PLANNING KIDNEY DONATION TO HER SON, Russell, 10, is Mrs. Robert Hill, of Forked Deer, who went to Le Bonheur Hospital in Memphis Thursday for her final test to plan the surgery, which will require removal of both the boy's kidneys, defective since birth. Since June 30th, the otherwise normal fourth grader in Tennessee Academy in Brownsville has gone to Le Bonheur twice weekly for 6-hour dialysis treatments, to remove impurities his kidneys fail to take from his blood, at $500 each. Eureka Methodist Church, of which the Hills are members, has established a Russell Hill Kidney Fund to help with these crushing expenses. The Hills have another son, Jeff, 13, in normal health.

Rain Boosts Bean Yields

By Charles T. Peal
Rain early Wednesday morning substantially improved soy bean yield prospects and aided pastures.

Hay harvesting has moved rapidly, aided by dry weather. The corn harvest began last week, with Pat and Bill Parker shelling their earlier planted fields. Yield outlook is 100 bushels or more, on most land.

Spraying is under way to control army worms. Reid Dunavant reported army worm damage to his Bermuda hay crop. Bumbardy Driver is having a problem with army worms in soy beans.

Home owners report them in lawns, but they seem to be spotted around the county.

Two pounds of Sevin, 80% wettable powder, per acre will control them on a field basis; two tablespoons of 10% Sevin per gallon will suffice in small areas.

Cotton insect populations are increasing in some areas, while others have low counts.

Producers are spraying every four or five days to control boll weevils and boll worms.

New this year is an ovicide which causes the boll worm egg to dry, preventing hatching.

This is a most effective method. Boll worms are difficult to control once they hatch and begin eating bolls.

Experience has indicated that spraying must continue until the middle of September to be reasonably successful.

Time To Sow Forage Crops
Johnny Roberts, of Double Bridges, who is grazing some back-grounding steers, is seeding oats for winter grazing.

In prior years, he has used wheat, but oats seem to grow faster, giving more fall grazing.

He will probably try some rye grass—a mainstay of the winter grazing program in Mississippi, but never tried too much here.

The success of any beef program depends upon a good pasture program, allowing cattle to do as much grazing as possible.

Fescue Needs Fertilizer

Cattlemen will need less hay and silage this winter if straight fescue pastures are fertilized in early September so they can be stock-piled for use this winter.

From 30 to 60 pounds of nitrogen, phosphate, and potash are usually sufficient.

It is advisable not to graze these fertilized fescue pastures until cool weather.

While the fescue is stock-piling, graze clover grass, lespedeza grass, hay fields, and corn and soy bean stubble fields.

Sonny Anthony is establishing alfalfa and is prepared to sow as soon as enough rain comes to allow adequate soil preparation.

A rate of 20 pounds per acre, sown early this fall, will allow plant roots to penetrate deeply to make good growth next spring.

Adequate fertilizer and other maintenance practices make alfalfa an excellent hay crop in this area.

"Cotton" Elder has already cut his alfalfa five times this year and plans two more cuttings.

Information on varieties, seed rates, and fertilization practices is available at the Extension Office.

Confidential Corner

by Henry Murchison
We're Irritated

Everytime we drive into a service station to buy gasoline we become more and more irritated with the federal bureaucracy, the environmentalists, the conservationists, and many other groups.

Last spring we made the mistake of purchasing a new car and disposing of the two that we owned, feeling that one car should serve our needs, and the cost of operation, insurance, etc., might be slightly lower. This hasn't happened. In the first place the federal government has placed requirements on the car manufacturers to reduce pollution to the point that the efficiency of automobile motors is ridiculously poor, so that gasoline mileage has been greatly reduced despite claims to the contrary.

In the second place the new cars must use leadfree gasoline which is several points lower in octane rating than regular gas but costs several cents more per gallon. We wonder about that too.

With the shortage of petroleum products, the poor operating efficiency of motors, etc. there should be no wonder that the consumption of gasoline is climbing, thus forcing us to depend more and more on imported petroleum products and worsening the foreign trade deficit.

The trend to smaller cars was fine except they are not always suitable since they are not as comfortable to drive or ride, are limited in space, etc. Incidentally, this is not in a tirade against just one make of automobile. Just ask any owner of a 1975 or 1976 mid size—not large—automobile no matter what make or model and see just how happy he is with the performance of his car.

Dirty Politics

Another thing that is becoming more and more irritating to us is the attempt by Gov. Ray Blanton and the administration to bring Watergate into the senatorial race.

Gov. Blanton knows full well that Sen. Bill Brock was in no way involved in Watergate and any attempt to insinuate otherwise is strictly dirty politics.

Tony Cooper Found Dead

Anthony Ray Cooper, 18, son of Mrs. Earline Cooper, of 130A Crescent Drive, Ripley, was found dead soon after daybreak Tuesday in front of the Dwight Weaver home on Hurricane Hill Road, south of Ripley.

Sheriff Louis Craig said preliminary autopsy reports indicated a drug over-dose as the cause of death.

He would have been a senior in Ripley High School this year. A distributive education student, he was produce manager for E. W. James & Sons Super Market.

Services were set for 2:30 p.m. Friday in Ripley Funeral Home, with burial in Woodville Cemetery.

He also leaves his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Scallions, of Woodville, and Mrs. Grace Hallbrook, of Chattanooga; his great-grandmother, Mrs. Minnie Ray, of Ripley; a brother, Mark Steven Cooper, of Ripley; four half-brothers, Mike and

Motorcycle Rider Collision Victim

Darryl Floyd McBroom, 15, of Rives, son of Wyman McBroom, of Ripley, and his passenger, Steven Lane Spence, 16, of Rives, were killed about 4:10 p.m. Saturday when their motorcycle and a pick-up truck collided on Crockett Road about five miles south of Union City.

Services for McBroom were held in Union City.

He also leaves his stepfather, Steve Haines, and two brothers, Sammy McBroom and Dean Glissen, all of Rives, and a sister, Mrs. Pat Hart, of Troy.

He was a step-grandson of Lawrence Wood, of Memphis, brother of Mrs. Jocelyn Cox, of Ripley.

Steve Cooper, of Lawrence, Ind.; Gary Cooper, of Hot Springs, Calif.; and Mitchell Cooper, of North Carolina; two sisters, Anita Renee Cooper and Theresa Lynn Cooper, of Ripley; and a half-sister, Glenda Cooper, of Indiana.

School Lunch Cost Is Up 5¢

Rising costs have set school lunch prices for the coming school year at 45¢ for kindergarten through sixth grade students, 50¢ for seventh through twelfth graders, and 75¢ for adults.

Meals cost an average 76¢ last year, and no commodities nor reimbursements are received for adult lunches.

Federal funds provide 13¢ per meal and 12¢ in commodities for school lunches meeting standards of the Department of Agriculture.

TENNESSEE COMMISSIONER OF HIGHWAYS EDDIE SHAW (center) lunched in Ripley last Friday with Mrs. Bernice Crain and Lauderdale County highway commissioners (from left) Francis Thompson, Douglas Collins, and Howell Caldwell before touring some county roads. Shaw was encouraging about improving Volz Road as an industrial access road for Ripley's south industrial park but discouraging about the state's resuming maintenance of old Highway 51 through the county. Federal funds for construction of bridges were also discussed.

BEGINNING HIS TERM AS SHERIFF WEDNESDAY, Sept. 1st, Joe B. O'Steen (right) took the oath of office last Friday from General Sessions Judge and former sheriff Willard Norvell. He named as chief deputy B. V. Hutcherson, Jr., of Central, former Ripley policeman; other deputies are Julius Kimble and James Treadway, of Ripley. Part-time deputies are Dorris Rodgers, of Halls, and Robert Bates and Forrest Brewster, of Henning, all with previous law enforcement experience, Billy Joe Childress, Central contractor, and O. D. Hutcherson, who resides in the Luckett community.

 SAMMY ARNOLD, Registered Ph.

During the past few weeks, we've been talking about modern drugs and their contemporary use. On the other side of the coin, however, we find the uncontrolled, illegal abuse of drugs, and I think we would do well to take a closer look at this very serious problem.
 We'll talk about the various drugs being used under uncontrolled conditions from time to time, and we'll try to be as objective as possible in the facts and figures concerning the abuse of drugs, one of the nation's more serious health problems.

Halls-Made Jigs Lure Anglers' Favorite: Bream

The blue-gill, or bream, is almost certainly the fish caught in greatest numbers by fishermen in Lauderdale County. It is king of the pan-fish and the most popular with fishermen of all the smaller sun-fish.

The bream's admirers range from the cane pole crowd to the fly-casting purist. Add to this the fact that there are literally millions of bream widely spread across the county, and you can easily account for their popularity with Lauderdale County anglers.

In many ways, bream fishing can be as sophisticated and challenging as the pursuit of glamour fish such as trout and bass. Yet, in spite of their abundance and general distribution and the fact that anglers of all ages pursue them, bream are not caught with equal success by all who go after them—far from it.

But there are some serious fishermen who specialize in out-smarting the tricky little fish. By studying a few of their methods, anyone can pick up pointers certain to increase the weight on his stringer.

Over the years, I have met a number of these bream experts. Tom Sain, of Halls, is one of them. He's the vocational office instructor in Halls High School, and local sportsmen will recognize him as the guy who moonlights at making "Sain" custom bream and crappie jigs in his home workshop.

During a typical season's fishing, Tom catches around 3,000 bream, which, assuming a weight of half a pound each, would average out to three-fourths of a ton of bream! To me, this is evidence enough that he does a whole lot of something right.

Two keys words to remember when bream fishing, says Sain, "are little and slow." Use small baits or lures, and fish them very slowly.

"Live bait fishermen usually use crickets, grubs, or small earthworms. I prefer small artificial jigs (1/32-oz. size), because they aren't as messy to handle as the live offerings, they're less expensive to use in the long run, and, fished properly, they can be equally effective."

Tom rates black with a yellow head, solid black, and solid yellow as the best jig colors or choices, in that order.

I fished with Sain a few weeks ago, and he gladly showed me a "secret" in the nique he has worked out to increase his blue-gill take.

He removes a single rubber strand from the skirt of a bass spinner bait, trims it to about one inch long, and then ties the center of it to the hook shank of his bream jig.

This results in two streamers trailing below the hair of the jig, giving it more action and making the bait much more enticing to bream.

Color of the streamer doesn't seem to be too important, although Tom favors white.

By increasing the jig size to 1/16 oz., this same technique will increase your crappie catch, too.

And you don't have to buy an entire spinner bait just so the rubber skirt can be removed. Separate skirts can be purchased for a few cents, and in a variety of colors.

A couple of skirts will spice up several bream jigs.

Other bream pointers: "Good bream fishermen are prospectors," Sain told me. "If you fail to get action at one place, hoist anchor and move on. Concentrate around the edge of weed beds and brush."

"That's where you're likely to find the really big ones. The smaller bream are further back in the weeds, where there is more protection from predators."

Tom also notes that not all days are equally suited to catching bream.

When you're fishing from a boat, a slight breeze will ruffle the water enough to hide the boat.

But on days when the water is choppy, fishing may be slow. Spring, summer, and fall are all good, if water temperatures reach high enough levels.

Bream specialists often fare better in early morning and late evening, since these are choice times for the fish to feed.

In fall, however, when the air is soft and golden leaves drift on the water surface, the middle of the day may prove best of all.

Sain's favorite local bream spots? Just raising the subject brings forth a beaming smile.

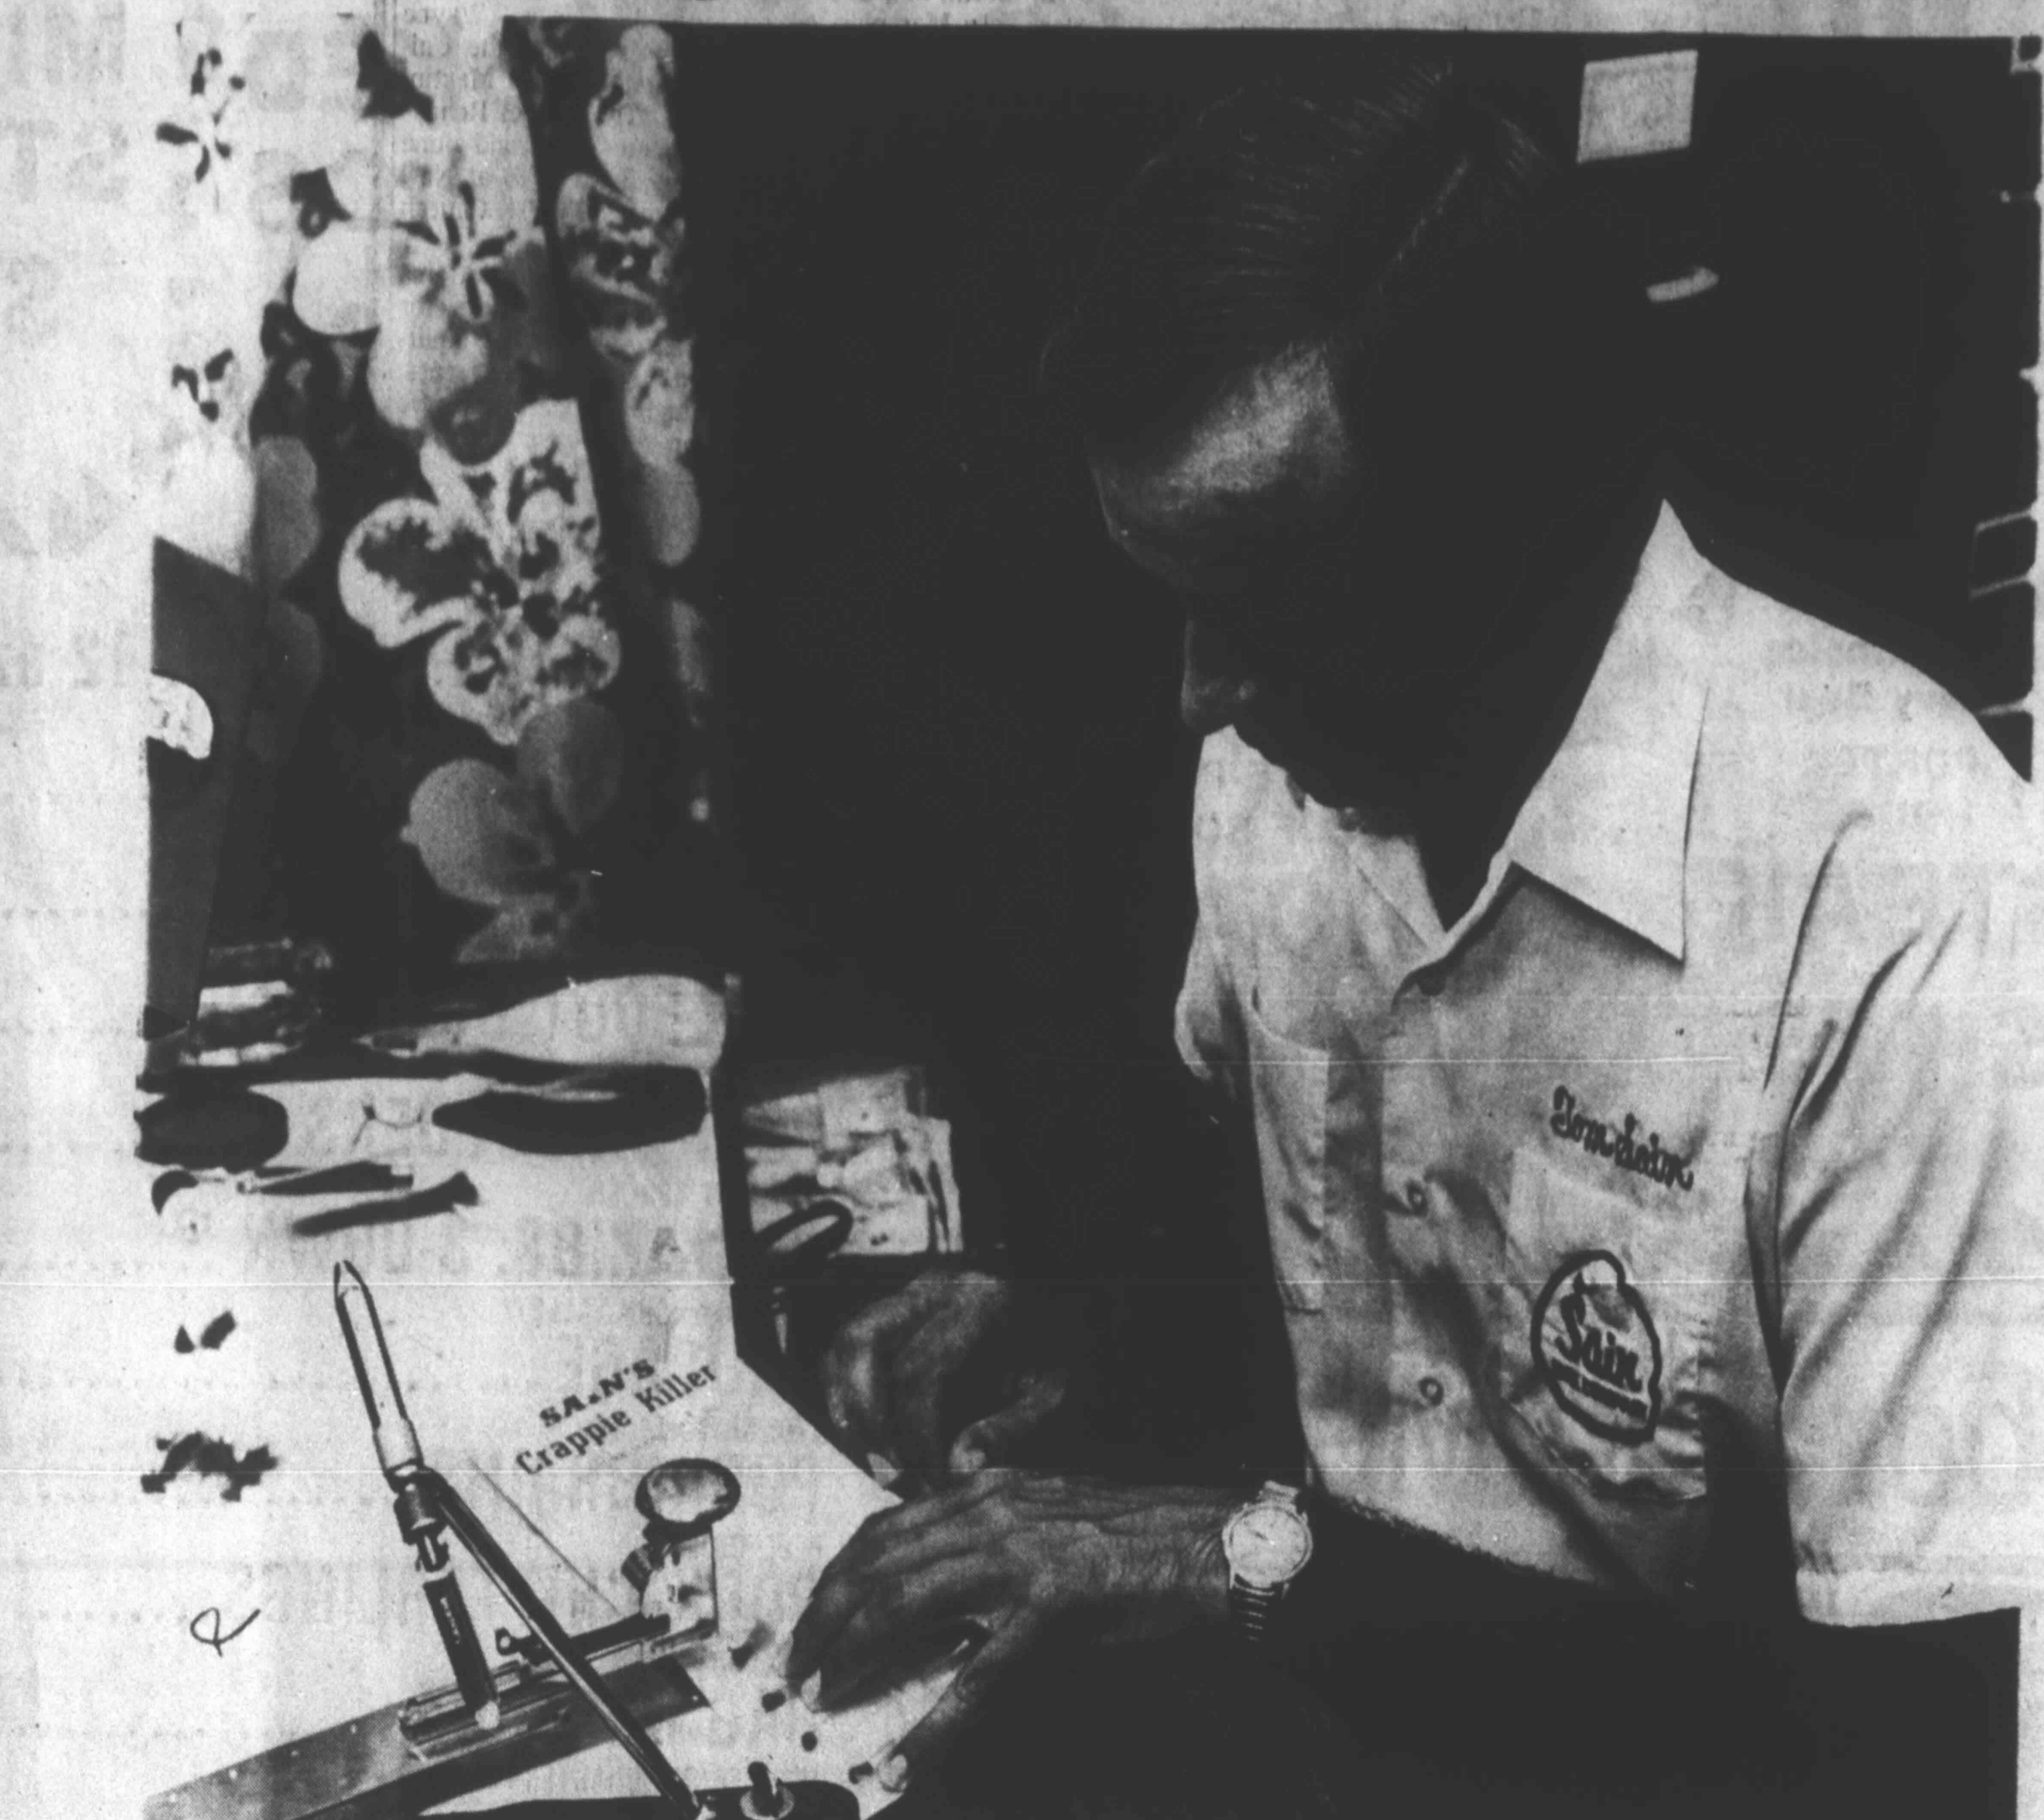

But Sain confides that Open Lake is his top choice for big bream.

And he favors Old River, running into Chisholm Lake, for numbers of fish.

Sain's custom jigs are among the best found anywhere for bream or crappie, and they're available at many local sporting goods counters.

TO THE CITIZENS OF LAUDERDALE COUNTY

Sincere appreciation is extended to each of you for having given me the opportunity to serve you in the capacity of sheriff of this county for the past two years.

The services of the sheriff's department were performed to the best of my ability, and it was a pleasure for the department to have helped or to have been of assistance to any citizen of this county whenever needed.

I look forward to the continued friendship of the many good citizens of this county and am especially grateful to those of you who supported me in the election.

My assistance is available to the new sheriff, and I wish him much success.

THANK YOU LOUIS CRAIG

TO THE RESIDENTS OF LAUDERDALE COUNTY, TENNESSEE

Following my announcement last week, I respectfully solicit your vote for Delegate to the Constitutional Convention to be held in Nashville, Tennessee, beginning August 1, 1977. This Convention will make proposals for changes in our Tennessee Constitution.

The more important proposed changes to be considered at the Convention are:

- (1) Permit the Governor to run for re-election and serve eight years instead of only four.
- (2) Increase the term of the Sheriff from two years to four years.
- (3) Require the Legislature to set the maximum interest rate and remove it from the Constitution. The reason for this suggested change is that the Legislature meets every year and can more properly adjust the interest rate to meet existing financial conditions than a Constitutional Convention which can only meet every six years.
- (4) Revise the Judicial Department of Tennessee. I am particularly interested in this last proposal. Our present system was set up over 100 years ago, immediately following the Civil War. It is inadequate for modern times. Just think how many thousands of man-hours and dollars could be saved by using 6-member juries instead of 12-member juries. There are many other changes which are sorely needed.

No change will be valid until and unless approved by the voters of Tennessee.

Permit me this brief biographical sketch:

A native of Ripley, I practiced law in Ripley from 1933 to 1953, with the exception of two years as an enlisted man in World War II. Since 1953, I have been a member of the Tennessee Court of Appeals—Presiding Judge since 1970. If elected, I will resign from the Court before the Convention meets and re-open my law office in Ripley.

I will discuss the proposed changes in detail as the campaign progresses. Your comments and questions will be welcome.

Hot weather can cause your bill to go up, too. Because you use more kilowatt-hours to stay comfortable.

Your air conditioner has to work longer to keep you cool. And with your family active, you're using more hot water — for clothes washing and for bathing.

So when you get your electric bill after a hot spell, remember — If you use more kilowatt-hours, your bill goes up. It's that simple. Stop by our office for free publications that will help you avoid wasting power.

U.S. SENATOR BILL BROCK WASHINGTON OUTLOOK

Tennessee Senator Bill Brock said today that the Senate Finance Committee has taken a major and much needed step in preserving what Brock termed "the most effective Federal program to be developed in this century." The Finance Committee, of which Brock is a member, has agreed to extend the General Revenue Sharing program for 5 and 3/4 years. The measure would return over half a billion dollars to local governments in Tennessee.

"It has been a long battle," Brock said, "but we've won a tremendous victory. Our local governments now have a fighting chance for continued funding in the years to come with no increasing taxes or cutting off public services."

Brock, who was the sponsor of S.11, the most far-reaching Revenue Sharing proposal, said that the Committee did not approve everything he wanted, but the bulk of his measure was incorporated into the measure.

"We added 6 years to the life of Revenue Sharing 400 million dollars to its base amount, eliminated the House proposed categories, and allowed use of Revenue Sharing dollars for local government projects."

"A 5 and 3/4 years extension is much better for the local government's planning purposes than the 3 and 1/2 year extension approved by the Senate," Brock said. "I had hoped that we would be able to make the Revenue Sharing concept permanent, but we'll have to keep working on that."

Brock said he foresees no problems for the Finance Committee version passing the Senate, but stated he was unsure of what would happen in the Senate-House Conference Committee.

MARIJUANA
Marijuana originates in the flowers and leaves of certain varieties of the hemp plant and at this writing is illegal to possess, transfer, or sell.

While it is not classified legally as a narcotic—it's not a drug causing physical dependence—it can and does cause psychological dependence and in many cases this can be as compelling as physical addiction.

It's been estimated that over 90% of all "Dyed in the wool" drug addicts began by smoking marijuana and medical authorities tell us too that 1 out of 10 marijuana smokers will graduate to the use of hard narcotics.

"Funerals Relatively Inexpensive"
(Cost of Dying)

When the FTC says that the purchase of a funeral is the third most costly item a person will purchase in their lifetime, ranking behind the purchase of a house and automobile, a little analysis will prove this is false.

It may be interesting to compare a $1,200 to $2,000 cost of a funeral—once in a lifetime expenditure—with the few other lifetime expenditures.

The smoker who smokes one package of cigarettes a day for 55 years, paying 55 cents a pack for them, will spend $11,041.25.

The woman who goes to the beauty shop once a week for 55 years and spends $5 each time will spend $14,300.

The man who goes to the barber every two weeks for 55 years and pays $2 for his haircuts, spends $2,860.

If you drink one coke a day for 55 years and pay 20 cents for it, you will spend $4,015.

Of course these expenditures are made a little at a time. Funerals can be paid for the same way through insurance. Millions of people are doing this. Everybody agrees funerals are higher than they used to be. But what isn't? Have you paid for a wedding lately? According to some of my friends who have, it costs nearly twice as much as a $2,000 funeral.

NOEL SHERROD

The Finance Committee, in its version of the measure, accepted the $6.9 billion base figure that Senator Brock had proposed during Committee hearings last spring, $400 million more than the House figure.

"This increase will allow the Revenue Sharing program to keep up with inflation which is vitally important to local governments," Brock said.

Through June of this year, Tennessee's state and local governments have received approximately 506 million dollars out of the program. Over $338 million of that went directly to local governments.

"Revenue Sharing has worked because it puts money where it can do the most good, in the hands of local officials who know the problems of their areas best," Brock said. "I had hoped that we would be able to make the Revenue Sharing concept permanent, but we'll have to keep working on that."

Brock said he foresees no problems for the Finance Committee version passing the Senate, but stated he was unsure of what would happen in the Senate-House Conference Committee.

Hunters' Cash Aids Wild Life
By Tony Mack

Gun control advocates and anti-hunting propagandists are making headway largely because U.S. hunters aren't preaching so simple truths.

Hunters in America provide roughly $100,000,000 each year, through licenses, to support wild life management programs (both game and non-game species). Tennessee hunters spend about $3,500,000 each year to support wild life species. In addition, hunters pour nearly a billion dollars into the national economy (for food, travel, lodging, etc.) in pursuit of the sport that is, more than any other, a basic symbol of the American heritage.

What does the opposition spend? Harvey Bray, director of the Tennessee Wild Life Resources Agency, puts it this way:

"The complainers open only their mouths and not their pockets. Here are the complainers when Ducks Unlimited conducts a rally to raise funds for wild habitat for waterfowl? Where are they when Landry government agencies channel rivers, drain wetlands or marshall vital wild life? We can assure you that hunters' dollars are being spent by the millions to fight the above problems. How much is the complainer spending?"

The International Association of Game, Fish, and Conservation Commissioners says that "hunting is not only a major form of recreation, but an absolute necessity for the proper management and future well-being of many wild life populations."

Wild life experts—the best available—agree that if big game hunting were prohibited, deer herds would double in two years, over most of their range. Good as it sounds, soon after the population boom, deer food would be damaged or destroyed, followed by malnutrition and starvation of the deer herds. Ultimately, the deer population would stabilize at a much lower level than what it is now.

The experts say that stopping small game hunting would have little or no noticeable effect, simply because about 70% of all small game is lost each year to normal causes, even where not a single hunter's shot is ever fired. Why then shouldn't we benefit from the resource?

True hunting is not an aberration, but an integral part of evolved mankind. It is culturally and genetically based, emotionally fulfilling to many human beings, and the game food it provides has long been an important consideration.

Thus the anti-hunting factions simply ignore the fact that sport hunting is an ecological necessity. And if they were truly concerned with the welfare of all animals, it would at least seem logical that all of them would be strict vegetarians. They aren't.

As Dr. Raymond Dasmann, noted wild life expert, put it, "Those who would protect all animals from hunters, but leave them to starve on a depleted habitat, have some strange kink in their humanitarianism. Those who would eat meat, but oppose all killing of animals, live at best in a peculiarly sheltered world."

As a serious sportsman, I know the time for tolerating this anti-hunting abuse is long past. We simply cannot do with another smack in the face. While we still outnumber our adversaries, we had better realize this fact and get down to business.

What can we do? Like the anti-hunter advocates, we must write letters to our legislators every single time a threat to hunting or gun ownership comes up.

We must fortify organized sportsmen's groups—the National Rifle Association, especially. Are you a member? Why not? The price to starve on a shotgun shells can do much to insure your hunting privileges in the future.

Every sportsman must do his part to eliminate the outdoor slobs and their undesirable, illegal practices which reflect upon all of us. Do you have a "friend" who shoots deer at night or out of season? How about the neighbor who telephones catfish in the Mississippi River and brags about it? Why do you tolerate that? You may not meet these fellows share your ethics, but you can let them know you find their behavior offensive. They are robbing you of your sport, just as surely as any anti-hunter.

We can make an all-out effort to educate people to believe in hunting. Be quick to point out those figures which show that we, the hunters and fishermen, are the ones who foot the bills for the management and protection of wild life, and that we base our beliefs on sound ecological facts, not a naive belief in letting Mother Nature maintain the balance—a management practice that simply will not work.

How much do hunters actually contribute, and how significant is their share? Where exactly does the money come from, and where does it go? Here are the answers to those questions.

Some 16,600,000 hunters paid $164,900,000 for state hunting licenses during 1975. Revenue from the sale of hunting licenses contributed more than three billion dollars over the past 50 years. Clearly, then, the American sportsman has been the major contributor to wild life restoration programs, providing suitable habitat not just for game species but for the many species that are never hunted.

Hunters must realize that the anti-hunting and gun control proponents are largely working toward the same end. To be sure, there are some sincere, honest, law-abiding Americans who really believe that outlawing guns will reduce crime in our society. Point out, again, and again, that guns do not commit crime—people do. Outlawing the Saturday night specials (cheap hand guns) or any firearms for that matter, would just provide another law for criminals to violate. It is against the law to steal, rob, murder, and rape, but does that stop the criminal? Of course not.

Then there's the feeble argument that outlawing firearms will reduce or miraculously eliminate "impulse killings." These are the violent crimes in which one friend shoots another during a petty argument, or in which, in a moment of insane anger, a husband kills his wife. It is illogical to assume that if no firearms were available, people would kill each other with rocks, hammers, knives, wrenches, etc.? For all practical purposes, it doesn't matter whether a person is killed with a gun or any other device. The results are the same.

Unfortunately, there will be killings as long as there are people on earth; no gun law can prevent them. Julius Caesar lived in a period when there were no guns, but according to recorded history, that didn't stop Brutus from murdering him.

Finally, we must band together, both on a local and national scale, for united, grass-roots action, determined, political action is our only hope. It is rapidly becoming a popular demand elected officials to assume a parental role toward their constituents. More and more, we are allowing them to tell us what we "need" and what we "don't need." Guns are at the top of the list right now. When the people of the United States begin to depend solely on politicians to tell us what we "need" then we have sold our freedom and independence for a very small price indeed. But we will stick together, vote together, and take action, instead of sitting on our hands and waiting for the inevitable to happen; we can rid ourselves of every anti-gun or anti-hunting politician in government.

Will this be the year of decision for hunters and gun owners?

To the fine people of the 7th district.

My family and I want to thank you for your kindness and the many courtesies shown us during our race for United States Congress. I'm proud of the type campaign we ran, but most of all I'm proud of the people who were involved in our campaign. I very much appreciate the support of those who voted for me. At the same time, I respect the decision of those who did not see fit to vote for me. I look forward to seeing you again in the future. Sincerely, Ross

...DISTRICT OF TENNESSEE

For the first time since January, the Congress voted last month to override a Presidential veto. This time the vote was on the Public Works Employment Act. This bill, known as the Jobs Bill, authorizes a total of $3.95 billion through fiscal year 1977. It sets aside $2 billion for state and local public works projects, $1.25 billion for grants to help state and local governments maintain services and $700 million for water treatment programs. The bill should provide some relief for problems almost untouched by general economic improvement. This bill has been the centerpiece of the proposed Democratic economic recovery since early 1975.

ment Administration of the Department of Commerce within 30 days after enactment of the bill. That means that guidelines will be ready by August 23rd. On all projects, assurances must be given to the Secretary of Commerce by the applicant that onsite labor can begin within 90 days of project approval. At this time, it is estimated that an appropriations bill will be reported out of committee and should reach the House floor soon thereafter, and funds should be made available to Executive agencies by the end of August or early September. I feel that it would be wise for any local government which plans to submit a proposal under this program to get its groundwork done as soon as possible. I also feel that smaller projects will have a better chance of being approved than larger, more expensive ones. This legislation is certainly no cure-all for our Nation's economic ills, but I feel that it will surely give us a temporary boost.

According to the House Public Works Committee, the bill authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to make 100 grants to states and local governments for the construction, renovation, repair or other improvement of public works projects. It included grants for projects for which federal financial assistance is authorized by other acts. Grants may be made for the completion of plans, specifications, and estimates where either architectural design or preliminary engineering or related planning has already been undertaken and where additional work is required to permit construction.

Halls Plants Host Public

Halls is one of many Tennessee cities saluting its industries in the state's first annual Industry Recognition Week next week.

Open house will be held at Hancock, Inc.'s office and storage facilities Monday; in the Upperware office building and at Allen-Stone Boxes, Inc. Tuesday; at Halls Clothing Co. and Custom Craft Manufacturing Wednesday.

A banquet to which officials of all county industries have been invited will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Halls High School cafeteria.

Tickets are for sale to the public at Arnold Drug Store or at City Hall, or from Paul Jordan, Police Chief Buddy Moore, or Noel Sherrod.

Encephalitis Strikes Here

Parnell Roark, county public health officer, says the county has one confirmed case of encephalitis and that lab reports are being awaited on three other suspected cases, well scattered on the county's east side from Ripley to Halls.

Ripley and Halls are increasing measures to control the culex mosquitoes which spread the dread disease.

Residents should eliminate water collections where the mosquitoes breed, use oil on shallow waters, screen homes adequately, spray malathion, as directed, on porches and out-buildings, and use insect repellents when outdoors in late evening.

Top Award For Aitken

Staff Sgt. Joe C. Aitken, son of the Ely Aitken, of Route 6, Ripley, has earned the highest possible rating in electronics maintenance given by the Strategic Air Command.

An aircraft maintenance technician at Fairchild Air Force Base, Wash., he won the Master Technician Award for exceptionally fine performance in repair of aircraft and missile systems.

He was graduated from Ripley High School in 1967.

Curve Boy Scout Troop Forming

Curve will re-organize its Boy Scout troop at 3 p.m. Sunday in Curve Methodist Church.

Boys 11-18 are invited, with their parents.

Elected last spring in school-wide balloting, their duties began this summer as plans were made for a difficult school year. R.H.S., scarred by arson, had to delay its first full day of classes until Sept. 10th, and students and faculty are again going beyond the call of duty in operating a school for more than 1,200 students without a completely available building.

Representatives from 44 home rooms will be elected this fall to join twelve senators chosen last spring, three faculty advisors, and the principal in the Student Council Association.

Activities include preparation of identification cards during four days of registration; preparation of a handbook for freshmen; assemblies; pep rallies; homecoming week; and other events.

Funds from a Spirit Chain contest and the identification cards finance activities and provide the school with needed items.

WHAT WAS IT?—At its lowest level in 20 years, the Mississippi River is revealing many objects long beneath its surface—such as this boiler or tank, of unknown origin, visible about a quarter mile south of Fulton Landing.

Revival At Fulton

The Rev. Bob Lynn, new pastor of Fulton Baptist Church, will lead revival services at 7:30 p.m. this Friday and Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday with special music each service. The public is invited to attend.

ISRAEL INVASION FILM

"The Coming Invasion Of Israel," a film based on Ezekiel 38-39, will be shown at 8 p.m. Sunday in Fellowship Baptist Church at 197 Drake in Ripley. The Rev. Hollis W. Adams, pastor, invites the public to attend.

State Wins Rent Fuss With Court

County Court, which during its budget pains had vowed eviction of the Tennessee Department of Human Services unless it paid more rent, bowed Monday to federal regulations of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and renewed the lease for another year at $1,000.

Responsibility for contents in case of fire was fixed upon the state.

The regulations were cited by Michael Barrett, of Nashville, state property management specialist.

He said the department expends about two million dollars a year in the county. The Ripley office employs 27.

The court accepted the resignation for health reasons of Paul Prichard, from the 16th and 17th Districts. Thursday noon was the deadline for candidates to qualify for the Nov. 2nd ballot to elect his successor, as advertised prior to Prichard's formal resignation.

Squires appropriated $1,280.32 to Lau-Fay-Ton Community Action Agency as one third of the cost of operating a bus and referral system for senior citizens.

The court approved a request from new sheriff Joe B. O'Steen for $4,000 to provide 16 double-bunk beds, with mattresses, pillows, and blankets, for the jail; renovation of a basement room as a juvenile cell, and new uniforms for his department.

His request for another car and an assistant was referred to committees for study.

He cited Ripley's police force of 17 officers with four cars in comparison to his three deputies and three cars which will cover the county.

Judge Jerry Corlew said the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration, and Soil Conservation Service had committed themselves to use space in a multi-purpose county office building for which an application is being submitted under a new federal "make-jobs" public works program.

The proposal would include renovation of the southside of an addition to the jail. One magistrate suggested a new jail.

Farmel Webb, Board of Education member, told the court the board was dissatisfied with the plan for Magistrate Lawson Chipman to keep an eye on Halls school construction and wished to examine others qualified for the post.

Chipman said he would be "tickled to death to get out of it" as he was "only trying to help the county."

This is getting to be a political area, and it's becoming impossible for anyone to build the schools," he said.

After extended debate, the court asked the board and the county's building committee to work further on the problem.

Notaries public elected were Phyllis Franks, Tony Harrison, Jacqueline C. Poston, M. S. Rice, Jean Sanford, and Robert E. Ward, Jr.

Justice Corlew said he would recommend members for a revision county Planning Commission in the October session.

Class A polls this week by the wire services.

Dyer County defeated Halls in regular season play last year and again in the Class A play-off for the only Tiger losses of the 1975 season.

Halls easily defeated Dresden there last Friday, 46-13, as Dwayne McKinney upped his scoring total by 12 points to 70 for the season and added 151 yards in ten carries for total season's yardage of 697 yards.

Willie Robinson scored twice. Kenny Wells posted one tally. Guy Hansford took a scoring pass from Ray McBroon, and Jimmy Meeks added one TD.

Halls-Choctaw Impact Fateful

The Halls Tigers will host the Dyer County Choctaws, of Newbern, at 7:30 p.m. this Friday in a game which will do much to determine the Redfoot Conference championship.

Both teams are undefeated. The Tigers hold a 3-0 record. Dyer County is 2-0.

Dyer County was rated fourth in the state, and Halls sixth, in

MRS. RICHARD LAZURE had a tear in her eye as she looked at the dedication plaque for Nankipoo School as it closed its doors last Friday, victim of declining enrollment—down to three teachers for 31 students in six grades. Mrs. Lazure had taught at the school since 1950. In addition to teaching the third through fifth grades, she served as principal.

FOUR CLASSROOM BUILDING erected in 1950 may be used by the county Rescue Squad, now housed in the City of Ripley's former garage building on Randolph St., across from the water treatment plant, if the Board of Education approves. The first school in the area was the old Mitchell School, a mile west of present-day Nankipoo. In 1912, a masonry building was erected, under the leadership of Mrs. E. M. Browning, to house twelve grades; this building was destroyed by fire in 1918. A building owned by Jack Hutcherson was used until a new school was completed in 1920. The grade school building was destroyed by fire in 1947, and Mrs. Browning conducted classes in her home until the present structure was erected. Nankipoo students will now attend school in Halls, or they may go to Curve or Central Schools if one of their bus routes,

Nine-Day Teal Season Opens

By Tony Mack

Early-bird duck hunters will have an opportunity to test their wing shooting skills this weekend, with a special 9-day teal hunting season opening Saturday, Sept. 18th, extending through Sunday, Sept. 26th.

According to the book, teal are small ducks which average about 14 ounces and have the habit of migrating from the north well ahead of most other ducks. According to hunters, they're one of the world's fastest ducks, especially on a tail-wind, and possibly the finest eating of any waterfowl.

Being plentiful, delectable, and tough targets, teal should be among Tennessee's hardest-hunted ducks. But they're not.

Matters of fact, most hunters hardly know teal exist, and a survey of local waterfowlers would doubtless show that fewer than ten per cent hunt teal seriously. Most who've bagged these birds took them by accident in conjunction with other types of duck hunting.

Last season, Phillip Smith, of Lightfoot, hunted hard, took a limit on almost every trip, and seldom saw more than two or three other hunters.

That's exceptional in a county where it's difficult to find a spot in the marshes, come opening day of the regular duck season.

I've talked to a few hunters who've bestirred themselves to try some teal shooting, and the almost invariable result is, "It's a waste of time—we never saw a duck."

There's an answer to that one. You don't hunt teal from duck blinds in large lakes and reservoirs, because they're small water ducks. And many times, that means small.

For example, on opening day a couple of years ago, I was on a small lake in the county that had a good stand of cat-tails at one end, with plenty of aquatic weeds and shallow water nearby.

There must have been 200 or 300 birds within easy range. Many were local mallards and woodies, but there was a good scattering of teal.

I homed in on one flock of about 30 birds, dropped two on the lake-off, hastily re-loaded, and dropped two more birds as the flock circled. A limit in 30 seconds flat!

Two days of shooting chased all teal off that lake, but through succeeding days of that season, my hunting companions and I learned other ways of finding these secretive birds.

Farm ponds were ideal spots for teal. Almost all had the submerged weeds that teal love so dearly, shallow water, and plenty of flats for resting and preening their feathers.

We checked all kinds of ponds, but best success was on small cat-tail laden types that were so full of submerged growth that they scarcely held fish.

We learned never to pass up even the most unlikely farm pond. So long as they were well away from human habitation, the odds were good for finding a teal or two.

General habits of teal are quickly discussed. They are light on both brain-power and wartsiness, maybe because their flashing speed makes wartsiness unnecessary in the wild, but this lack of caution can be turned to advantage more than once over the season.

One season, in the Mississippi River bottom, I spotted a flock of twelve on a tiny drainage ditch well overhung with weeds and had no trouble crawling to within 20 yards.

As I stood up the birds flushed, and I bagged a fine drake blue-wing.

Then I hit the ground, and the flock flared back over, less than 30 yards high—apparently to see what was causing the noise. I bagged two more. They'll circle almost every time, sometimes twice if the hunter stays hidden.

Decoys Draw 'Em In They decoy easily, too, though decoys are seldom used on these well-scattered birds.

When a spot is found which several flocks are using regularly, ordinary decoys of the mallard, black, and pin-tail varieties will pull them in with hardly a circle for a preliminary look-see.

And they'll circle repeatedly, once shot up, and even try to decoy in again. One word of warning: like all ducks, they're easy to hit on the rife or dropping in—just aim for the back or the tip of the tail, respectively.

But passing shots are something else again. On more than one occasion, I've hunted these birds on a stormy September day when high winds were bending the cat-tails, swang on the lead bird of a crossing flock, and brought one down from the middle.

When teal are steaming along with the stops out, best lead at least two feet, and if one doesn't fall, increase that lead to three feet. They're fast! An afternoon of pre-season scouting, as in all hunting sports, pays off for teal hunters.

For some reason, birds may concentrate on one pond and completely pass up another, so a trip today may pay off handsomely tomorrow morning.

Most of the small lakes and river bottom potholes in this county are hot-spots for teal. The daily bag limit is four, and blue-wing, green-wing, and cinnamon are legal.

Hunters are reminded that a federal migratory duck stamp is required in addition to the regular hunting permit, and legal shooting hours are from one hour after sunrise to one hour before sunset.

Allen-Stone Sells Packaging

Before almost any product can be shipped and marketed it must be packaged. That's where the Allen-Stone Box Co. comes in. The company produces a variety of corrugated paper, shipping materials, boxes to fit articles as small as an ashtray or as large as a sofa.

The company started in Halls in 1967 with only 20 employees, two trucks, and 1,700 square feet of floor space in its plant. Less than a decade later, it employs about 60 persons, owns six trucks, and occupies about 60,000 square feet of production space. Its employees produce around 7,000,000 square feet of packaging each month for industries within a 200 mile radius of Halls. It supplies shipping packages to such companies as Tupperware, Custom Lighting Division, Furniture, Moran Manufacturing Company, and many more.

Allen-Stone buys paperboard in flat sheets and then proceeds to fold, cut, print and slot the sheets into the dimensions desired by the customer. The company relies on its corrugator operation, located in Guthrie, Ky., to provide the special heavy paperboard used in corrugated boxes.

Explaining why the company chose Halls as its headquarters, owner R. C. Allen said, "Halls is centrally located within the market we could develop. It had an adequate labor supply and a good plant site. We were able to employ all our workers from this immediate area."

—Mayor's Message—

On behalf of our Town, I would like to say how much we appreciate the industries in our community. We take pride in the fact that they had enough confidence in our people and our Town to locate here. In talking to the management of all our industries, I know this confidence has been strengthened by their success here in Halls.

Halls takes great pride in our farming industry, which was the base of our economy for many years and is still a great contributor to it. But as farming became more and more mechanized, our whole county began to decline in population as our young people had to leave our community to find jobs.

We are proud that this trend has been reversed, and we now have many young families in our community. There is no longer any fear that we might lose one of our high schools in the county, and our economy is stronger than ever.

We feel that these changes are due to our fine industries. We want to recognize them not only for this, but also because their management has taken a real personal interest in our community and is willing to do its share to make it a better place in which to live.

Sewing Machine Cabinets Are Made By Custom Craft

There's a good chance that your sewing machine's cabinet was manufactured in Halls by Custom Craft, the company that claims the distinction of being the world's largest independent sewing machine cabinet manufacturer.

Custom Craft manufactures cabinets for the various lines of sewing machines that are marketed by Elna, Necchi, Brother, Singer, New Home, Bernina, and several other companies. Even Singer and Singer occasionally contract with Custom Craft for cabinet cases which sell on the retail market for anywhere from $49.95 to $399.95.

Custom Craft was founded in 1946 by a Halls family and became a division of U.S. Industries in 1969. It is the only factory in that company that manufactures sewing machine cabinets. The original corporation began operations by building beds and other bedroom furniture, but it switched to sewing machine cabinets in 1950. Employees now build about 200,000 cabinets each year in the 175,000 square foot plant.

Plant officials explained that the cabinets are a seasonal item, with peak sales occurring between September and January. During the rest of the year, the factory stocks up for the demand it expects during its peak season and supplements the plant with the construction and sale of school library furniture. The plant's peak sales period occurs during the summer, helping to offset the slow period in cabinet sales. The factory employs between 140 and 240 employees and has an annual payroll of about $350,000.

Custom Craft markets its products nation-wide and distributes the wood creations with its fleet of four trucks.

A recent fire resulted in major damage to the Custom Craft building in its finishing area. The plant was closed for three weeks for repairs but is now back in production.

Halls Offers Much To Industry

When a town of under 2,500 persons can attract enough industries inside the city limits to provide jobs for 1,300 persons, the city must have a lot to offer.

According to industry leaders, Halls offers an excellent location, willing workers, good industrial sites, appropriate utilities, and an attitude of co-operation that has proven beneficial to industry and city alike.

From the big Tupperware plant, employing 800 persons, to the mostly mechanized manufacturer, Hancor, which employs ten Halls area residents, officials noted the spirit with which city leaders have welcomed and encouraged industries to locate and to stay in Halls.

And the feeling is mutual. The city administrators and community residents alike recognize the benefits that industries have brought to Halls. Aiding the local economy, broadening the tax base, providing special facilities to the community, and much, much more, local industries have made a big contribution to Halls.

Halls is located in Lauderdale County, near the Dyer County line, and only 13 miles from Ripley.

the county seat. More than 69,000 people live within a 25-mile radius of Halls, an easy commuting distance in West Tennessee. A system of good highways and streets helps this traffic flow easily.

The location of industries in Halls has helped to diversify the economies of the city and Lauderdale County. County income from agriculture, including livestock and livestock products, exceeds $15,000,000 annually. Industries supplement the incomes of the community residents by another $5,000,000 every year.

Electricity, fuel, and water are readily available to industries, and truck and rail transportation facilities already serve the county. Airports in Dyersburg and Covington provide adequate air service, and additional air and water transportation is available in Memphis.

The Town of Halls owns 180 acres north of the city which are zoned for industrial use.

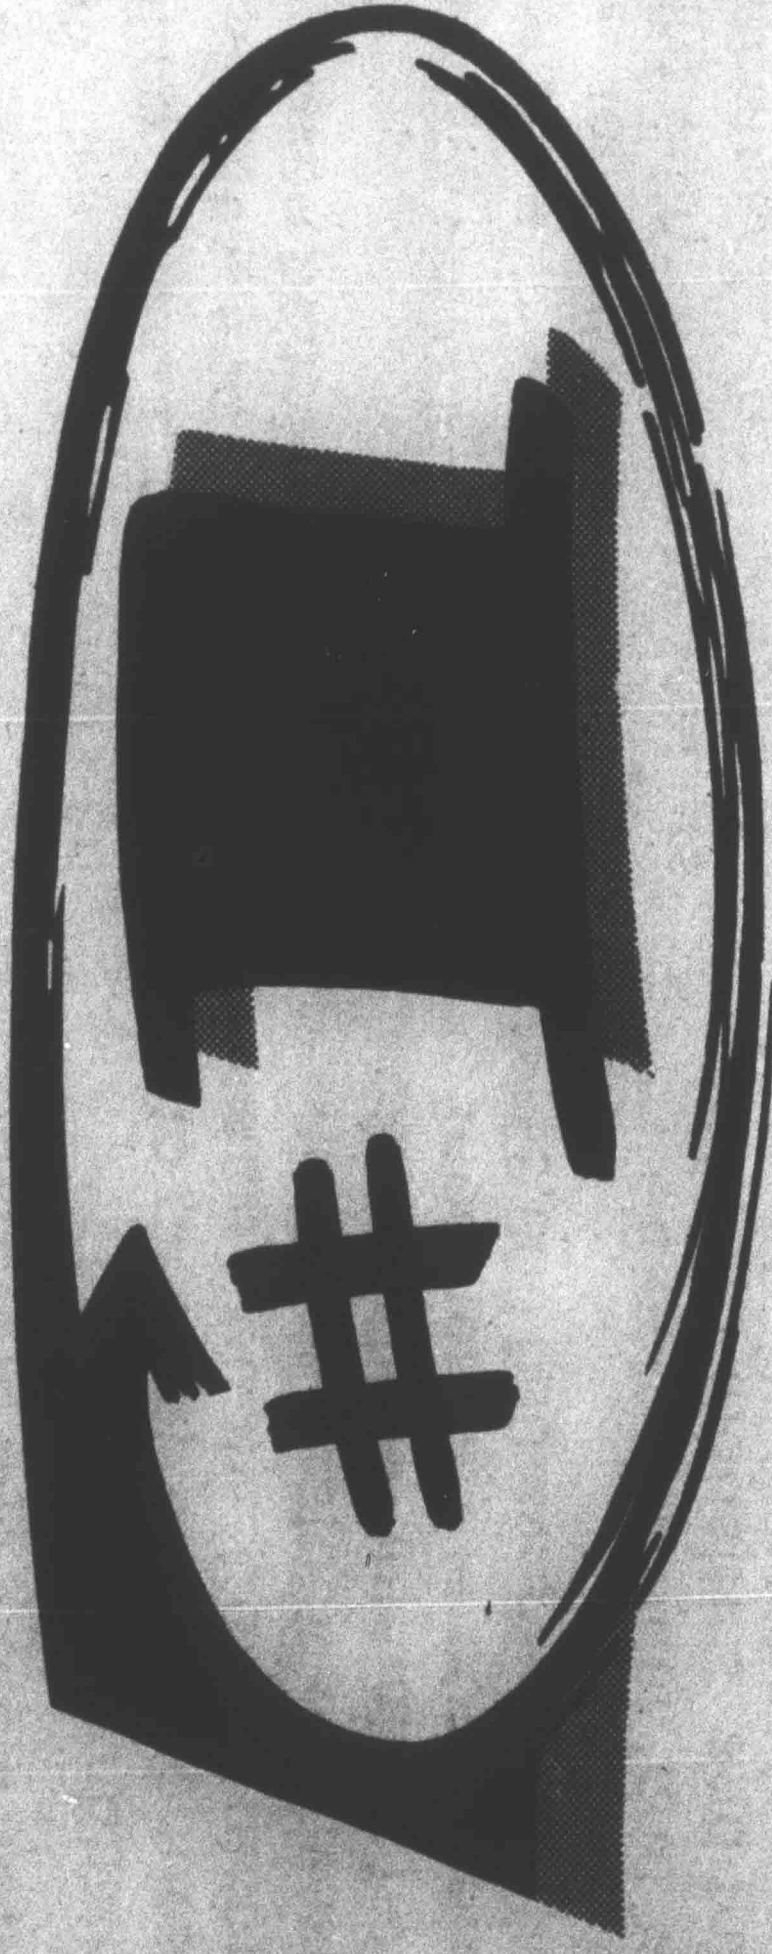

Officials are keenly aware of their responsibility in attracting new industry in order to diversify the general economic climate of the city and the surrounding community.

Hancor — Nation's Biggest And Halls' Smallest Plant

The smallest industry in Halls is the largest company of its kind in the nation. Hancor, which employs ten persons from the Halls family, produces, markets, and distributes plastic tubing for use in sewage, pipes, septic system field lines, and agricultural drainage systems.

Much of the company's production is mechanized, allowing it to employ one person in the plant where the plastic lines are actually fabricated. The rest of the plant's employees are office workers.

Plant manager F. D. Noblin explained that there is little seasonal fluctuation in the work the plant does. Only the availability in the supplier of natural gas from which the company's products are manufactured significantly affects the plant's output.

"A lot of people think we make tires here," Noblin said, scanning the plant's storage lot. "That's because they only see these wrap-up pipes. But Hancor is actually the largest manufacturer of the best plastic tubing in the nation. And we must be the best, or we wouldn't have the largest share of the market," he added.

Hancor located in Halls in July, 1972. Its home office in Findlay, Ohio, selected Halls because of its location, the availability of a good plant building, and easy market accessibility. From the Halls plant, plastic products are shipped to Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, and Oklahoma.

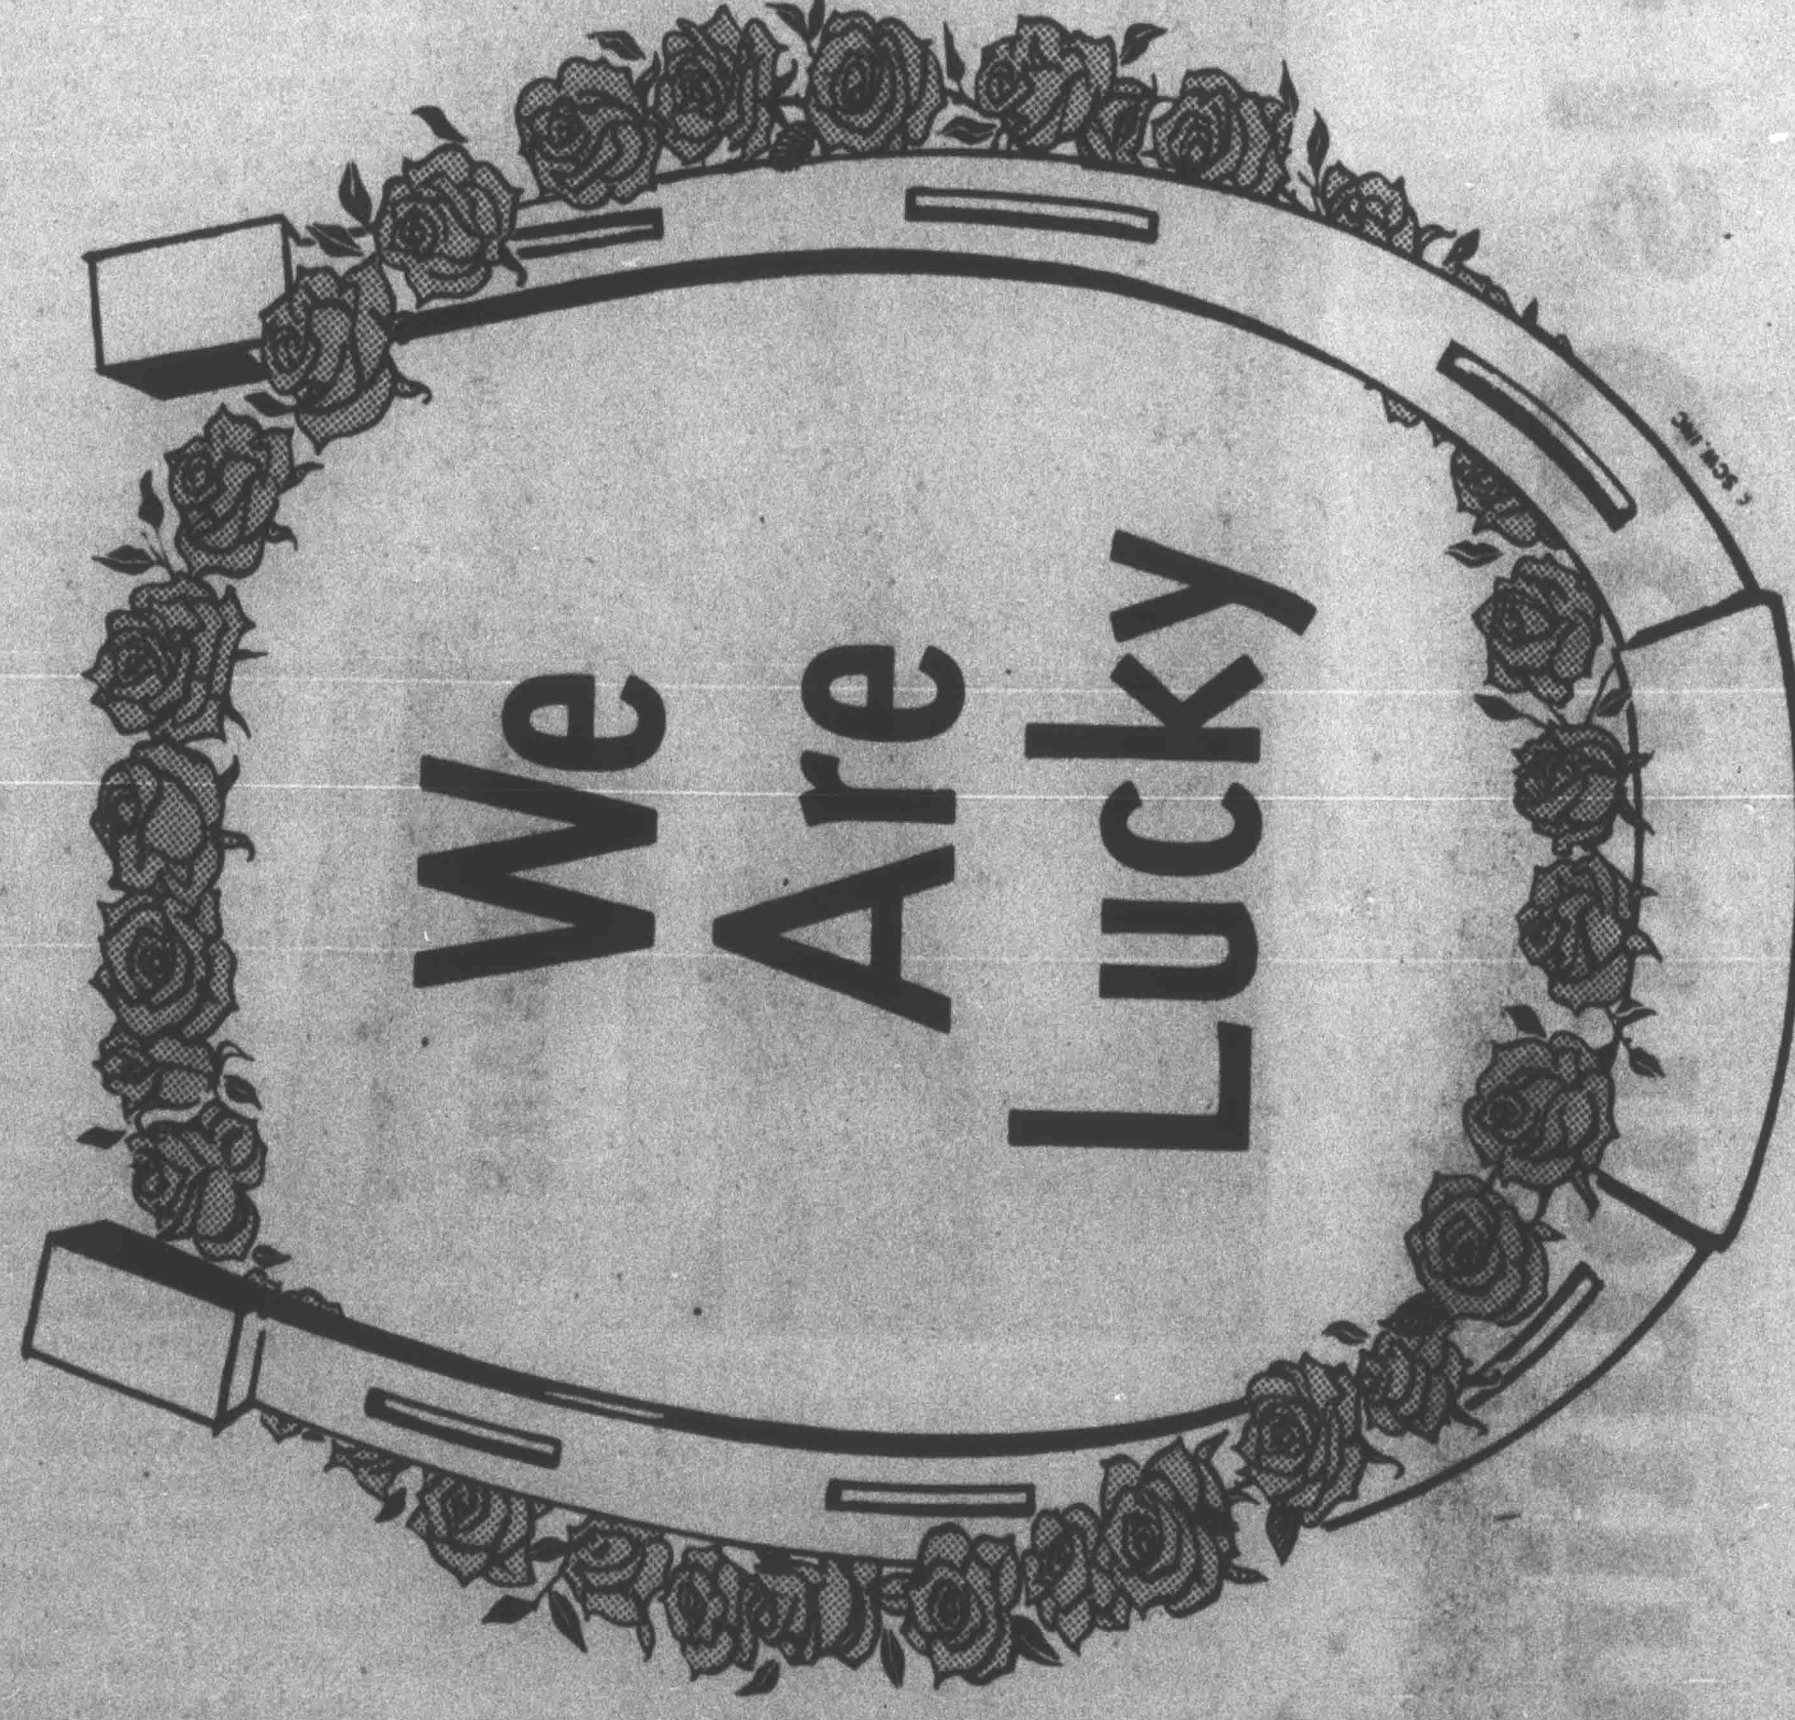

Hancor plants similar to the Halls plant are located in ten other states.

Nationally, Hancor, incorporated has achieved sound, solid growth through constant attention to quality. This emphasis on excellence begins with the company's extensive, modern research and tubing facilities—the largest in terms of equipment and personnel in the industry. Engineers, micro-biologists and laboratory technicians, as well as consultants in the fields of soil science, irrigation, public health, and outdoor recreation are constantly developing new and better products and assuring that rigid quality standards are maintained.

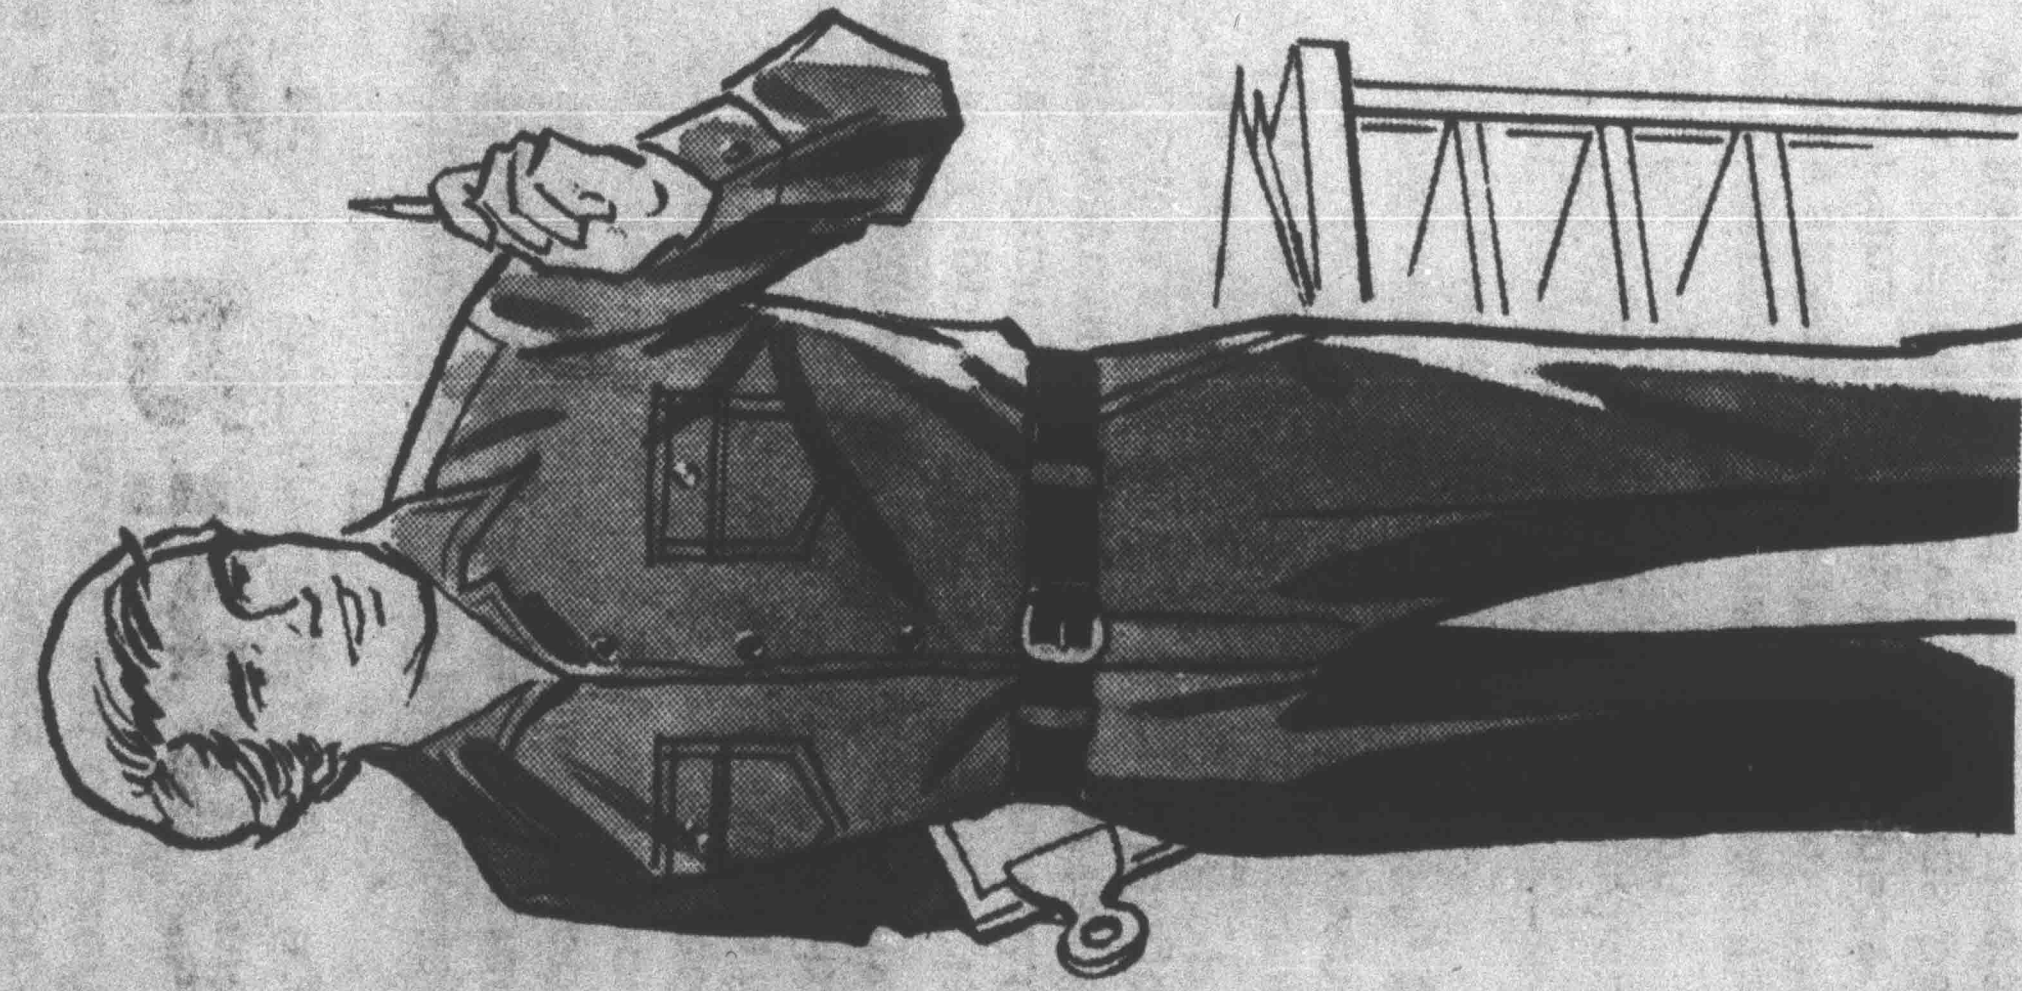

As new Hancor designs are developed or product changes are made, Hancor laboratories perform exhaustive tests on samples to evaluate their performance in the field and to insure that they meet the company's high standards. Regular production samples from all manufacturing plants, including the plant in Halls, are continuously tested for quality.

The network of Hancor plants is being strategically located in areas where there is a growing demand for drainage tubing. This systematic coverage provides overnight delivery to all customers within the geographic area which each plant covers.

Hancor's dedication to drainage science and advanced technology, both in the Halls plant and throughout the entire Hancor chain, is making a major contribution toward assuring efficiency and reliability in modern drainage systems.

Haltex Suits The Nation's Men

If any of the men in the family own a suit that cost between $40 and $130, it could have been manufactured in Halls at the Haltex Manufacturing Company. The firm sews popularly priced men's sports coats and suits and distributes them all over the United States and Puerto Rico.

Formerly G&G Manufacturing Company, Haltex—under one name or another—has been in Halls for more than ten years. During that time, the plant has continually expanded its facilities and intends to continue another expansion within the next six months that will enable it to hire an additional 50 persons.

The subsidiary of MTG Industries in Philadelphia markets its merchandise through department stores and large chain stores. It offers clothing in three price ranges.

Haltex employees seem contented with their jobs. Sophisticated machinery simplifies the construction of garments throughout cutting, binding, stitching, and pressing each section. The benefits offered by the plant and its union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, have caused most employees to remain with the company year after year. Benefits and wages are good enough to draw several members of the same family to work for the clothing manufacturer. Company officials are proud to point out that Haltex offers the best rate of pay within about a 90-mile radius.

Tupperware Is Contributing Many Advantages To Halls

When Tupperware opened its doors in Halls in March, 1969, it was the largest industry in the city. A year later, it doubled its work force and the size of its building. Today, it employs about 800 persons to make the familiar plasticware that "burps" to lock in freshness.

They could excel at such strenuous athletics as apple-bobbing, pie eating, foot racing, and checkers. The children are also treated to a Christmas party each year. About 600 children of Tupperware employees arrive at the Halls School at Christmastime for a program of games, entertainment, and toys.

The recreation building on the plant site is available to employees who reserve it. It can be used for family gatherings, parties, or other activities and is equipped with kitchen facilities, a game room, and a recreation area. The "mini-park" outside the plant is fully furnished with picnic shelters, playground equipment for all ages, a tennis court, a basketball court, and a Little League baseball field that doubles as a softball field for employee games.

The annual "Tupperware Family Outing" is held in the recreation area each year, and more than 2,000 persons attend. Tupperware employees and their families can ride carnival rides, eat at a buffet supper, play Bingo, and nibble snacks all day long at the yearly outing. Persons who attend may win one of 200 different prizes during drawings held during the day, and special entertainment is provided that night. This year's special attraction was country music star Johnny Rodriguez.

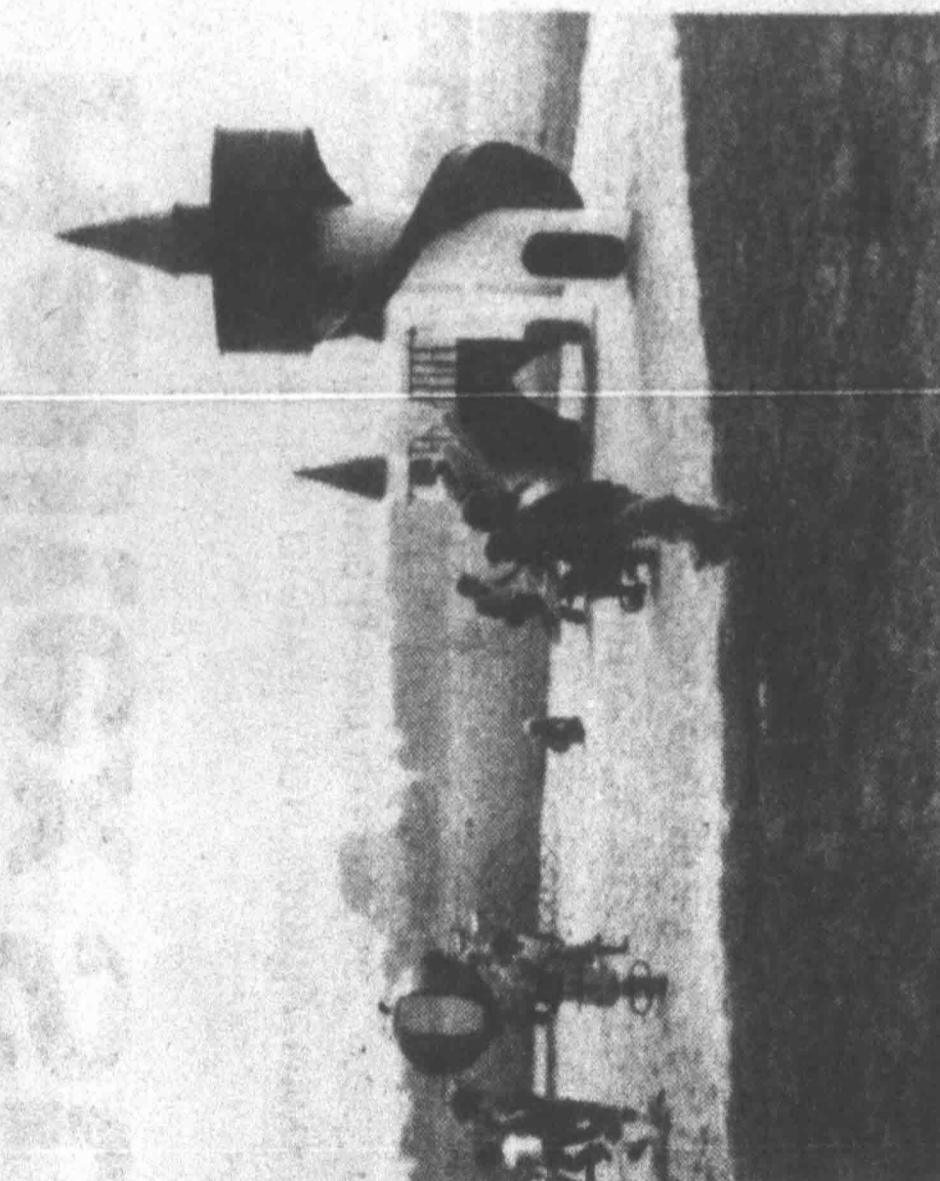

In addition to all these "extras," the Tupperware Family enjoys good salaries and excellent medical insurance coverage paid for entirely by the company. Tupperware Personnel Manager Allen Tillman said the company is very satisfied with its location in Halls. "It was the community and the people that made Tupperware come to Halls," he said. "Everyone has been very cooperative. We have benefited from our decision to come here, and we feel we have been able to add to the community, also."

The Halls plant is one of only four in the United States, but plants are also located in England, Belgium, France, Spain, Greece, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Japan, Canada, Mexico, Venezuela, and Brazil. Tupperware was founded in 1945 by Earl S. Tupper, who originated the unique home party plan to introduce his product. Now Tupperware can be bought only through the party plan.

Locally, the entire line of Tupperware products is manufactured in the Halls plant and shipped to distributors everywhere. The "Tupperware Family" enjoys numerous benefits both on and off the job as a result of their association with the company, which has been owned by Dart Industries since 1958. Perfect monthly attendance brings a $25 bonus to each worker who doesn't miss a day at the plant. At the end of the year, employees with perfect attendance records are invited to a banquet in their honor, given a $100 bonus, and receive a chance to win a new car.

A special summer program is available to workers who have school-age children. Parents who work on any shift may bring their school-age children to the Tupperware recreation center during the day, where capable supervisors provide care and special activities for them. This year, the children were encouraged to participate in a special version of the "Olympics," to determine which of

The Tupperware Family enjoys advantages, ranging from the annual "family outing" to the plant's picnic area and recreation facilities.

SPECIAL EVENT - JOHNNY RODRIGUEZ

Seedlings Available
District Forester Steve Glenn says applications for November delivery of forest tree seedlings are available in the area forester's office in the Crain Building, in the Soil Conservation Service office, and in the Extension office.

Loblolly, short-leaf, and Virginia pines, black locust, and sycamores are $3 per 100, white pine and sweet gum $10, cottonwood cuttings $11, yellow poplar $14, white oak $8, and cypress $22.

Trees may also be ordered in lots of 500, at half the price above, or lots of 200 at higher cost per tree. For instance, 200 loblolly pines are $2.

Every order, regardless of size, incurs a $2 service charge.

Pesticide Examination
Dealers selling restricted-use pesticides took an extensive examination Sept. 10, on label information, chemical formulations, safety, field applications, and recommendations to the public relating to pesticides.

The Environmental Protection Administration is requiring this examination for certification to sell these pesticides.

Next January, all farm applicators must become certified. Their tests will be given locally by the Extension Service.

The law requires everyone responsible for application of pesticides to become certified.

RIPLEY TIGER QUARTERBACK MIKE KIMMONS (7) heaves a pitch as he keeps the ball moving against Somerville's Fayette-Ware for a 40-20 victory last Friday, the Ripley team's first in three appearances this year. Junior halfback Tony Barbee was the Tiger touchdown maker as Fayette-Ware was held scoreless through the first half. This week the Tigers visit Covington's undefeated Wildcat eleven while Halls, defeated last week by Dyer County, 27-0, hosts South Fulton.

Century-Old Farms Feted 18c And Sardines Framed—TV Film Crew, Millionaire Author Studying Henning

By Charles T. Peal
State Commissioner of Agriculture Edward Porter will present certificates next Thursday at the Bicentennial tent at the Green Mid-South Fair Scene in Memphis to four Lauderdale County landowners whose land has been cultivated by the same family for 100 years or more.

Eugene Anthony owns land his family has farmed since 1826. Emmitt Garfield Parker, Jr., traces his family's ownership to 1827. Mrs. Alvin A. Bell's family ownership dates from 1830. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Keller, of Henning, own farm land established by their family in 1869.

Porter says this Centennial Farm program, "recognized by the Tennessee Historical Commission as one of the 13 outstanding preservation projects for 1976, increases our awareness of the resourcefulness of the land and pride in the family farm."

Century Farm families and brief descriptions of their farming operations will be published in a Family Land Heritage Registry.

They were chosen from 634 applications.

Greene County has the most oldest, dating back 199 years. Obion County has 26.

UT Screens For Nematodes
Eugene Anthony last week spotted some areas in one of his fields in which soy beans were stunted, with yellowish, brownish leaves.

Nematode signs were found on the root systems.

The University of Tennessee will screen soil samples for Race 4 cyst nematodes at no charge.

Since a test takes six weeks, now is the time to get soil samples to the Extension office.

Get a quart of earth in a plastic bag, collected from the root zone, two to six inches deep. Get the dirt from more than one spot and keep it out of heat and direct sunlight. Label each sample, showing its source.

Ripley Among Offenders—Hearings Eye $58,000,000 Cost To Clean Hatchie, Forked Deer

Hearings in Humboldt Monday and Brownsville Tuesday will discuss the state Department of Public Health's pollution control plans for the Forked Deer and Hatchie Rivers, respectively, which officials estimate would cost West Tennessee cities—including Ripley—in excess of $58,000,000 by 1980.

Municipal and industrial discharges from Ripley, Covington, and Selmer are defined as "problem areas" for the Hatchie River, which the state department says will require more than $11,600,000 in corrective action by 1980. The department says 55% of 29 segments of the stream at times have water violating state standards.

The Forked Deer problems are much more extensive, the state department says, with about 66% of 78 segments at times violating the state standards. The state puts a price tag of at least $46,400,000 on the water quality controls needed by 1980 by Dyersburg, Jackson, Huntingdon, Henderson, McKenzie, Milan, and Trenton.

In addition to the pollution from city sewers and from industrial plants, sedimentation, erosion, and run-off are major problems in both of the streams, the state says, with increasing use of fertilizers, pesticides, and herbicides contributing to fouled waters.

The department says high-density, one-crop farming, animal feed-lot operations, forest operations, clay mining, and sand and gravel operations have been "major contributors" to pollution of the Forked Deer and to filling-in of Reelfoot Lake.

The hearings will identify and discuss municipal and industrial polluters and the up-grading which would be required for each.

Hearings begin at 7:30 p.m. in the county courthouses in each location, with the public invited to attend.

Hill Kidney Fund Aided By Supper

Youth of Gates Circuit Methodist Churches will give proceeds of a spaghetti supper from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, in Gates Church, to Russell Hill, 10, of Woodville, whose kidney defects require expensive treatments. The public is invited.

Silly Solution

Despite the fact that we have spent more than 46 years in the newspaper profession and have spent much time in observing the federal bureaucracy we continue to be amazed at some of the idiotic remedies which they offer for national problems.

Palmer, was a respected lumber dealer.

There was a concert by the Lane College choir, in whose ranks the couple had met.

Haley's mother died in 1931. His father, who closed a 40-year career in education as dean of agriculture in Agricultural, Mechanical and Normal College in Pine Bluff, Ark., died at 83.

Haley was born in Ithaca, N.Y., while his father was studying for a master's degree at Cornell University. He graduated in 1925 and worked in the U.S. Information Agency, and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg's office.

Haley refers in "Roots" to aid from "a master researcher," George Sims, who grew up with him in Henning.

There apparently is no knowledge that millions of workers must reach their jobs on Saturdays and Sundays, the tourist industry—for once we agree with Gov. Ray Blanton—would be completely disrupted with the resulting loss of jobs, theoretically all truck deliveries, etc. would have to end although it would never happen. We have known of some silly solutions but this one is near the lead in asinine answers to problems.

While still on the subject may we say that it appears that bus-ing to achieve school desegregation has proven to be about as idiotic since it has disrupted and continues to disrupt the educational process with little apparent help to any group.

Other recent silly solutions would appear to be a possible decision by the Treasury Department to discontinue the making of pennies, threats by the Postal Service to drop Saturday deliveries and curtail other deliveries, OSHA's recent decision to require toilet facilities within five minutes distance on farms, along with others too numerous to mention.

We probably could fill this and several other issues of The Graphic with more horrible examples but our readers can probably name as many as we can.

Not All Over
We're a little disgusted with the attitude of a few so-called Halls football fans after the loss to Dyer County last Friday evening. They are critical of the team, the coaches, etc. with no justification.

The Tigers have a good football team and will likely finish the season without another loss or one at the most. How many teams do you know of with an 8-2 or 9-1 record each year?

The Tigers, despite some bad breaks early in the game, fought hard and deserve praise not criticism.

Sheriff Lifts Beer Permit

Sheriff Joe B. O'Steen and six deputies raided Bluff View Inn, on Highway 19 west of Arp, Saturday evening and charged Jackie Oates and Gary Kent Williams, whom he identified as co-workers, with possession of intoxicating liquor and sale of mixed drinks.

He said nine bottles of wine were found in the beer cooler, with some bottles of whiskey and one of tequila.

Williams, tavern operator, and Oates, who said his only interest in the business was via a loan to Williams, were fined a total of $85 each, on three charges, by General Sessions Judge Willard Norvell, with 30-day jail sentences suspended and 6-month probation ordered.

Judge Norvell dismissed a charge of possession of an unregistered weapon.

The beer license will remain suspended until owners appear before the county beer board.

In Their Merry Oldsmobile—30th Anniversary Ride In Car Couple Used On Wedding Day

The Fred Faulks, of 295 Church Avenue, Ripley, took a spin on their 30th wedding anniversary Thursday in the same 1939 Oldsmobile in which they rode on their wedding day.

Gasoline rationing stickers are still visible on the windshield of the 6-cylinder, 95-horsepower 770-series sedan which was the Faulk family car throughout World War II.

The "A" sticker allowed four gallons a week and the "B" sticker four gallons for farm families.

Fred was home on furlough from Army duty at William Beaumont General Hospital in El Paso, Tex., and Margaret was a senior in Middle Tennessee State University when they were married in Central Church of Christ in Huntsville, Ala.—because Alabama required no

"Roots" grew from a lunch with his agent, Paul Reynolds, and Doubleday's Kenneth McCormick and Lisa Drew in 1966, Baker writes.

"At that time, he had only one idea of trying to trace his family back, through tales of his grandmother he heard as a child growing up in Tennessee, and the legends of a man the family called 'the African,' who had been seized by slavers in the dim past as he chopped wood to make a drum.

"Haley just thought there might be a book in his search for the past, but at that time he hadn't been to Africa, and wasn't all that fired up about it. If he couldn't trace any African angle, he was prepared just to make the book a black American family saga.

"Doubleday gave him an advance of $5,000, enabling him to go to Africa to see if he could pursue the trail of his past into the remote rural villages of Gambia—and it would be easy to say that the rest is history, except that it involved years of agonizingly hard work, financial problems, and bitter feelings for Haley.

"He tells the story of his search in the closing chapters of 'Roots'—how with a bare handful of clues he pin-pointed the African language of his forebear Kunta Kinte, eventually even found the Gambian village where his ancestor had been seized by slavers, then ransomed, British and American naval records for the very ship on which Kinte was brought to colonial America in 1767.

"What he doesn't indicate there is the despair he sometimes experienced that he would ever finish.

"He piled up material obsessively, spending long months talking to the old griots—verbal historians—of the African villages, poring over missionary records, naval records, the history of the slave trade.

"He even crossed the Atlantic on a freighter, deliberately incanting himself in a dark hold day after day, so as to experience as nearly as possible what the crossing felt like to a slave."

He was deeply in debt by then and felt that he would never finish the book. "I'd keep telling Doubleday I'd finish any day now, but I never did. I worked on it solidly for the last two and a half years in Jamaica, then in February they sent me my last draft for what was meant to be a final read-through. It was supposed to take me no more than a couple of days, but I knew when I saw it I had to do more work on it. I hid out in the Hotel Commodore so that Doubleday wouldn't know where I was, and I did a whole new chapter and a lot of re-writing. It took me two weeks, and for the last 48 hours, I worked around the clock."

He says "there's nothing I'd rather do, except perhaps be a surgeon. In many ways, it's a similar, delicate, careful work and I act like a surgeon. When I'm writing, I take six showers a day and wash my hands maybe 20 times."

The television script was written from his manuscript, and at one point he was "scared they'd catch up to me from behind."

Haley observed some of the filming in Georgia and Holly-

* Decorate unused fireplaces with imitation plant arrangements. Move these groupings to the mantle when the fireplace is in use.
* Use three lifelike plants to decorate your vacation home and never worry about watering while you're away.

* Create a garden effect in your spare room with artificial plant groupings, tall trees and hanging planters.

Miss Minerva & Billy Return

This writer first made the delightful acquaintance of Miss Minerva and her irrepressible nephew William Green Hill—or Billy, as he much preferred to be called—a full generation ago when, in boyhood, he discovered the books of Frances Boyd Calhoun and her successor, Emma Speed Sampson, in the public library of his hometown.

In the scene in which Miss Minerva and Billy themselves draw a hand across his forehead, the publisher in West Tennessee. After a labor of love of several years, she sent her book off in 1908 to a publisher in Chicago, who promptly laid the manuscript aside and forgot about it. Months later, a disconsolate Mrs. Boyd composed a rhymed letter inquiring after "my lost child."

The publisher then located "Miss Minerva and William Green Hill," read it, was delighted by it, and rushed it into print. Nevertheless, the earlier delay prevented the Tennessee author from knowing how popular her little classic of a small town Southern childhood would become, for she died in 1909, soon after its publication.

Her life's work, however, has long outlived Mrs. Boyd in giving pleasure; and again may do so as a result of the wisdom of the U-T Press in reissuing it. A new generation—especially, we hope, of Tennesseans—now may enter into the mischief of Billy and his playmate, chubby Jimmy Garner, who stayed so continuously "in a fix" that Billy finally laid it reluctantly on the Deity Himself. "Look like God all time lettin' us git in trouble," he concluded.

Maybe it was so, but that trouble is rendered delightfully, and we recommend the book which contains it to everyone who finds pleasure in reading.

DWAYNE MCKINNEY, THE STATE'S TOP SCORER last week, starts wide on a pitch-out with Halls fullback Willie Robison (44) leading the blocking. In hot pursuit are Dyer County Choctaws Calvin Fussell (50) and Richard Barnes (45). The Choctaws came out of the fray on top, 27-0, while Ripley was posting its first win this season in Somerville, 40-20. Halls hosts South Fulton this Friday evening, as Ripley visits Covington's undefeated Wildcats.

HUNTING A RECEIVER against the Dyer County Choctaws last Friday was Halls quarterback Ray McBroon, as Willie Robison (44), Jimmy Meeks (55), Morgan Steelman (78), and Kenny Wells (33) set up protection.

HHS Hosting South Fulton

The Halls Tigers, now 3-1 after a shocking loss, 27-0, to Dyer County last Friday, will host South Fulton at 7:30 p.m. this Friday.

South Fulton, 2-2 for the season, is rated as one of the better teams in the Reelfoot Conference, but the Tigers will be favored to regain their winning form.

The Tigers, rated near even with Dyer County, had disaster to strike twice in the first quarter, when a blocked punt and an errant pitchout gave Newbern two quick touchdowns and a 13-0 lead.

News Of Education

In tiny El Salvador, where 32% of the national budget goes for education, new innovations in education are winning attention from U.S. educators.

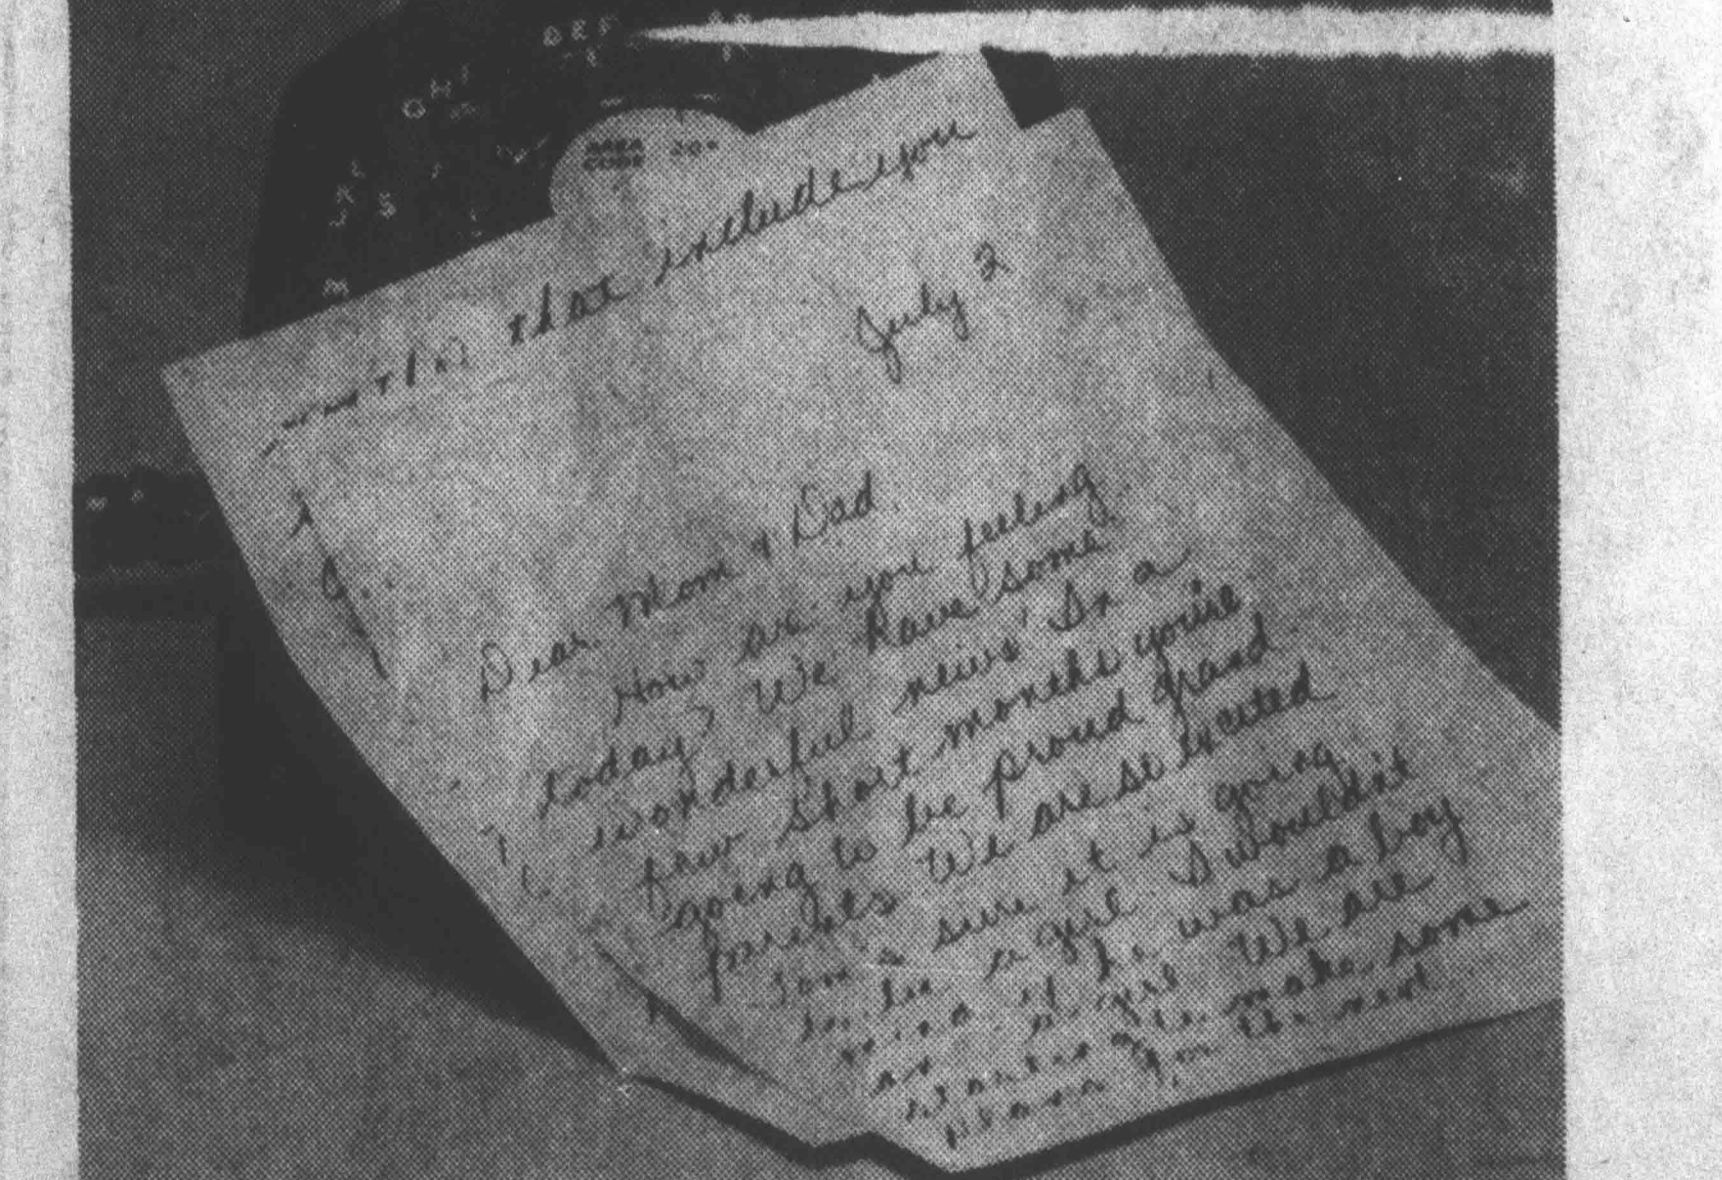

Earning Skills
Three aspects of El Salvador's educational program are especially interesting.

Educational programs are designed to provide students with skills to earn a living.

Students who drop out of school can continue their education by using the two national educational TV channels.

For the 60,000 young people now enrolled in its four universities, tuition is commensurate with each student's financial situation.

For youngsters who year ago might have faced a lifetime of mental drudgery at poverty wages, the new educational program is helping the country live up to its name. In Spanish, "El Salvador" means "The Savior."

Answer today's cards and letters with a long distance call. Call now while you're thinking about it. Long Distance. It's the personal reply they'll remember.

U.S. SENATOR BILL BROCK WASHINGTON OUTLOOK

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senate House conferees last Friday approved a modified estate tax reform proposal authored earlier this year by Senator Bill Brock. Brock has long been active in the Senate in support of this measure saying that it "is desperately needed particularly by farmers and small business men and women."

The estate tax revision sets the tax credit figure at $30,000 which will be graduated to $7,000 by 1981. This system of credits will have the effect of lifting the basic exemption from its current level of $60,000 to $120,000 in 1977 and to $175,000 in 1981.

A second proposal strongly supported by Brock was also accepted by the conferees. This amendment would require that the Internal Revenue Service value estate properties such as farms in their "current use."

CARD OF THANKS We would like to express our deep appreciation to every one for their many kindnesses at the time of our loss. We are grateful for your cards, flowers, the food, your prayers, and every consideration. We especially wish to thank the people of Ebenezer Baptist Church and also Halls Funeral Home and Garner Funeral Home for their considerate services. Thanks again for your kindness and sympathy.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

Throughout the 94th Congress, the United States Postal Service has continually been involved in controversy stemming from a wide range of subjects, beginning with postal rate increases and continuing through their proposal to close approximately 12,000 third and fourth class post offices. The Congress has been able to deal on a short term basis with many of these controversies and has been working on a comprehensive piece of legislation aimed at solving the long term effects of recent Postal Service proposals.

Just last week, the Senate approved the conference report to that bill and action is expected in the House on this conference report this week. It makes several changes in postal operations including providing for a subsidy to the Postal Service and declaring moratoriums on rate increases and post office closings.

First, it will provide for a one billion dollar subsidy through fiscal year 1977 which ends September 30, 1977. It requires that mail delivery be made at doors or curbsides in new areas beginning with the first day of the postal appropriation and provides that parcel post rates not be reduced more than 10 percent as a result of the postal subsidy.

With regard to the closings of small post offices, it places a moratorium on these closings until March 15, 1977 and places a moratorium on service reductions until that date. In the event that selected post offices are targeted for closing after that date, the Postal Service must give sufficient time for the public served by that post office to give their comments and views on the proposed closing.

In an attempt to maintain the Postal Service accountability to the Congress, postal officials will be required to submit budget and other materials to Congress annually in order to justify the funds appropriated by Congress for the operation of the Postal Service.

Those are the major provisions of the bill but it also includes a moratorium on any more rate increases until March 15, 1977 and preserves second class mailing privileges for college catalogs and one conservation magazine published by a state agency.

These provisions should hopefully stabilize the operations of the Postal Service for a time so that long range assessments of policies can be made. The patrons of the Postal Service cannot continue to be subjected to fluctuating policies promulgated by high postal officials. If the Postal Service is to reach a level that is stable, these kinds of changes are going to be necessary.

This bill, HR 8603, is not intended to again put the Postal Service under the complete control of Congress. But it is intended to reaffirm the Postal Service's responsibility to Congress and to the people it serves. No federal agency can be allowed to operate with tax dollars without being accountable to the Congress who must make the decisions on funding for that agency.

The requirements that postal officials appear before the Congress with budget materials is a good one. It makes them accountable for the use of federal dollars allotted to them and should help instill in them the need for devoting maximum effort toward promoting better service.

MODERN DRUGS

CONTEMPORARY USE

ILLEGAL ABUSE

By

SAMMY ARNOLD, Registered Ph.

Free enterprise is our subject this week. As previously noted, the United States has developed more than half of all new prescription drugs in recent years and one good reason for this can be attributed to the free enterprise system.

We think you'll agree that if we did not have well over 1,500 drug firms, all competing for new ideas in this industry, we would certainly not be developing our new products at such a rapid pace.

This competition creates new ideas, fair pricing, and safe products for our good health.
