost each and every family and business owner a terrific amount of money while the Browns Ferry plant sits idle. It is already costing TVA $10 million every month that the plant is not operating.

Recently, I joined with 19 other Congressmen who represent districts in the TVA service area in urging the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to devote its full efforts toward reaching a solution to this potentially severe problem. The investment made at Browns Ferry cannot be allowed to sit idle after it has been judged to be safe and able to operate without hazardous effects on the public it serves. Such idleness would only be detrimental to the people of the Tennessee Valley. I am hopeful that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will act expeditiously to prevent another summer of unnecessary high electric bills in the Tennessee River valley.

Dear Friends:

Remember, as a kid, you were egged on to smoke a cigarette—chicken if you didn't?

Today, on our school campus, it is marijuana, or pot. Statistics gathered last year from 525 elementary, junior, and senior high schools in Tennessee revealed that between 60% and 70% of high school students experimented with smoking pot; 50% of junior high school students have smoked it at least once; and smoking pot among fourth, fifth, and sixth grade students has more than doubled in the past five years.

About 20% will become regular and heavy smokers.

About 1 in 10 will become total pot-heads, losing ambition, initiative, and motivation.

The drug problem has been with us many years, but as long as it was across the tracks, little attention was paid the drug addict. Now it is here.

The boy next door—the girl across the street.

It is high time we became concerned with this vicious evil.

Where does it come from?

Who is pushing it?

Can it be stopped?

Do the pushers or the kids go before the court?

As concerned parents and citizens, we need answers to these questions now. We need a sheriff who will wage an all-out war against drug abuse. If it is not controlled now, God have mercy on our country.

A few churches and civic organizations have recognized this need and sponsored drug abuse programs. The sheriff should be a leader in bringing drug abuse education programs into our county. I have worked successfully on drug control in the military service. I understand its sources—its distribution—and its control.

When elected your sheriff,

I will personally take a refresher course in drug control.

I will personally sponsor drug abuse education programs and make them available to any concerned church, school, community council, or civic club in the county.

I will surround myself with deputies who share my love and concern for Lauderdale County.

I will send those deputies to law enforcement schools for training in the latest, most effective methods of handling all kinds of law enforcement.

It's time to act.

Ask all your friends to vote for Joe O'Steen.

Let's elect Joe O'Steen Sheriff of Lauderdale County.
