Good News

Halls, Lauderdale County and the surrounding area received some welcome news last week when Tupperware Co. officials announced that some of the production equipment of the Jerome, Idaho, plant will be moved to the Halls plant thus creating additional jobs here.

The Idaho plant is being closed because of its isolation from shipping with all operations being moved either to Halls or to the Hemingway, S.C. plant. At the same time Tupperware is installing automatic shipping systems at the Halls and South Carolina plants relieving dealers of delivery responsibilities.

So far we have no firm information concerning how many Idaho employees will be coming to Halls but certainly several new families will be coming so we need to begin now to work to persuade them to locate here rather than other nearby towns. We need to show them that our schools, churches, playgrounds and recreational facilities will fit their needs.

The planned expansion at the two plants is estimated to cost about $60 million and will be about equally divided. Estimates of the new jobs at Halls have been varied ranging from 50 to more than 100. The news that the Halls plant is still a strong part of the Tupperware plan is welcome as are the new jobs.

Another Newcomer

As yet we have not met the new principal of Halls High School, John Sammons, but we have been hearing good things about him. Our niece, Ann Burchfiel, has had two sons to graduate from Dyer County High School during the past three years and has a daughter still attending Dyer County High. She speaks very highly of Mr. Sammons and thinks he will be an asset to our school system. His credentials are outstanding with many years experience as an assistant principal as well as assistant and head football coach at the Newbern schools.

We hope that he will be in Halls in time to see and be a part of the Halls Street Festival and begin to become acquainted with the people of Halls.

Attend The Festival

There will be something for everyone this week as the 12th annual Street Festival reaches its climax. Attractions range from Saturday night's fireworks at Crichfield Park, an antique car show, tennis tournament, arts & crafts show, sidewalk sales, street dances with something happening each day with the closing of the Festival with a Union Church Service at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Park.

Crime Stoppers Offer Rewards

- Burners of 140 rolls of hay, valued at $2,000, owned by Tommy Caldwell, the night of June 19th.

Halls Mayor Tells Police Curfews To Be Enforced

Halls Mayor Pat Higdon has advised the Halls Police Department to enforce a curfew on persons under 18 between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m., and all persons over 18 from midnight to 4 a.m.—plus a ban on "yelling" from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

In a letter to Halls residents, she cites 10 other town ordinances (or state laws) she has advised police to enforce:

"Stop for all stop signs and traffic lights. (State Law)

"It is illegal to drink beer on streets or in public. (Ordinance)

"It is illegal to sell beer and/or tobacco products to a minor. It is also illegal to furnish a minor with beer and/or tobacco products. (State Law)

"Obstructing streets, alleys, or sidewalks is prohibited. (Ordinance)

"Grass or weeds over one foot must be cut. If not, the City will cut the vegetation and the owner will be billed.

"Junkyards must be surrounded by close-fitting plank or metal solid fences touching the ground on the bottom and 6' or more in height. (Federal and State Law, Ordinance)

"Three wheelers and four wheelers cannot be driven on anything but private property. (State Law)

"Moped operators must have a driver's license, helmet, and tags. (State Law)

"Littering is prohibited. (State Law)

"BB Guns as well as firearms are not to be discharged in the city limits. (Ordinance)"

"Neither I nor the policemen have a choice," Higdon says in her letter; "we cannot be selective in what we enforce.

"The situation of obeying traffic signs and lights in our Town is quite serious. Although it is irritating to stop when we are in a hurry, we must protect the lives of our citizens. Dead people can't purchase one thing from our Uptown Merchants."

Higdon said Monday the yellow caution light will show longer on the traffic signal at Main and Church.

Police Chief Buddy Moore says police are ticketing vehicles parked on sidewalks or parked the wrong way on streets downtown.

"To avoid continued abuse, the tennis courts have been locked. Players may get the key from the Water Plant and return it immediately after play is completed....

"Our Town has continually grown in the last 10 years, increasing the number of services to the citizens. However, instead of adding to the personnel at City Hall to meet these needs, we have actually lost and not replaced part of our workforce. Therefore, to keep the present tax base and still keep our Town attractive and progressive, we must call on you to assist us.

"First, call City Hall to report your needs. The office personnel at City Hall will make a notation and get the request to the proper department for action. If, after a reasonable length of time, your problem is not solved, then contact me or your aldermen.

"Second, we are working diligently to take care of our grass and weed problem. We call on you to help us by keeping weeds and grass down around your property. If you notice grass in the street in the front of your house, pulling it up will help us expedite getting our Town in shape. By citizens helping with this problem, we can focus our attention on other things that need to be done—thus keeping our tax rate low.

"Third, to avoid complications, always call City Hall for a permit before altering your property or building. Zoning ordinances are designed to preserve the value of your property and should be enforced....

"The complete minutes of each Board Meeting will be posted on the City Hall Bulletin Board. "My summer office hours are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and I invite you to visit or call during this time."

Meat Identity Team Excels

County 3rd Graders Lag In Math & Reading Tests

Lauderdale County's third graders placed last—the only students to show no improvement—among those of adjacent counties, in state tests on reading and math in average percent of objectives mastered.

The drop was sharp in both areas—eight points, to 75 in reading, and seven points, to 80, in math.

Third graders rated four points below the state average in reading but now even with the state average in math.

In reading, Crockett gained 10, to 89; Dyer 1, to 87; Haywood 10, to 82; and Tipton 1, to 78. All topped this county's 75%, down from 83%.

In math, Dyer gained 1 to 91; Crockett 4 to 85; Haywood 4 to 80; and Tipton 2 to 78. Only Tipton trailed Lauderdale County, by two points, after a 7-point plunge in the Lauderdale County test scores.

Sixth grade reading tests showed county students up six points to the state average, 76—trailing Crockett, up 21 to 90 and Dyer, up 8 to 84, but ahead of Tipton, up 8 to 73, and Haywood, up 12 to 68.

Sixth grade math tests showed county students off two points to 67, still a point above state average; Crockett up seven to 77, Dyer off one to 71, Haywood up three to 61, Tipton unchanged at 55.

Eighth grade reading tests rated county students up eight points to 83, with the state average, Crockett, and Tipton up seven to 82; Dyer up three to 87; and Haywood up 16 to 84.

Eighth grade math tests put county students up eight points, to 75, three over the state average; Dyer up four to 82, Crockett up three to 80, Tipton up five to 72, Haywood up five to 68.

Figures Poorly Based

Despite great expense, the state tests provide no firm conclusions, only a general indication of trends, due to the small samples tested.

Tested in this county were 351 third graders, 321 sixth graders, and 176 eighth graders.

Some school systems tested had 20 or fewer students in each category, not a sound basis for statistics.

Erratic fluctuations in test results also suggest that the tests are poorly devised and/or that some school systems are not administering the tests (or are not reporting the results) honestly.

Nevertheless, the state Dept. of Education widely disseminates the results of its tests, putting them on file in every major library and computer data base—thus reported here.

The mace, originally a weapon of the Middle Ages, is today a club-shaped staff used as a symbol of authority. The mace used in the U.S. House of Representatives is about three feet long.

An old superstition had it that a newborn baby must be carried upstairs before it is carried down. This act supposedly guaranteed the child would rise in the world and have a successful life.

Celebration Independence Day

It is that special time of year when we pause and reflect on our great freedom and the price that has been paid for that freedom by the supreme sacrifice of untold millions of brave men who loved and cherished that freedom enough to die for it.

May our hearts swell with pride as we see OLD GLORY waving in the breeze...

May we think and know how much we have been blessed as a Nation...

May we fully understand that with great privilege comes great responsibility...

To our Nation, our Families, our Neighbors, and our GOD.

Pray that we may always be a free and independent nation.

TENNESSEE TRAVELER

Union Station Still Serves Travelers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - It seems like everybody who has lived in Nashville for very long has a personal attachment to Union Station. Whether seeing it first as a landmark on the city's skyline or remembering its use as the city's railroad station for three-quarters of a century, Union Station makes an impression.

A magnificant gray stone edifice, when it was completed in 1900 it represented a new era for the city, the ultimate in transportation and architecture.

Later, of course, the automobile became the major mode of passenger transportation. Nashville in the 1980s is looking forward to another era with a major airline hub and expansion at the airport, on the outskirts of the city. Downtown, within viewing distance of the station, Nashville's rapidly changing skyline includes four new highrises.

Like a "grand old lady" who watches the changes around her while still retaining a regal bearing, Union Station sat in disuse for a decade. The question of "what was to be done" about Union Station resurfaced many times as different ideas were discussed, until a local development firm came up with a workable plan and the financing to make it possible. With its renovation as an elegant hotel, the history of the former railroad station has been brought back into focus.

The interior of the building, with a little imagination assisted by the visual effect of the tall skylighted ceiling, almost echoes with the stories the building could tell. Young Nashvillians took their first train trips from this station - to go to school, to take a trip, or to visit relatives. The more dramatic scenes would include the men and women leaving Union Station on their way to war or new lives far away from home.

Union Station was constructed between 1898 and 1900 as the monument to two railroads - the Louisville & Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis. The L&N's chief engineer, Richard Montfort, designed the stone-faced brick terminal in an ornate style known as Richardsonian Romanesque.

No expense was spared, including wall sculptures, stained glass windows and other fine details. The opening was celebrated by the entire Nashville community, a growing city which reached 100,000 by the end of the first decade of the new century.

The story of Union Station - its years of use, period of disuse and now renovation - parallels similar accounts in other American metropolitan areas. The decline of the railroads after World War II was reflected in the maintenance of Union Station. When major repairs were ordered to Union Station by city inspectors in 1975, the L&N closed it instead. Three years later, Nashville's last passenger train, Amtrak's Floridian, made its final stop at the shed beside the old terminal.

After a plan to turn it into federal offices fell through, a financing plan was finally arranged from federal and private sources. Gulf Coast Development, Inc., the Gallatin, Tennessee company responsible for renovation and management of the hotel, has a 90-year lease to operate the city-owned building.

The renovation proved interesting for the developers, who were accustomed to building new hotels.

"We had very stringent guidelines to follow, since the hotel is a national historic site," said Leon Moore, president of Gulf Coast Development, Inc. "We had a lot of community support for the renovation and the craftsmen who worked with us appreciated the spirit of the building."

Working under federal guidelines which require remarkable detail in restoration, construction crews worked for 10 months in 1986 to open the Union Station Hotel on December 31. Luckily, the 128 stained-glass panels from the 40x80 foot lobby skylight had been removed and packed in crates for protection during its decade of disuse. The skylight has been restored in all its glory, and the station's elaborate plaster work was retouched with 24-karat gold leaf.

At either end of the lobby are bas-relief sculptures of an Egyptian pharaoh's chariot and a steam locomotive, symbolizing the evolution of transportation. Reclining on the arches along the side walls are 20 angel-like "Ladies Bountiful," each holding symbols of Tennessee commerce from the turn of the century.

The red oak woodwork throughout the lobby and gallery needed refinishing, but little repair. Turned spindles were replaced - identical to the originals - but increased in height for the staircases, which rise seven floors on either side of the lobby. Beautiful Tennessee marble was gathered from other locations in the building and used with existing pieces in the lobby.

The former newsstand area is now the hotel's front desk. On one side of the lobby is a huge stone fireplace, of the same Bowling Green limestone which makes the exterior distinctive.

The old railroad offices that opened onto the lobby's gallery have been turned into guest rooms, as have the building's attic and basement levels. The 128 guest rooms and suites are each different, shaped to fit the space available with ceilings at times as high as 17 feet.

The hotel has four restaurants, each with a different setting and atmosphere and menus ranging from gourmet to lighter fare. The railroad theme has not been exploited but, rather, employees are formally dressed and the historical theming is subtle.

"The building owns so many emotions, there was no way that we could reproduce that," said Richard Johnson, vice president of Gulf Coast Development, Inc. "The building represents a never-to-be-repeated era of history, and we wanted to preserve its place in the city and give it a vibrant future."

Lyndell Mitchell's Garden Featured

Mrs. Lyndell Mitchell, of Curve, was featured by William C. Bayne in his gardening column Saturday in The Commercial Appeal:

If you grew up in the Curve community, about six miles north of Ripley, Tenn., and if you were the oldest of 14 children and if you were allowed to work in the fields of your father's farm instead of being forced, you might like gardening as much as Lyndell Mitchell.

But you'd be hard pressed to do as well at it as she has. She raises sweet potatoes, beans, butter beans, squash and strawberries in the garden behind her home and still has time for 145 varieties of daylilies.

'I've already put up about eight quarts of beans,' she said last week, 'and I'm expecting to get some more.'

She sounded almost apologetic when she said she had not spaded up her garden this spring but had the garden turned by a friend with a tiller. But then, at 82 she was probably due a bit of a break.

'I do almost all my gardening in the mornings before the sun gets too hot,' she said. 'I have to rest in the afternoons.' But she said steady daily gardening helps keep the weeds away and the daily contact with the garden keeps her from falling too far behind in her work.

'I use a hoe or a fork to dig with,' she said, indicating that pesky weeds are best dug up rather than pulled from the garden.

Mrs. Mitchell retured from Sears, Roebuck and Co. about 16 years ago but stays in touch with her children—two teachers and an engineer—and a granddaughter who is a doctor at Baptist Hospital and another granddaughter who is a medical technologist at Methodist Hospital North.

Paying attention to the particular plants, she said, is about the best way to grow good, healthy specimens. For example, she said, one of her daylilies seemed to fade because of the bright sunlight and relatively high heat recently.

'I moved it to an area where it gets more shade, but still gets the morning sun. It's doing much better now.'

As for general rules for daylilies, Mrs. Mitchell recommends an area that gets at least partial sun, preferably in the mornings.

'I fertilize the plants once, early in the spring with about half a cup of 6-12-12 fertilizer, usually when they've reached the height of four or five inches. That gives them a good boost. Then when the blooms start, you need to make sure they're getting plenty of water. All this rain recently has been good for them.'

Mrs. Mitchell said she divides her plants with friends. 'They can usually be divided after about the second year and certainly in the third. Some do better than others.'

An occasional dusting with the insecticide like Sevin dust generally takes care of the insect problem, she said. 'About twice is all you ever have to worry about as far as the bugs are concerned.'

Daylilies have long blooming cycles although the blooms last only a day. Mrs. Mitchell said one of her varieties, 'Shaded Eyes,' bloomed all the way to frost. And she said she's lost only one to freeze, about three years ago.

If you've done it that long, been that successful, is there anything left to learn?

Yep.

'One of my friends covered her daylilies with oak leaves in the winter, like a mulch,' Mrs. Mitchell said. 'They seemed to like the organic material and the foliage was much darker than mine was.'

Mrs. Mitchell said she had heretofore just left the daylily foliage in place to protect the plants through the winter but she was planning on a new approach this year. 'I believe I'm going to try that with the oak leaves,' she said. 'It sounds good to me.'

Because of our fixed location, we have no access to anything resembling an aerial photograph of our Galaxy and know more about distant galaxies than about our own.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY — HALLS, TENNESSEE — JULY 9, 1987 — VOLUME 91—NUMBER 28

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

By Henry Murchison

Fight Pending

The recent announcement by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell that he is retiring has given President Reagan an opportunity to name a third member of the Court and at the same time has given the Democratic members of the U.S. Senate a chance to make life more difficult for the President.

The President has nominated Federal Court of Appeals Judge Robert Bork, a conservative, for the soon to be vacated spot on the Court. Democratic Senators already have begun their fight to deny Bork the appointment, claiming he is too conservative and will bring about backward steps by the Court.

They could be correct if you approve of legal abortion and several actions by the Court in recent years but we suspect that the major objective of the opposition is an attempt to embarrass the President. That is their privilege but is not in the best interest of the nation. The Court needs to be at its full strength so that the Court may operate as it should.

Perhaps Judge Bork should not get the appointment but playing politics is not the best way to handle the situation.

However, Judge Bork's conservative position may not be as strong as some allege. In several instances in the past the attitude and thinking of both liberals and conservatives have changed once they are a member of the Court. Remember Chief Justice Earl Warren, supposedly a conservative Republican when appointed by President Dwight Eisenhower, and just how liberal he turned out to be.

Judge Bork is highly qualified for the place on the Supreme Court and likely would prove to be an outstanding Justice.

An Enjoyable Fourth

Nell and your writer certainly had a fine Fourth of July weekend. Chuck, our younger son, and his wife, Lisa, of Marietta, Ga., arrived shortly after noon Friday along with their two cocker spaniels, Black Jack and Freckles.

Later in the afternoon Chuck and the writer along with David Nunn played golf on the Dyersburg course. The effort by us was only the third time we had tried to play since October, 1978, when we first began to have eye problems. Don't ask what we shot because it is top secret but we may reveal we needed a calculator.

Saturday morning we drove to the Peach Patch at Ripley hoping that we might get some peaches for home made ice cream. Carol Walker was kind enough to give us some bruised and overripe peaches that were just right to put in the ice cream. Later in the afternoon we froze the cream and consumed most of it before time for the fireworks Saturday night.

Nell and Lisa went to town to look over the arts & crafts show and other features of the Street Festival while Chuck and I took care of the dogs.

They left shortly after 11 a.m. Sunday but not before one of the dogs, probably Freckles, had sampled the first ripe tomato from our six tomato plants.

It had been quite some time since Lisa had been here so we found the past weekend to be a special one.

Centenarian Saluted

EDMONIA FERGUSON, center, of 325 N. Church, Halls, was honored Wednesday of last week (Centenarians Day) at Halls Senior Citizen Center. She was born in this county Sept. 11, 1885. A gift was presented by Sophronia Taylor, right, Center director, and Mayor Pat Higdon, left.

Halls Ups Employees 5% But Holds $1.16 Tax Rate

Halls' city board voted unanimously Monday evening to adopt a budget including 5% pay increases for city employees but retaining the real estate tax rate at $1.16 per $100 assessment.

A 5-1 vote elected Charles Dyer, of Dyersburg, son of the Neil Dyers, of Halls, city attorney, succeeding J. Thomas Caldwell, of Ripley. Alderman Stan Young nominated Dyer, with a second from Tommy Simmons. Randy Harris nominated Ashley & Ashley, of Dyersburg, but could muster no other votes.

Re-elected unanimously were Katie Davis, recorder (authorized up to five hours a week over-time); Johnny Hale, utility superintendent; and Paul "Buddy" Moore, police chief.

Mayor Pat Higdon appointed Harry Wright, Sr., building inspector and her predecessor as mayor, Sammie L. Arnold, as Industrial Board chairman.

She noted that Steve Levy, who has moved to San Francisco, Calif., is still listed on the board and will likely be replaced.

Curfews Retained

Randy Harris, with a second from Tommy Simmons, moved repeal of curfews which Mayor Higdon wrote Halls residents she has advised Halls police to enforce:

- On persons under 18 between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m.
- On persons over 18 from midnight to 4 a.m.

Their effort failed, 4-2.

Mayor Higdon noted a "clarification" her letter did not provide—that the curfews apply only to persons stirring in those hours "unneccessarily."

A Fourth Of July Salute To The Drafters Of The U.S. Constitution

If you're like me, you've been looking forward to the long July 4th holiday weekend as a chance to relax, spend some extra time with the family, and enjoy the pleasures of summer.

This year, though, I propose an addition to the usual Fourth of July activities. I propose that at some point we all pause to offer thanks for those gentlemen who, 200 years ago, spent an entire, sweltering summer in Philadelphia, hard at work on a Constitution for their infant nation.

The Constitutional Convention began on May 25, so it was still spring when the delegates left home back in 1787. For many, the journey by horseback or coach was a grueling one, requiring days and days on the road.

The travelers set off with varying degrees of reluctance and apprehension. They had no illusions that their task would be an easy one.

Their leader, George Washington, had first insisted he would not attend at all. After the rigors of the War for Independence, he wanted nothing more from life than a quiet existence at Mount Vernon, his Virginia plantation.

Like many of the others, he feared it would be impossible to construct a document that would ensure the survival of the Union. But a strong sense of duty made him yield to pleas that his presence was essential, and Washington made his way to Philadelphia.

Benjamin Franklin was another who had already served his country well. An old man of 82, feeble and gout-stricken, he deserved to spend his remaining days at rest. His skills as a compromiser were needed, however. Since he couldn't remain on his feet long enough to make a speech, Franklin simply had a fellow Pennsylvanian deliver his speeches for him.

The delegates argued their way through June, July, and August. They were men of passionately held views, and it took months of intense debate for those views to be meshed and merged into a single document.

But finally, on September 17, the final draft of the Constitution was approved and the weary delegates could go home and resume their normal lives.

Now, 200 years later, we cherish the product of their long summer. On this Fourth of July weekend, let us salute not just the Declaration of Independence, but also the Constitution and those who wrote it.

WALKING Wisdom

About 60 million Americans are avid walkers. They've found walking to be a low-impact exercise. Only one and a half times a walker's weight is exerted on the body with each stride as compared to three to six times for a runner.

In an effort to let more American's know about the benefits of walking Mazola corn oil sponsors the U.S. Race Walking Team and the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team. For information on walking, send 25¢ to: The Health Walk Handbook from Mazola corn oil, Dept. HW-N Box 307 Coventry, CT 06238.

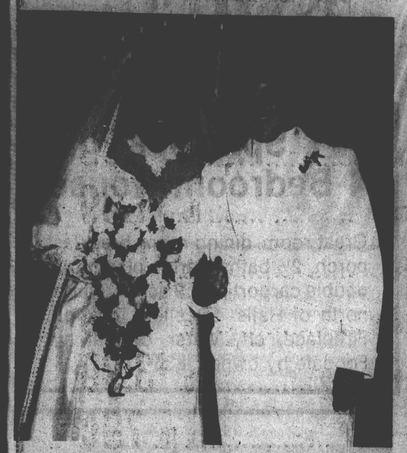
Vows Pledged



MR. AND MRS. JEFFREY HAROLD MCCOMMON pledged double ring vows at 7 p.m. June 13th in Macedonia Baptist Church at Edith, with its pastor, The Rev. Jerrell Dawson, officiating amidst candelabra, twined with peach roses and wild flowers, holding glowing white and peach tapers.

Pews were marked with peach silk bows; the register table held an arrangement of white roses with peach tapers.

The bride, Brandy Leigh Olds, daughter of Jim Olds, of Route 3, Ripley, and Mrs. Reba Riley, of Dyersburg, was given by her father in a flowing gown of rich antique satin topped by a Victorian collar of lace above a sheer neck-line trimmed with lace. Arms and waist featured matching lace.

A floor-length veil of white illusion was accented with satin and lace.

The bride carried a cascade of white and peach flowers with baby's breath and lace.

Kristy Burns, of Dyersburg, was maid of honor, in a peach satin dress over-laid with ivory French lace.

Other bridal attendants were Michelle Brown, of Ripley, and Kim Phillips and Melinda Thurmond, of Halls, in tea-length peach taffeta gowns over-laid with peach lace.

Bouquets were miniature peach roses with lace.

Candie Colvin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Olds, of Ripley, was flower girl, in a gown of peach taffeta, with a matching sash. In her hair were peach wild-flowers with baby's breath.

Alan Pittman, son of Mrs. Carol Collins, of Halls, was ring-bearer.

Best man was Ellis Baskin, of Brighton; groomsmen were Johnny Gillon, of Halls, and Steve Mayfield and Ray Missildine, of Ripley.

The bride's mother wore a tea-length peach dress accented with ivory roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Harold McCommon, of Route 1, Burlison, chose a street-length dress of teal with a white lace collar.

Each mother wore a corsage of white roses with baby's breath, tied with peach ribbon.

The groom's sister, Mrs. Lynn Sanders, of Burlison, was organist. Vocalists were Rhonda Dawson, of Ripley, Tracie Taylor, of Halls, and Jason Sergeant, of Jackson.

Selections included It Was Almost Like A Song, You and I, Longer, You Needed Me, I Honestly Love You, and If, plus Whither Thou Goest during the vows.

For the reception at the church, hosted by the groom's parents and Mrs. Joan Olds, of Ripley, tables held an arrangement of white silk roses with peach candles and small candelabra holding peach and gray candles.

Peach wedding bells topped a cake, decorated with peach flowers, served with mixed nuts, mints, and punch.

Assisting in serving were the groom's sisters — Mrs. Eddie Kellum and Mrs. Paul Alan Turner, of Burlison, and Mrs. Dennis Peeler, of Covington.

Leanne Johnson, of Gates, and Jennifer Olds, of Ripley, kept the guest register.

The rehearsal dinner was in the home of the Charles Browns in Ripley.

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

Needed Now

From time to time we have written of the need for funds to maintain Halls Cemetery and urged that dues be paid promptly and generously.

For the most part the response has been gratifying and enough to carry on the annual expenses. However this year donations have lagged and funds are virtually exhausted with about half of the maintenance year remaining.

Halls has always had a neat and well cared for cemetery and there is no reason why this cannot continue to be true. Take time today to send that check that you have been intending to send and perhaps some of you who have already paid can contribute a little more. Checks should be made to Halls Cemetery Association and mailed to Eugene Pugh, Route 1, 672 Sumrow St., Halls, TN 38040 or Bank of Halls, P.O. Box 8, Halls, TN 38040.

Curfew Controversy

If we were smart we would leave the controversy strictly alone but no one ever accused us of being smart.

There have been claims that the curfew is a violation of a person's civil rights but we believe that it will be found that the curfew is perfectly legal and within the authority of city officials to enforce.

We agree that persons going to and from work and otherwise carrying on normal activities should not be bothered and don't think they will be but the use of alcohol and drugs, fights and small crimes such as vandalism, petty theft, and similar actions apparently are growing. The police need the curfew to help keep such activities under control.

If police begin to misuse the law that is the time to begin to make provable claims to city officials. Every parent who cares for their sons and daughters should think long and hard before urging the dropping of the curfew law.

Probably Useless

As we wrote quite some time back it is our feeling that the Congressional hearings on the Iran-Contras alleged scandals are a waste of time and the taxpayers money. A special prosecutor has been appointed and has instigated investigations which place the blame if any where it belongs with indictments following if they are indicated.

The hearings are simply efforts by members of Congress to be in the spotlight and Democrats to embarrass President Reagan and the Republican party. We have listened to quite a bit of the hearings and have been impressed with Col. North's composure and ability to handle the situation. The hearings could have an unexpected and to many an undesirable result—the making of Col. North into a national hero.

The Congress has plenty of urgent and important business which they need to turn their attention to such as the budget, the confirmation of a Supreme Court Justice, and other national matters. They should end these hearings as quickly as possible and get back to their real reasons for being on the taxpayers' payroll.

Doing Well

Wednesday of last week on ABC television program, "Good Morning, America," a segment centered on two minor league baseball teams, one in Maine and the other in Salinas, Calif. David, who helped his college baseball team, the University of Central Florida, win the Division II World Series in 1985, is now the property of the Seattle Mariners and is highly rated by the Mariners. David got his first professional no hitter three weeks ago. Dr. and Mrs. McCorkle have recently been in California to visit their son and see him play.

Governor At Fort Pillow

GOV. NED McWHERTER visited Fort Pillow State Prison for lunch Tuesday on one of his 'listening tours.'

With Commissioner of Corrections Steve Norris, he met with the prison staff and its Inmate Council.

He said the prison will be expanded by 640 beds in 'a state of the art' structure a few hundred yards from the present central building.

'I'm impressed with this facility,' he said. 'I have visited it before, but it looks better now that it ever has. It is a very clean prison. They are making a lot of progress here.

'I'm interested in making contacts with frozen food industries about the food grown on the farm.'

Fate Of Closed Schools Eyed

Dr. Arden Butler, of Ripley, was named to the County Nursing Home board and Eugene Pugh, of Halls, to the agriculture committee.

Larry Beard Home Gutted By Flames

The interior of the brick home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Beard on Steelman Road, three miles southwest of Halls, was entirely destroyed by a fire of undetermined origin shortly before noon Thursday of last week.

A passerby noticed smoke coming from the house and called Mr. Beard at work. Mr. Beard notified the Halls Fire Department, but the interior and its contents were beyond saving.

Halls firemen suggested lightning during a storm earlier Thursday may have struck wires leading into an appliance in the kitchen to cause the fire.

A Report for Tennesseans

New Approach Needed In Providing Federal Aid To Our Nation's Cities and Counties

I recently had the great honor to receive the "Legislator of the Year" award from the National Conference of Mayors. Certainly, I was very gratified to be recognized by the Mayors. But the problems of our cities, and most stikingly, our depressed rural counties are severe and getting worse.

During my tenure in the Senate, I have worked to ensure that our cities, as well as our rural municipalities and counties have been provided funding through such programs as federal revenue sharing, the Urban Development Action Grant and the Community Development Block Grant. These programs have played a vital role in the continued economic development and growth of our nation's cities and towns.

During the last six years, federal assistance to state and local governments has decreased dramatically. While total government spending has increased by some 25 percent, grants to state and local governments have been reduced by as much as 26 percent.

This year, local governments who relied on federal revenue sharing funds will be faced with having to make reductions or cuts in vital services or else initiate a hefty tax increase.

In many cases the affected counties are communities which have been shaken to their economic foundations by the loss of agricultural export markets, plant shut downs resulting from a flood of imported goods, and by lay-offs in a heavy industrial sector that is no longer competitive in the world market. Sadly, county after county in Tennessee falls into this category.

In city areas, additional cuts in CDBG's and UDAG's have made it increasingly difficult to provide badly needed assistance to our cities and counties.

It is clear that a new approach to providing federal aid for our cites and rural communities is needed. We know that programs such as federal revenue sharing do work. What is needed is is a well-defined program of targeted federal assistance for distressed cities and counties, with a clear, systematic definition of what "distressed" means.

I recently held hearings in Tennessee and in Washington outlining this approach, and I hope to offer legislation in this session of Congress which will prudently and frugally fill the gap left by revenue sharing and cuts in other programs providing federal assistance to our urban and rural areas for continued economic development and growth.

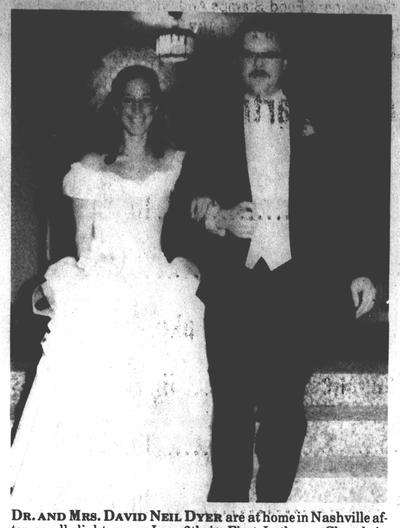
Vows Said



DR. AND MRS. DAVID NEIL DYER are at home in Nashville after candle-light vows June 6th in First Lutheran Church in Nashville and a wedding trip to Hawaii.

Dr. Dyer, of Nashville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil A. Dyer, of Halls, claimed his bride, Janina Elizabeth Franks, in a ceremony conducted by The Rev. Eric Pearson, pastor of St. Andrew's Lutheran Church in Franklin.

She was given by her father, J. N. Franks, Jr., of Franklin, in a Renaissance gown of blush pink silk shantung. Pearls and crystal beads encrusted the off-the-shoulder bodice and a lace tiara holding a finger-tip veil of imported illusion, on which pearls were scattered. A full side-bustle skirt, with silk roses at the hips, flowed into a cathedral train.

The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis nestled in tulle and tied with white satin ribbons.

Her sister, Mrs. Daniel Lucas, of Franklin, was matron of honor. Other bridal attendants were other sisters, Shannon Franks, of Franklin, and Mrs. Douglas Bowman, of Fort Myers, Fla., and a niece, Tiffan Hall, and Mrs. James C. Franks, of Franklin.

Their gowns of petal pink silk shantung featured long-torso sleeveless bodices and low back detail with bows of the same material at the waist. They carried pink roses in tulle, tied with white ribbons.

Flower girls were six nieces of the bride—Blakely Elizabeth Franks, Kathleen Franks Hale, Amanda Franks Galbreath and Ashley Ryan Galbreath, of Franklin, and Rebecca Lee Williford and Sarah Jane Williford, of Columbia—and a cousin, Lillian Ruth Owen, of Nashville.

They wore gowns of imported white batiste with embroidered collars and white satin sashes. Their white crocheted baskets, decorated with sweetheart roses and ribbons, held rose petals.

Charles T. Dyer, of Dyersburg, was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Donald Connell and Dr. Larry Gurley, of Nashville, Rick Lazure, of Halls, and William Hunter Williams, Jr., of Blytheville, Ark. Ushers included Ben Armstrong and Lex Bonner, of Memphis, and Holice Gilliland, of Brentwood.

The bride's son, Brandon Jenkins, of Franklin, was ring bearer, in a white linen Eton suit.

The bride's mother wore a gown of wisteria crepe, with a bodice featuring imported lace. The groom's mother chose a gown of sea-foam silk crepe embellished with bugle beads. Each mother wore a white gardenia corsage.

Ralph Ericson, organist, and Bart Sharp, trumpeteer, provided music and accompanied Shannon Franks for Mozart's O Lord On High and Malotte's The Lord's Prayer.

In the reception in the Grand Ballroom of the Hermitage Hotel in Nashville, Ron Shuff's Review Orchestra played for dancing.

Hearings Comments

As might have been expected much of local conversation during the past two weeks has been about the testimony of Lt. Col. Oliver North and Admiral John Poindexter at the Congressional hearings on the Iran Contra affair.

We have had many and varied comments. Some of them amusing, some that are serious and a couple that are somewhat disturbing. Most of the comments were in support of Col. North, many were not impressed with Admiral Poindexter and many still feel that despite testimony President Reagan had prior knowledge of the actions of Col. North and the National Security Council.

Probably the most amusing statement came in a telephone call from a friend last Wednesday. He said that he had learned one thing while watching the hearings, "If a person is a failure at everything else, he or she is qualified to be elected to Congress." The caller along with most others with whom this writer talked was not impressed with the Congressional committee.

A friend in Dyersburg said that the suggestion has been made that all charges against Col. North be dropped and the Congressional Committee be investigated. It seems that many doubt the motives of the Committee and that it is serving no good purpose. Many feel that the hearings should be dropped.

One statement that concerned this writer was made by a close friend when asked what he thought of Col. North. He said, "I don't trust him, that kind of All-American hero scares me to death. They lead us into war."

It does seem that more and more the American people have less confidence in their government. However, there is another side that the American people need to realize. There is no way that the government can operate without some covert action and some secrecy. We heard only a portion of a statement by one senator that we did not identify supporting claims that Congressional leaders leak information given to them. He was not defending the actions of Col. North and Admiral Poindexter but explaining why the distrust existed.

In another interesting comment the Dyersburg friend said he had been listening to a TV program in which some one was trying to explain just what a "conservative communist" is. My friend says that it can't be done, there isn't any such animal.

Purely Personal

Maybe some of you remember that we complained a couple of weeks ago that one of Chuck's and Lisa's cocker spaniels had eaten the first ripe tomato from our vines. Well, it has been replaced. The tale had an unexpected result. Tomatoes have been brought to us with the remark that the donor noticed that Freckles had eaten ours. Maybe we can think of something else that Freckles will eat such as steak, pies, cakes, etc.

Other vegetables and fruit have been given to us and one neighbor arrived with several ears of fresh corn. He said that he didn't know if it was too hard or not but that the price was right. The corn was delicious and the price was right. Incidentally, we have never eaten so well but as a result have gained about five pounds. Don't worry about it—we will lose it after the fresh vegetables are gone.

Countian Aided Stark Families

Kevin S. McWilliams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McWilliams, of Curve, has received a letter of appreciation from Rear Admiral L. G. Perry for his service as a watch team member at the reception center at the Jacksonville, Fla., International Airport for the arrival of families of crew members killed aboard USS Stark.

"Particularly noteworthy was the courteous manner and sense of empathy shown by you while assisting the family members," Admiral Perry writes. "Your conduct and representation of the Navy was exemplary."

Kevin and his wife, Diana, have two daughters, Amber and Tiffany.

Kevin will report in October to San Diego, Calif., for a school before assignment to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Monty McWilliams Signs With Martin

Monty McWilliams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry McWilliams, of Halls, a 5-10, 155-lb. infielder, has signed a letter of intent to play baseball next season for the University of Tennessee in Martin.

McWilliams logged impresive numbers for Coach Andy Pugh at Halls High School.

Playing mostly first base, McWilliams had a .638 batting average and hit seven home runs.

CAF Members Re-Visit Halls

Thirty members of the Volunteer Wing of the Confederate Air Force, based in Memphis, came to Halls last weekend as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Higdon for a barbecue at their home on West Main.

Interested in the restoration and preservation of World War II aircraft, this Wing was a central figure in staging the Homecoming '86 air show in Halls last summer.

Late Saturday afternoon, the group went to City Hall to see the mural, "Tribute", painted by Ernie Berke in 1945 at the Dyersburg Army Air Base.

Among the guests from Memphis were Don Argall, Rick Bonds, Susan Francis, Bernie and Darlene Gilding, Ron and Jimmie Grasso, Duane Hicks, Jack and Jean Kelly, John and Rosette Robertson, Don and Barbara Santoro, Michelle Higdon, and Terrel Roberts.

Other guests were Glen and Rachel Goddard, of Corinth, Miss., Jeff and Vicky Nichols, of Olive Branch, Miss., Doug and Cynthia Peoples, of Collierville, Billy Emily, and Tim Bivens, of Dyersburg, and Ozzie Harrell, of Halls.

Gene and Margaret Johnson, of Raleigh, also joined in the fun. Gene was one of the WWII veterans, featured in the Homecoming '86 video, who flew 50 missions over Europe in WWII.

Loan To Halls Firm Will Create 48 Jobs

Gov. Ned McWherter has approved a $327,000 Community Development Block Grant loan to Tennarkymo Industries, of Halls, to expand its production of aluminum windows and vinyl storm windows, Halls Mayor Pat Higdon reports.

The company will add $178,014 of its own funds for the land acquisition, plant construction, and purchase of equipment projected to increase employment from 22 to 70.

The Town of Halls applied for the loan, which the state allocated from federal funds.

Brown Is Held For Assault, Burglary

Veris S. Brown, of 510 N. Church, Halls, was arrested by Halls police about 10:25 p.m. Sunday, within half an hour after they received a complaint from Mrs. Nadine Kilpatrick, of Hall St., in east Halls.

Mrs. Kilpatrick identified the woman as having been in her home earlier that evening and as having entered it again, through a rear window, to break her wrists and steal her hand-bag.

The bag, containing money, was recovered, police report.

Brown was jailed in Ripley, charged with aggravated assault and burglary.

Halls History

By Mrs. Mary Alsobrook

The Halls High School Class of 1930 held a class re-union about this time last year. Fred Whitaker, master of ceremonies, was assisted by Pansy Perry Holtsford, Emogene Chaney Griffin, and Elizabeth Nunn Palmer in getting the affair together. They invited others to attend who were in high school when they were.

Fred, who lives in Deming, N.M., has begun to make plans for the next re-union of the class. It was decided that it would meet again in 1988. Visitors present—Frances Moore Hendren, 1928; Charles Rooks, 1929; Lois Brandon, 1931; Charles Alsobrook, 1932; and Mary Alsobrook, 1933—agreed to organize and meet with them.

As I can recollect, there has not been a gathering such as this since H. G. Conley Day some 25 years ago.

Pansy, Emogene and I have decided that a weekend in the latter part of October,1988, would be a cool time and most convenient to most people. This gives us a little more than a year to complete plans.

Friday morning, I visited Mrs. Lillie Throgmorton in her apartment in the Old Hanna Hotel apartment building. She is living there while restoration and improvements are being made. She has lived there this time for about two years.

The mantels in her living room and bedroom are the originals and are beautiful.

She has the four rooms on the east side downstairs that have always been the choice apartment since the building was converted from a hotel.

People I have visited there were the Frank Thompsons, the E. T. (Rocky) Palmers, and the Alvin Hallmans.

The only other apartment occupied now is on the front southwest side. Mrs. Virginia Archer lives there. Virginia's husband was the late Sam Archer, a member of the Archer Quartet until his death.

Virginia stays with Mrs. Grace Terry—Little Bits, as she has been known by everybody in Halls since she opened her beauty shop here some 50-odd years ago—who is not well.

I remember when I was in high school she hired me to do nothing but shampoos a few days when she was especially busy.

Her husband, the late Pedro Terry, had the most popular restaurant here, really a drive-in, as it and all the drug stores gave curb service.

Little Bits lives in her pretty brick home on Church St. between Halls Funeral Home and First United Methodist Church. Her house was built by the late Mr. and Mrs. Algie Hargett, who lived there with their daughter, Jane, until they built their home on College St.

Little Bits first had her shop in half of the Vera Hilliard Building, where the funeral home is now. When they bought the house, she moved her shop into it. They lived with their son, Royce, in "Miss" Willie Vaughn's boarding house on South College (the old Dr. Chatman home) which Joe McCarthy owns and has turned into apartments.

Many stories could be told about those who boarded with "Miss" Willie. Her meals were delicious, and she had the kindest, most patient disposition of almost any lady I have ever known.

Back to the Old Hanna Hotel Apartment House—Mrs. Fred Jackson (Lucille Haste Jackson) sent me the following last week:

"Fred Jackson (was with the Air Force) and was transferred from the base in Great Falls Montana to Saudia, Arabia. He brought his family to Halls that included, his wife, daughters, Rebekah Louise, Rosalyn Ann (now deceased), and sons, Fred, Jr., and William Earl. Our apartment was on the lower level, south east, three big rooms, kitchen and bath.

"We moved into the building in June, 1950 and a few months later moved to the Pauline Raymond Hale duplex on College Street. The reason being a near tragedy. William Earl, preschool age, about two, had a fascination for trains and would run and watch every one that passed if he could.

"One day a south bound train had just passed and he began slowly walking toward the tracks. Rebekah Louise saw him just in time to run and grab him by the shirt and jerk him down the bank into the ditch. A north bound train was fast approaching. The decision was made to move before he really did get on the tracks.

"Bill and Mary Perry owned the building. Sewell and Lucille Hawkins lived in the upstairs west apartment, waiting for their home on Shannon Street to be built.

"The late Bob and Gladys Poindexter lived in the apartment before we did."

Thanks, Lucille. I have three other stories, not pertaining to the house, that are hidden in the clutter on my desk (a vanity dresser). Shoe (of the comics) has a desk and office most similar to this bedroom in which I write. My ambition is to write and use all the material I have stacked up here.

ED JONES

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

Last week the House voted for a 90-day delay of the Kuwaiti ship escorts by the United States. The reason for this delay is so that Congress can look more comprehensively at foreign policy in the Gulf region while not putting the lives of our own servicemen on the line unnecessarily while doing so.

President Reagan's Persian Gulf policy provides United States protection to Kuwaiti oil tankers in the gulf. This plan calls for the 11 tankers to fly the United States flag for protection while transporting oil from Kuwaiti to a port just outside the gulf. American warships would also escort the Kuwaiti tankers.

The proposal approved by the House delays the reflagging operation for three months to allow consideration of alternative strategies for ending the Iran-Iraq war. In addition, the goal of protecting the flow of oil through the gulf must be more fully considered.

There are differences of opinion about the effectiveness of the reflagging plan. Some say that the plan is doomed to tragic consequences because of the hostile combat aircraft operating there.

Furthermore, opponents feel that the policy could result in loss of American lives and the involvement of the United States in the Iran-Iraq war.

Supporters of the President's plan, on the other hand, argue that voting against the plan signals a lack of resolve to stand by commitments in the Middle East. This action would increase, rather than diminish, the risk of confrontation in the Persian Gulf.

Despite opposing views of the administration's policy, the State Department said there is no misunderstanding between the United States and Kuwait over the plan. United States warships would escort the reflagged tankers through the gulf to their destination, where the oil would be reloaded onto other ships.

This shuttle plan would require the tankers to make more round trips than originally planned. More escorts would be needed and therefore the United States would be protecting a bigger percentage of the oil exports from Kuwait. Some have warned that this could provoke a more hostile reaction from Iran, including the possibility of attacks on American ships.

Looming over the debate over the reflagging proposal is the memory of the recent attack on the U.S.S. Stark by Iraqi jets. The Stark attack was the second major incident in the Middle East in recent years on a major American military force. The first, of course, was the bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut. In both incidents, no action was taken against the attackers. American lives were lost and no clear reason was given in either case. A major question in this entire proposal is what happens if another attack is launched against American ships escorting Kuwaiti tankers or against one of the Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag.

There is no question that this is a serious policy question. Not only must we consider future actions in event of hostile actions, but we must also consider Soviet responses should the United States decide not to reflag these foreign vessels. Certainly, we should not expose our own forces to hostile attacks without understanding fully our anticipated response.

On the green scene: more than 20 million acres of lawns exist in the U.S.—representing one to two percent of our nation's land area.

A homing pigeon can fly at a speed of up to 60 miles an hour over a distance of 75 miles.

State Natural Areas: Guarding Tennessee's Natural Treasures

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- All over Tennessee there are pockets of natural beauty that have escaped the onslaught of man-made development -- places that remain much as they were before the first white settler set foot in Tennessee. The Natural Areas Preservation Act, passed by the Tennessee General Assembly in 1971, assures that these areas will remain forever undisturbed.

The natural areas program stands guard over a wide variety of Tennessee's natural treasures: virgin forests, majestic waterfalls, cavern systems, unique rock formations, deep gorges, and swamp-like bottomlands.

To date there are 30 state natural areas scattered around the state, emcompassing more than 50,000 acres. They range in size from the 18,000-acre area at Reelfoot Lake to the two-acre Natural Bridge site near Sewanee.

Some areas are extremely remote, others are easily accessible. Virgin Falls, for instance, requires a vigorous 4-mile hike across rugged terrain to reach the waterfall. In contrast, Radnor Lake State Natural Area is surrounded by residential developments, and the skyscrapers of downtown Nashville can be seen only six miles distant.

Despite their diversity, all natural areas have been developed with the same philosophy: the emphasis is on preservation, not recreation. When you visit a natural area, don't expect to find tennis courts, golf courses or other recreation facilities found at state parks. In most of the natural areas, the only evidence of man's intervention are the foot trails leading through the wilderness.

"These areas contain natural features or fragile ecosystems that must be protected from overuse," said Terry Bonham with the Division of Planning in the Tennessee Department of Conservation. "Therefore the regulations governing the natural areas are more restrictive than those of state parks.

"There are plenty of other municipal, state and federal parks designed for high-impact recreation. The Natural Areas program restricts the impact of man as much as possible."

In fact, some natural areas are not even open to the public. These shelter ecosystems so delicate that they could stand little if any intervention by man. A good example is the May Prairie, an 82-acre site near Manchester that protects the largest remnant of prairie lands in the southeastern United States.

"The greatest value of areas such as May Prairie lies in their contribution to scientific research and education," Bonham said. "All other uses are closely controlled to insure their preservation."

Not all state natural areas are actually owned by the State. Eleven areas in the system remain in private ownership, but their registration as State Natural Areas protects them from future development.

For example, Bowater Southern Paper Corporation, which owns more than 180,000 acres of timberland in Tennessee, has established four "pocket wilderneses" which are all open for public use and protected under the Natural Areas Preservation Act.

"Most of the company land is used as a timber source for Bowater," said James Hill with the Hiwassee Land Company, a division of Bowater. "But there are tracts of land that the company believes we should rightfully share with everyone. Timber cutting will not be permitted in these areas. They will be preserved just as they are for future generations."

Virgin Falls Pocket Wilderness, located in a remote section of White County southeast of Sparta, is named for one of the most interesting geological features in Tennessee. There is no visible stream leading up to the falls or away from it.

Virgin Falls was created thousands of years ago when a huge sinkhole collapsed, exposing a section of an underground river. The stream emerges from a cave, plunges more than 100 feet into the sinkhole, then disappears underground again.

The eight-mile trail is rated as difficult, and a primitive backpacker's camp is located near the falls. Keep in mind that all supplies must be carried on your back, so pack light!

Laurel-Snow Pocket Wilderness, named for two waterfalls flowing within the area, is located in Rhea County just west of Dayton. The trail leading through the 710-acre area was the first in Tennessee to be designated as a National Recreation Trail. In fact, it was the first in the nation to be designated on private land.

For the first few miles the trail follows Richland Creek through the bottom of the gorge, and is about as difficult as a stroll through a city park. The difficulty begins when you ascend the sides of the gorge to reach such points as Laurel and Snow Falls, and the Buzzard Point and Bryan Overlooks.

Laurel Falls drops some 80 feet into a gorge strewn with colossal boulders. Snow Falls is a smaller waterfall in an extremely rugged gorge on Morgan's Creek.

Both overlooks provide awesome views of the vast Tennessee Valley. On clear days the Great Smoky Mountains can be seen looming on the eastern horizon some fifty miles in the distance.

Of the four pocket wildernesses, Stinging Fork is the most easily accessible. Located five miles northwest of Spring City, the three-mile loop trail is rated moderate in difficulty. It meanders through a pine forest, and then drops through a series of steps and switchbacks to Stinging Fork Falls, a splendid 35-foot waterfall at the bottom of the gorge.

For information on these and other state natural areas, contact the Tennessee Department of Tourist Development, Room T, Box 23170, Nashville, TN 37202.

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

By Henry Murchison

Some Read It

Quite often we are stumped for something to write about in this column and begin to wonder just why we should continue but then a comment by some reader will give us an incentive to write at least one more column.

It has not been unusual for someone from our generation to comment about something we had written and say that they hoped we would continue but not many young people, especially teenagers, had ever indicated that they read or were interested in this column. However, some recent comments made this writer aware that some of them read it.

One youngster, still in high school, asked about our eyesight and stated that he hoped we could keep writing the Corner. He said that it is the first thing he reads each week.

Another slightly older youngster said that he had read our comments on the city curfew. He said he had opposed the curfew but at least now he understood some of the reasons for the ordinance. We suggested and he agreed that a small segment of teenagers, not all of them residents of Halls, is responsible for the problem and also agreed that other teenagers could help remove the need for the curfew.

A young lady who enjoys walking told us she had been reading our comments about the sidewalks and that she hoped we would write still more. Also she urged that drivers watch more closely those walking in the streets and also urged walkers to realize that they sometimes are difficult to see.

We are happy to learn that at least some young people are reading this column.

Another thing that keeps us writing is the occasional letter which we receive such as a recent letter from Johnny Vaden, of Memphis. Johnny wrote to say that he still has a wooden shaft golf club which we gave him along with some other old clubs almost thirty years ago when he lived across the street when we were living in the old home place. We hope that Johnny realizes he has a collector's item. He wrote that he is going to bring it with him sometime when he comes to visit his parents, the Judson Vadens. We look forward to seeing Johnny and the old club.

Crops Look Great

In the past two weeks Nell and your writer have been in portions of Lauderdale, Dyer, Gibson, Obion, and Lake counties. Everywhere we've been the crops looked great. It appears that for the first time in several years [illegible] look foward to a good harvest.

We hope that nothing happens to change this and that farmers receive good prices for their crops.

Trophy Won

SPORTSMANSHIP AWARD won by the Halls Babe Ruth All Star team in the district tournament in Halls was presented to Coach Trey Hurt.

Beset By Bees

HALLS FUNERAL HOME was invaded Monday evening by a swarm of bees which came up the street from the south. Noel Sherrod, owner, is trying to lure them into a hive.

STATE GRANT

West Tenn. Corrections, Inc., of Somerville, has received a state grant of $249,755 to provide alternative sentencing to about 60 convicts in Lauderdale, Tipton, Fayette, Hardeman, McNairy, Haywood, Crockett and Gibson counties.

Rain Benefits County Crops

By Charles T. Peal

By noon July 24th, four or more inches of rain had fallen in parts of the county, providing much needed moisture to all field crops.

Cotton in some areas needed rain. It is "topping out", partly from the effect of nitrogen depletion. Too, cotton is at least two weeks earlier this year.

A good crop of bolls appears, especially low on plants.

In many cases, producers sprayed early for thrips and plant bugs, probably a good practice.

Corn has not suffered too much, so the moisture should be enough to mature ears. A good yield is likely.

Soybeans, especially early ones with roots just under the soil surface, will benefit greatly.

Producers have worked hard this year to control Johnson grass and weeds. With good stands and a field free of weeds, plants should load well and produce good yields.

Young soybeans, planted after wheat, will really jump now, as heat, light, moisture, and fertilizer provide an ideal growing situation.

Tomato growers will probably have a "revival" as well. Size was a problem last week, as well as slow growth. This will provide longevity to sales.

Before the rains, farmers took advantage of dry weather to cultivate, spray weeds, clip pastures, and bale hay. This has been a good hay year.

The Best Firewood?

Which wood makes the best firewood has been debated around country store stoves for decades, on cold January evenings.

Depending on the criteria you use, the "best" firewood is certainly debatable.

Most experts agree the bottom line is heat value, usually measured as BTUs (British Thermal Units), assuming you are dealing with dry wood.

Available heat of one cord of wood in million BTUs is: White oak, 22.7; Red oak, 21.3; White ash, 20.0; Green ash, 18.3; Sycamore, 17.9; and Elm, 17.2.

There are other criteria, of course, such as availability, ease of cut, ease of splitting, ease of starting fire, and cost.

Whatever firewood species you select, remember you are staying warm with a renewable natural resource.

Keep Cows Profitable

No beef cow should see Oct. 1st without having been pregnancy-checked, reminds Jerry Parker, associate Extension agent.

"Open cows do not pay back any of the $300 per year feed costs," Jerry notes.

"If a cow is found open, it is much more profitable to sell her when she is fat rather than feeding her through the winter.

Once a cow is open, she will not conceive later.

Old cows should be culled before winter. Cows that have lost their teeth are hard-pressed to utilize winter feed.

Cattle are now profitable. To keep them so will require top techniques.

LA-200 For Pink-Eye

The Food and Drug Administration has approved Liquamycin LA-200 to treat pink-eye in beef and dairy cattle.

The product is a broad spectrum anti-biotic which delivers three days of therapy with one injection.

Land Costs Stabilize

After having fallen for five years, U.S. land values showed some stability in early 1987, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

A May 1st survey of rural appraisers and several surveys in Federal Reserve Banks in April noted a leveling in values in areas where values were still falling late last year.

As of Feb. 1st, the value of U.S. farm and ranch land averaged $548 an acre, down from $595 a year earlier and 33% below the 1982 peak of $823.

Land Need Fading

The U.S. can meet domestic and foreign demand for food in the year 2,030 with little more than half of available crop land, the Soil Conservation Service predicts.

With crop productiyity expected to increase only 218,000,000 acres will be needed by 2,030, out of 421,000,000 acres now available, the SCS says.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

A House Ways and Means subcommittee is looking into legislation that would possibly ban the sale of Toshiba products. The Senate has already approved an amendment to the trade bill that bars the sales from Japan's Toshiba and Norway's Kongsberg in the U.S. market for two to five years.

This action results from the recent sale of milling machines to the Soviet Union by Toshiba Machine Company. The propeller-milling equipment supplied by both the Japanese and Norwegian companies enabled the Soviets to make their submarines run with less noise and therefore, avoid detection by the United States. The machine tools also make new Soviet aircraft carriers more maneuverable. Obviously, those reckless sales of such sensitive equipment have had a negative impact on our country's national security.

If imposed, the ban will affect not only the Toshiba Machine Company, but also the entire Toshiba Corporation and its other affiliates. Toshiba Corporation, however, has said that the sale of militarily sensitive technology to the Soviet Union occurred without their knowledge. Toshiba Machine Company violated Japanese export control laws which affected not only themselves, but also their parent company Toshiba Corporation.

The top two executives of Toshiba Corporation have resigned their positions signifying the highest form of apology in Japanese culture. Although the parent company was not aware of the illegal shipments of submarine-quietening equipment to the Soviet Union, top officials took responsibility for their affiliate.

Toshiba is a major supplier of consumer and industrial electronics products to the United States. Consumer product items include television sets, tape recorders and refrigerators, as well as computers and electronics for industry. Certain items would be exempt from the ban, such as spare parts and components of products already in place or needed for U.S. production.

Because of the drastic measures being taken by the United States on this violation, U.S. allies are tightening their restrictions on exports of sensitive products. Major suppliers to America do not want to be cut out because of an export control rules violation.

The House has already passed a bill seeking damages from Japan and Norway through the State Department. Despite the attempts made by these countries to make amends, congress is still seeking a ban on their products.

To try and compensate, Toshiba has directed an American counsel to conduct an independent investigation of the matter in order to recommend appropriate corrective action. This would include a specific compliance program for all Toshiba group companies.

Lauderdale County Families Encouraged To Prepare Histories

Imagine owning a book that is over 100 years old containing historical articles about your ancestors, the towns they lived in, and personal stories about their lives. That's exactly what we're going to publish in Lauderdale County this year.

The Lauderdale County Historical Society is sponsoring the project of a written history of Lauderdale County, to preserve historical records for future generations. This will be from early days through 1987. It will consist of family histories, histories of the communities that were a part of this County, histories of churches, schools and businesses. This book will be unique as it is about the people and will be written by the people. We need and want your family biography of present family, of parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents, who have ever lived in this County from one day through many years. Each family unit is a separate story, and may be up to 500 words with one picture, at no charge to the family." Remember, today will soon be history for each of us, young and old alike.

For the family photos, please send copies of valuable or irreplacable pictures, and indicate the date, caption, and names of people in each picture. They will be returned after the book is published.

Also, your momentos of things that happened in the County will be appreciated to be included in the General History section. The deadline for the histories is October 15, 1987, but please send them before that date. Send your material to History Book, c/o Lauderdale Historical Society, P.O. Box 227, Ripley, TN 38063. Please mark on the outside of the envelope - HISTORY.

There is NO FEE to have histories in the book, but please consider buying this historical book. It is available on a pre-sale basis only. Only the number of books sold in advance will be printed. The price is $44.95 and $3.50 postage and handling: Tennessee residents add $3.37 sales tax. Your check or money order should be made out to: Lauderdale County History Book.

All money will be held in the local bank in Ripley until payment to the publisher.

"If your story requires more than 500 words, you may do so and will be billed at 15 cents per word over 500."

Going For All The Marbles

CELINA, Tenn. - If you think marbles is a game for children, you haven't met Dumas Walker, Bud Garrett, Russell Collins, Travis Cherry, Doyle Rhoten, Ralph Roberts, or the other men who hang out in the marbleyards of Clay County, Tennessee.

Around here, the game of marbles is a man's sport, particularly when there is prize money at stake, and the game they play is a far cry from the familiar ring scratched in the dirt.

"Ring marbles doesn't hold any interest at all for a good marbles shooter," Dumas Walker snorts disdainfully. "Whoever shot first would just wipe everybody else out."

The game they play here on the Tennessee-Kentucky border is called Rolley Hole. It is a game which has won new admirers and national recognition through exposure at such major national events as the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in Washington, D.C. and through national television coverage of such events as the National Rolley Hole Marble Championship held each August at Tennessee's Standing Stone State Park.

Rolley Hole is a team sport played on a rectangular marbleyard 40 feet long by 20 feet wide with three holes evenly spaced down the middle. The object of the game is for each two-person team to get their marbles into each hole in succession - down the court, back, and down again - three times.

It is not as easy as it sounds.

There are elements of golf in the game. There are also elements of pool - the careful consideration of angles and English - and there are elements of croquet. Knocking an opponent's marble away from the hole with your own is a perfectly acceptable part of the game's strategy.

"Rolley Hole is a game of strategy," explains Bud Garrett, a marble shooter for more than 65 years and a renowned maker of marbles for almost 50 years. "You've got to know when to lay back to protect your partner and when to go for the hole. When you get down to that last hole is when the fight really starts. A game between four good players might last an hour and half or more because nobody can make that last hole."

There are dozens of outstanding players around Celina, but few in the class of Dumas Walker. In his prime, Walker was the "Minnesota Fats of the marbles world." He is an almost legendary figure in these rolling hills. Walker and his long-time partner, Webb Lee, dominated the game for more than a quarter of a century until Walker broke his arm and retired from active competition.

"I just never could get the right English on a marble after that," he sighs. "When you've been the best, it's aggravating when you can't play the game as well as you used to."

Weak arm or not, Dumas Walker's skill at handling a marble is still formidable.

"You never just aim at the marble," he explains, knocking down on his hands and knees on the concrete floor of his little general store off Highway 52 just outside the tiny community of Moss with a three-quarter inch, hand-made flint marble cradled lovingly in the crook of his index finger. "You aim at a particular spot on that marble depending on where you want it to go."

His powerful thumb sends the marble rocketing across six feet of space. His target spins away a dozen feet. Walker's marble remains almost exactly in its place.

"A good shooter knows exactly where his opponent's marble will go and where his own will end up. I used to make most of my holes off somebody else's marble. I almost never went for the hole itself."

Like most of the top shooters, Dumas Walker wouldn't be caught dead with a store-bought marble in his pocket.

"They won't hold up in competition," Bud Garrett declares emphatically. "The marbles I make are tougher than agate."

Garrett's skill as a marble maker is almost as legendary as Walker's in handling them. His preferred material is flint, and he practices his craft on a home-made machine of his own design.

"In the old days, you'd find yourself a likely-looking piece of flint about the right size," he explains. "You'd knock the rough edges off and put it in a rounded-out piece of sandstone under a waterfall. The water would work it around on that sandstone until it was nice and smooth and round. It could take a year or more to make a marble that way."

Garrett's home-made marble-making machine has cut that time down considerably. It is also a tribute to man's ingenuity. Held together with scrap lumber and screen wire, it looks like something Rube Goldberg might have designed.

Garrett's [illegible] playing [illegible] and [illegible] top [illegible] marble [illegible] or more.

No one seems to know exactly why this particular [illegible] Tennessee-Kentucky border [illegible] such a hot-bed for marbles, but the area is literally full of marbleyards. They are located around schools and country stores, in barnyards, back lots and basements. A drive around the back roads will turn up marbleyards in the woods by the roadside, some of them complete with planks nailed between trees for bleachers. Some are even rigged with lights for night games.

"There are plenty of marbleyards where there's a game almost every night," Garrett says. "More than one corn crop around here has exchanged hands in a hot game of marbles, too."

Dumas Walker admits to having played the game for sizeable sums in his prime, and it is probable that many of the top competitors for the prize money at the August National Rolley Hole Marble Championship are likely to have placed a wager or two on their skill with a marble as well. It's the nature of the game.

Ceremony At Pool-Side

MR. AND MRS. ROBBY EDMOND SAYLES exchanged double ring vows June 27th in a pool-side ceremony at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nolen, at Nankipoo, with General Sessions Judge Willard Norvell officiating.

Hurricane lamps holding white tapers, accented with peach bows, lily of the valley and ivy, led guests to the pool terrace.

Lisa Sayles, of Memphis, registered guests at a table covered with a peach tablecloth, edged in ecru lace.

Vows were exchanged before an arbored deck draped with baskets of greenery. Hurricane lamps were placed around the deck.

The bride, Mary Helen Davis, was given by her father, Harold Tillman, of Halls. She wore an informal gown of white taffeta. The fitted bodice had a neck-line ruffled in lace. The slightly raised waist had a lace tiered skirt overlaid with a pick-up skirt of taffeta.

The bride carried a cascade of white silk roses, peach blossoms, stephanotis, and baby's breath tied with lace and satin ribbon. Baby's breath encircled her hair.

The bride's mother wore a dusty pink dress whose bodice featured a scooped neck-line with vertical pleats and cap sleeves. The groom's mother, Mrs. Mariorie New, of Somerville, wore a lilac dress whose bodice was overlaid with lace; the skirt was softly gathered. Each wore a gardenia corsage.

The glow of floating candles and hurricane lamps led guests past the pool to the reception table. Guest tables were covered with floor length cloths with arrangements of sonia roses encircling candles in votive cups.

The reception table was skirted with a peach cloth. Corners were caught with bows, miniature wedding bells, and ivy.

The 3-tier cake, featuring peach rose buds and white doves, was topped with an arrangement of peach roses, stephanotis, and baby's breath. The cake was served by Miss Barbara Ann Latham, of Halls. Jackie Parish, of Brownsville, poured punch.

The bride's brother and sister, Trey and Kelly Tillman, distributed bags of bird seed.
