Halls High Grads Of 1931 Meet

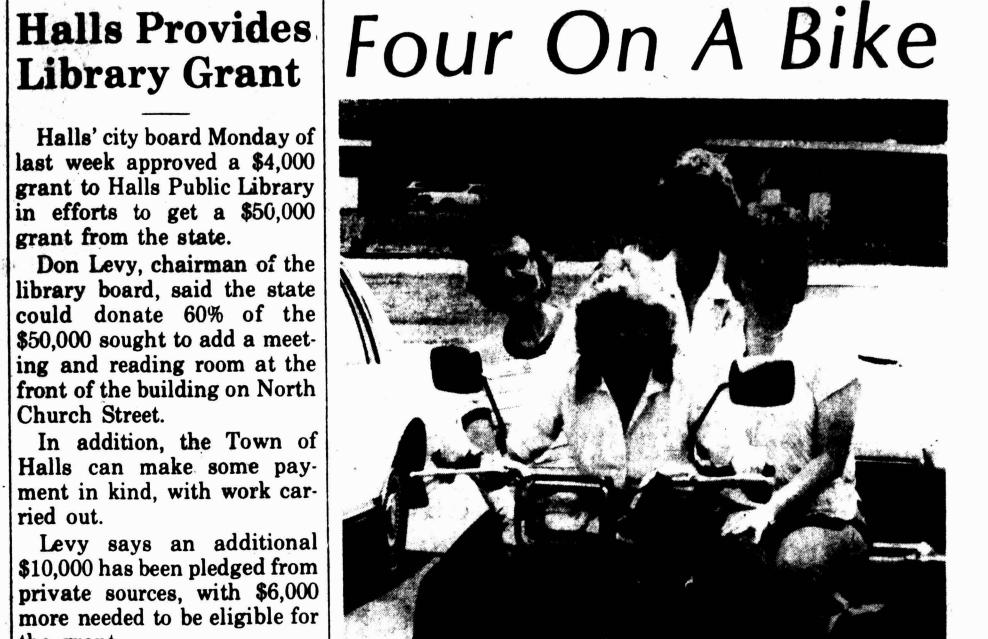

Library Grant

Halls' city board Monday of last week approved a $4,000 grant to Halls Public Library in efforts to get a $50,000 grant from the state.

Don Levy, chairman of the library board, said the state could donate 60% of the $50,000 sought to add a meeting and reading room at the front of the building on North Church Street.

In addition, the Town of Halls can make some payment in kind, with work carried out.

Levy says an additional $10,000 has been pledged from private sources, with $6,000 more needed to be eligible for

Street Festival Yet

Plans for the ninth annual Halls Street Festival, June 26th-July 4th sponsored by the Halls Merchants Association, are well under way, says Steve Levy, president of the organization.

This year's festival promises to be bigger than ever. New events are the Art, Craft, and Food Fair, July 1st and 2nd, in downtown Halls; the Mud Derby, July 3rd on the air base; and a carnival with rides for adults and children, July 1st-4th in downtown Halls.

Other events include an all Festival itself in downtown in participating in the talent

Canoe Trails: Close to Nature

Ripples on water . . . graceful tree branches framing the sunlight filtering sides . . through the leaves.

This scene, ever changing with each bend of the river. is a source of constant delight when canoeing one of the many pastoral rivers and streams in Tennessee.

Once used by Indians as a means of transportation, noes have changed and improved from the days of hollowed-out logs or a frame covered by birchbark or hides. Now lightweight and made of aluminum or fiberglass, canoes are easily afloat, sturdy and easy to manage on peaceful waters or on rivers with an easy flow to mild rapids. Floating with friends o family in the middle of a stream is a great "get-a-way. Once in the canoe, a canoeist is in the world of nature, hopefully not immersed less he or she wants to be.

Learning to paddle doesn' take long - an outfitter or a skilled canoeist can show the beginner the basic strokes Coordinating strokes with a partner in a canoe may take a little longer and learning to maneuver around logs, rocks or islands in the middle of a stream is a small challenge and part of the fun of learning a new and easily acquired

Stopping to picnic on the sides of the river or to swim in a pool-like stretch of water are all part of the possibilities canoeing offers. Waterfalls from tributary streams may be discovered along the banks as the scenery along the side changes from a steep rock wall to sloping pasture orestland

The Buffalo River in Mid dle Tennessee is one of th most popular canoeing rivers in the South. It is an ideal scenic tour for beginning canoeists, offering deep green waters with mild rapids. The Buffalo River is 110 miles long, beginning in Lawrence County. Canoe rentals along the way offer trips of varying lengths with easy and conriver is peaceful with good floating. Outfitters are located daughters, Amy, Annette and week. in Flat Woods, Waynesboro and Lobelville. Other Middle Tennessee streams, including the Duck, Elk, and Harpeth Rivers, also offer good floating for the amateur canoeist. Canoes may be rented on the Duck River at Chapel Hill and at Kingston Springs on the Harpeth River. The Sequatchie River near Dunlap flows today much as it did hundred of years ago.

Evidence of Indian fish traps may be seen in the river although the last Indians left the Sequatchie Valley in the early 1800s. The observant canoeist may see deer, beaver, duck and heron as well as many other more commo river creatures.

The scenery of the Sequatchie Valley is beautiful, with surrounding mountains part of the view. The Sequatchie Valley, 125 miles long and about five miles wide, is a contrast to the slopes of the Cumberland Plateau and Walden Ridge. A large part of the area is orested

HERO'S CASE BRINGS NEW ATTENTION TO SS DISABILITY REVIEW PROCESS

Thirteen years ago, west of Loc Ninh, Vietnam, Roy P. Benavidez demonstrated incredible bravery. Despite severe wounds to the abdomen, back, thigh, head and arms and being clubbed from behind by an enemy soldier, the Green Beret led a rescue of U.S. soldiers trapped in downed helicopters still under fire. He was credited with saving the lives of at least eight other Green Berets.

A few weeks ago, Benavidez' government told him he would no longer receive disability benefits from the social security administration. The social security administration told him that his injuries did not prevent him from working and that he was entitled to no further compensation.

The case of Benavidez, who was awarded the Medal of Honor by President Reagan in 1981, appears to have finally forced the Reagan Administration to recognize that there are serious problems in the way social security disability cases are being reviewed.

Tens of thousands of individuals have been abruptly terminated from the disability rolls even though some are bedridden and most are determined later to have been deserving of the benefits. This review has disrupted the lives of these individuals and caused much unnecessary hardship in the past two years.

In the wake of the disclosure about Benavidez, Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret M. Heckler announced a modification of disability regulations to prevent a repetition of the Benavidez case.

I am pleased that the Reagan Administration has finally admitted that there is a problem after denying for two years that one existed. However, I share the concern of many experts in the field that Secretary Heckler's proposed changes do not go far enough.

It also appears to be an effort to diminish support for a bill which Senator John Heinz has drafted to deal more directly with the disability review problems. I am supporting this legislation and other measures to restore some sense of fairness and compassion to the process.

The review process has caused severe problems for many, many individuals who are obviously disabled, but they did not happen to be war heroes so their cases did not receive the publicity granted the case of Benavidez. However, their plight is no less important.

Hopefully, with the additional public attention focused on this issue, we in the Congress can pass legislation to make sure that those who are entitled to disability benefits are not unjustly terminated because of a review program out of control.

an alternative type of ente heard in the Volunteer state. This summer as dusk falls on the mountains and rolling hills and stars begin to twinkle in the Southern sky, superb drama and musical presen tations unfold at amphi theaters across Tennessee.

Near Townsend, Tennessee the dark beauty of the East Tennessee mountains at night provide an enchanting backdrop for two nationally respected dramas, "The Smoky Mountain Passion Play" and "Damascus Road."

As if the pages of a giantsized Bible picture book were coming alive before one's eyes, these plays are engrossing accounts of the lives of Jesus Christ and the Apostle Paul. The two are independent productions staged on alternate nights, and each employ 40 professionally trained per-

The two-hour "Passion Play" focuses on the last week of Jesus' ministry and its 1 scenes include the Last Supper, His crucifixion and His resurrection from the dead.

"It's the only one in the world that's done fully as drama, as opposed to a pageant," emphasizes Bob Temple, producer/general manager "The characters are highly developed, and since some scenes are so close to the audience--the crucifixion scene is only 22 feet away from the front row--it is very convincing." Live campfires horses, donkeys and a chariot add to the realism.

"Damascus Road" begins where the "Passion Play" ends, and helps paint a full picture of the early development of first century Christianity. The script traces the intense persecution of Christians led by Saul, who later becomes Apostle Paul. An unforget highlight is his striking conversion on the road. Damascus. "We use a choir special lighting effects for the scene make this play very dramatic," stresses Temple.

Both dramas are presented in a 1200-seat amphitheater located just two miles from the entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National the audience. An entire 360-degree panoramic view of the mountains can be enjoyed from the location

The "Passion Play" is presented on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, while "Damascus Road" is presented on Tuesday, Thursday and urday evenings through August 27. Curtain call is 8:45 p.m. and tickets may be purchased at the door o making reservations at 615-448-2244 or 615-984-4111.

Another outdoor presentation occurs at Sycamore Shoals State Historic Area, located in Elizabethton, Tenis the backdrop for a historically based play entitled

"The Wataugans. This American frontier drama deals with the early settlement of Upper East Tennessee from 1770 - 1780s. The action begins with the real estate transaction in America's history, the Transvlvania Purchase (20 million acres of land acquired from Indians) which took place at Sycamore Shoals. If
