Wind Wrecks Trailer

A FREAK WIND destroyed this trailer about 3 a. m. Saturday at the Robert Craddock Trailer Park in Beech Bluff Sub-Division in Halls. The occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lawson and two small children, were not injured. Mr. Lawson told Mr. Craddock he heard the storm, opened the door to look out, and the roof exploded. Other storm damage in the Halls area was limited to a few broken tree limbs and other light damage.

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

By Henry Murchison

Back At Home

Well, we are back at home after our unexpected stay in the hospital—and very happy to be here.

Apparently the bleeding has been stopped, and we can expect to be in much better health if we follow our doctor's instructions. We have been placed on a fairly simple diet, with certain no-nos which we must follow.

One thing that was unexpected is a great improvement in appetite and enjoyment of our food. Another unexpected development is that we should eat small snacks between meals, as well as eat well at meal time. We will have to be careful to avoid re-gaining the weight we have lost during the past few years.

As we wrote last week, we were grateful for the many telephone calls, the flowers, cards, food, etc. while we were in the hospital and since we have been at home, but we were especially touched by the basket of fruit brought to us by June Gilliland in behalf of the Halls High Distributive Education Club.

More Thanks

We also need to express our thanks to Edna Jordan (Mrs. Frank) Budde, of Shreveport, La., sister of Jere and Bobby Jordan, of Halls, for sending the information on the injuries to Mickey King as published in last week's Halls Graphic. She sent us two clippings from Shreveport newspapers giving complete details. We are always grateful when our readers and subscribers keep us posted about local people.

Tickets ($5) may be pur Computer Report

As you would expect, we have been delayed in our attempted conquest of our computer because of our stay The banquet is sponsored in the hospital, but nevertheless we must acknowledge the help given us by Judi (Mrs. Larry) Keen and employees of Radio Shack in Covington.

Because of complications in converting certain programs, our efforts to put the computer to its full use have been delayed, but some of these problems have been solved, and others will be. We are making progress and enjoying the computer.

deal of conversation about the low quality of education in Tennessee. The Master Teacher Plan has been formed by Gov. Lamar Alexander and passed the State Legislature as one step toward the improvement of public educa-

We have agreed with many of the statements about public education and certainly agree that improvement is needed, but at the same time, there is another side to

Despite the horror stories about education, the teachers at Halls High School must be doing something

Several departments in Halls High School have had some remarkable achievements during the past few years. The vocational agriculture education department, year after year, has had an outstanding record and is conceded to be one of the finest in Tennessee despite certain handicaps. The Vocational Education department is showing up well in district and state competition and the Distributive Education department continues to have state and national winners. This year the DECA group had seven winners at the state level who are eligible for national competition at Kansas City, Mo. later this month. Because of conflict with graduation, some have chosen not to attend the national convention, but four will go to Kansas City.

Other academic departments have sent some outstanding students to colleges and universities and will continue to do so. Over a five year period, the Halls High School band has become recognized as one of the better small school bands in the state and, of course, the Halls High athletic teams have continued to post outstanding

We think that every teacher will agree that the schools can stand improvement, but they are not the rank failures that some would have you believe them to

While we cannot speak with authority, we feel that there are many other schools throughout Tennessee with similar records. Let's do our part in helping to improve Tennessee's schools, but don't write them off as complete failures.

Welcome Visitor

Lucinda Alsobrook Coulter, of Florida, who has been visiting her parents, the Charles Alsobrooks, came to see your editor last week and we certainly enjoyed her visit. Lucinda, an economics professor at a college in Orlando, is somewhat of a frustrated newspaper woman. She was once an employee of The Halls Graphic and has never recovered. Over the years, she has sent us news from Mexico, Korea, Japan as well as elsewhere in the United States.

Unfortunately, we seldom have any time with Lucinda, but we look forward to visiting with her when possible. Thank you for coming!

SALUTE HALLS FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA

The Future Farmers of America Organization prepares students for careers in agriculture. However, they also play a vital part in stressing the importance of certain values that make these young people very special.

Members learn through active participation how to speak in public, to market farm products, to solve personal problems, to use new and improved farming methods and to assume responsibilities as good citizens.

We are very proud of the Future Farmers of America and whole-heartedly give our full support to them. Thank you!

A Report for Tennesseans

POSTAL CRIMES

NEED THOROUGH INVESTIGATION The postmaster general of the United States, Mr. William Bolger, tells me he doesn't think the Postal Service needs any more postal inspectors. It seems to me that he should either request additional funds of the Congress to hire more inspectors, or ask for more work from the inspectors now employed.

The fact is that the inspectors just aren't investigating a lot of postal crimes anymore. They find themselves too occupied with "big-time" cases of postal crime to investigate such things as mailbox vandalism and the theft of checks from mailboxes. They spend their time and their manpower in New York and Chicago and Los Angeles, rather than the smaller cities and rural areas of Tennessee. And even in Tennessee, the productivity of the inspectors we have has fallen off rather dramatically. Nationwide, convictions of postal crime suspects have declined by 75 percent over just five

I have conducted an extensive investigation of this problem over a period of several months, and have concluded that the fault does not lie with the postal inspectors themselves or with the fine Postal Service personnel in Tennessee. The fault lies with Mr. Bolger and the top management of the national system.

I questioned Mr. Bolger about his policies at considerable length during a recent hearing of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. Frankly, his answers were not very responsive. I have submitted several followup questions to him in writing, and I expect answers soon. If he is no more forthcoming in those answers, and if we don't see some significant changes in his attitude toward the victims of "minor" postal crimes, I am going to suggest some very strong congressional action.

Meanwhile, here is one example of the preposterous lengths to which the Postal Service goes in escaping it responsibility to investigate crimes: A Kingsport resident the victim of repeated mailbox vandalism. When he complains to the Postal Service, he is told that the mailbox private property and the incident should be investigated by

But when newspaper carriers want to put their newspapers into mailboxes, they are told it is a violation of the law, because mailboxes are for official federal use only. Clearly, we can no longer allow the Postal Inspection Service to pick and choose, on its own, which laws it wants

That bill was the Equal Access Act, a bill which was written to clarify a two year old Supreme Court ruling.

The intent of this legislation was to provide legislative authority to allow student initiated religious groups to use public school facilities to hold meetings. It was designed to extend to the secondary school level a 1981 Supreme Court ruling that applied to colleges and universities. In that ruling, the Court voted 8-1 in upholding publicly supported college's and university's obligation to allow individual students to meet voluntarily for prayer, Bible study, and religious discussion in those institution's facilities. The Court stipulated that these meetings must be completely voluntary, student-initiated, and must not imply any state sanction of the beliefs of the partici-

That, in my estimation, sounds quite well defined and straightforward. The Equal Access Act, which was considered by the House, simply sought to extend that ruling to high schools. It even went so far as to iscorporate in its legislative language saleguards against government involvement in religious activity. It specified statutory prohibitions against govern-ment trying to influence the form of content of such meetings, from requiring any stu-dent to participate in the meeting, or spending public funds beyond the cost of providing the meeting space.
What it simply tried to do is insure that student religious groups who wished to hold a meeting on school property be able to use that

In DSC Recital 50th Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. CARROLL R. AVERY, of New Concord, Ky., were honored Sunday by their children in the home of The Rev. and Mrs. Jerry Norsworthy, Murray, Ky. in celebration of their 50th wedding

They were married in Halls May 27, 1934, by The Rev. H. L. Carter, with Mrs. Carter and Miss Margie Carter as attendants.

Mrs. Avery, the former Rebecca Wells, is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dee Wells, Halls. Mr. Avery is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Avery, of Halls and Gates, and the stepson of Mrs. Velma Avery, of Care Inn, Ripley.

They have a son, William C. Avery, of Pegram, and two daughters, Martha Nell Norsworthy, of Murray, and Linda Lee (Mrs. Clinton) Lester, of New Concord, and three granddaughters.

LORI ANN HARDY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Hardy, of Barr, will perform piano works by Bach and Haydn and a flute sonata by Handel in a recital at 8 p. m. May 31st at Dyersburg State College. She will be joined by clarinetist Gina Medlock, daughter of Mrs. Milton Medlock, of Halls, and 1982 graduate of Halls High School, in a performance of Mozart's 'Rondo'. Miss Hardy is a 1983 graduate of Halls High School and the 1983-84 recipient of the Bowde Poston Memorial Music Scholarship. She will share the recital with another freshman, Ramona
