Halls Retaining Sammie Arnold

Halls Mayor Sammie L. Arnold is not "moving to Jackson to manage a Taco Bell," as we said last week.

As reported in our Jan. 1st issue, he has purchased a Taco Bell franchise at 2330 N. Highland in Jackson, but it is being managed by his brother, Harold, formerly of Scottsboro, Ala., a veteran of Bohanza, Captain D's, and Dairy Queen franchises.

As also reported Jan. 1st, the Arnolds are moving to a home they have built on Medon-Maleus Road in Madison County, in the area in which Arnold was born, but it is not in Jackson.

Arnold says he plans to commute to Halls for a full work week in Arnold's Healthmart Drugs "for years."

Our apologies for wandering from precision in summarizing into 10 words our Jan. 1st report.

No Drug Rap Faces Halls 4th Graders

We are gratified by the response to last week's article by Lori Carter which carried the head-line, Halls Finds Fourth Graders On Drugs.

It indicates that the issue is of real concern in our county.

The head-line (not written by Lori) attempted to summarize (in six words) a half-column interview with Halls Police Chief Buddy Moore, in which he said that most drugs the police are confiscating from young people are found in medicine cabinets and sold or taken by younger children. Her article said even fourth graders are involved.

Neither Chief Moore, Lori's article, nor the head-line said that Halls authorities had found that Halls fourth graders are involved. But many readers jumped to that conclusion.

We should have edited both the article and the head-line more carefully to avoid that possibility.

"My article was meant only to cause an awareness among parents and citizens," Lori says.

"My article gave facts on drugs and the problems they can cause. It made no attempt to place any blame on anyone.

"I sincerely hope that you will all read the article again, and this time, keep an open mind about it.

"I urge you to get involved with the "Just Say No" program in Lauderdale County.

"Help get rid of drugs; that way, there can be no misunderstanding of who is or isn't to blame."

Honored

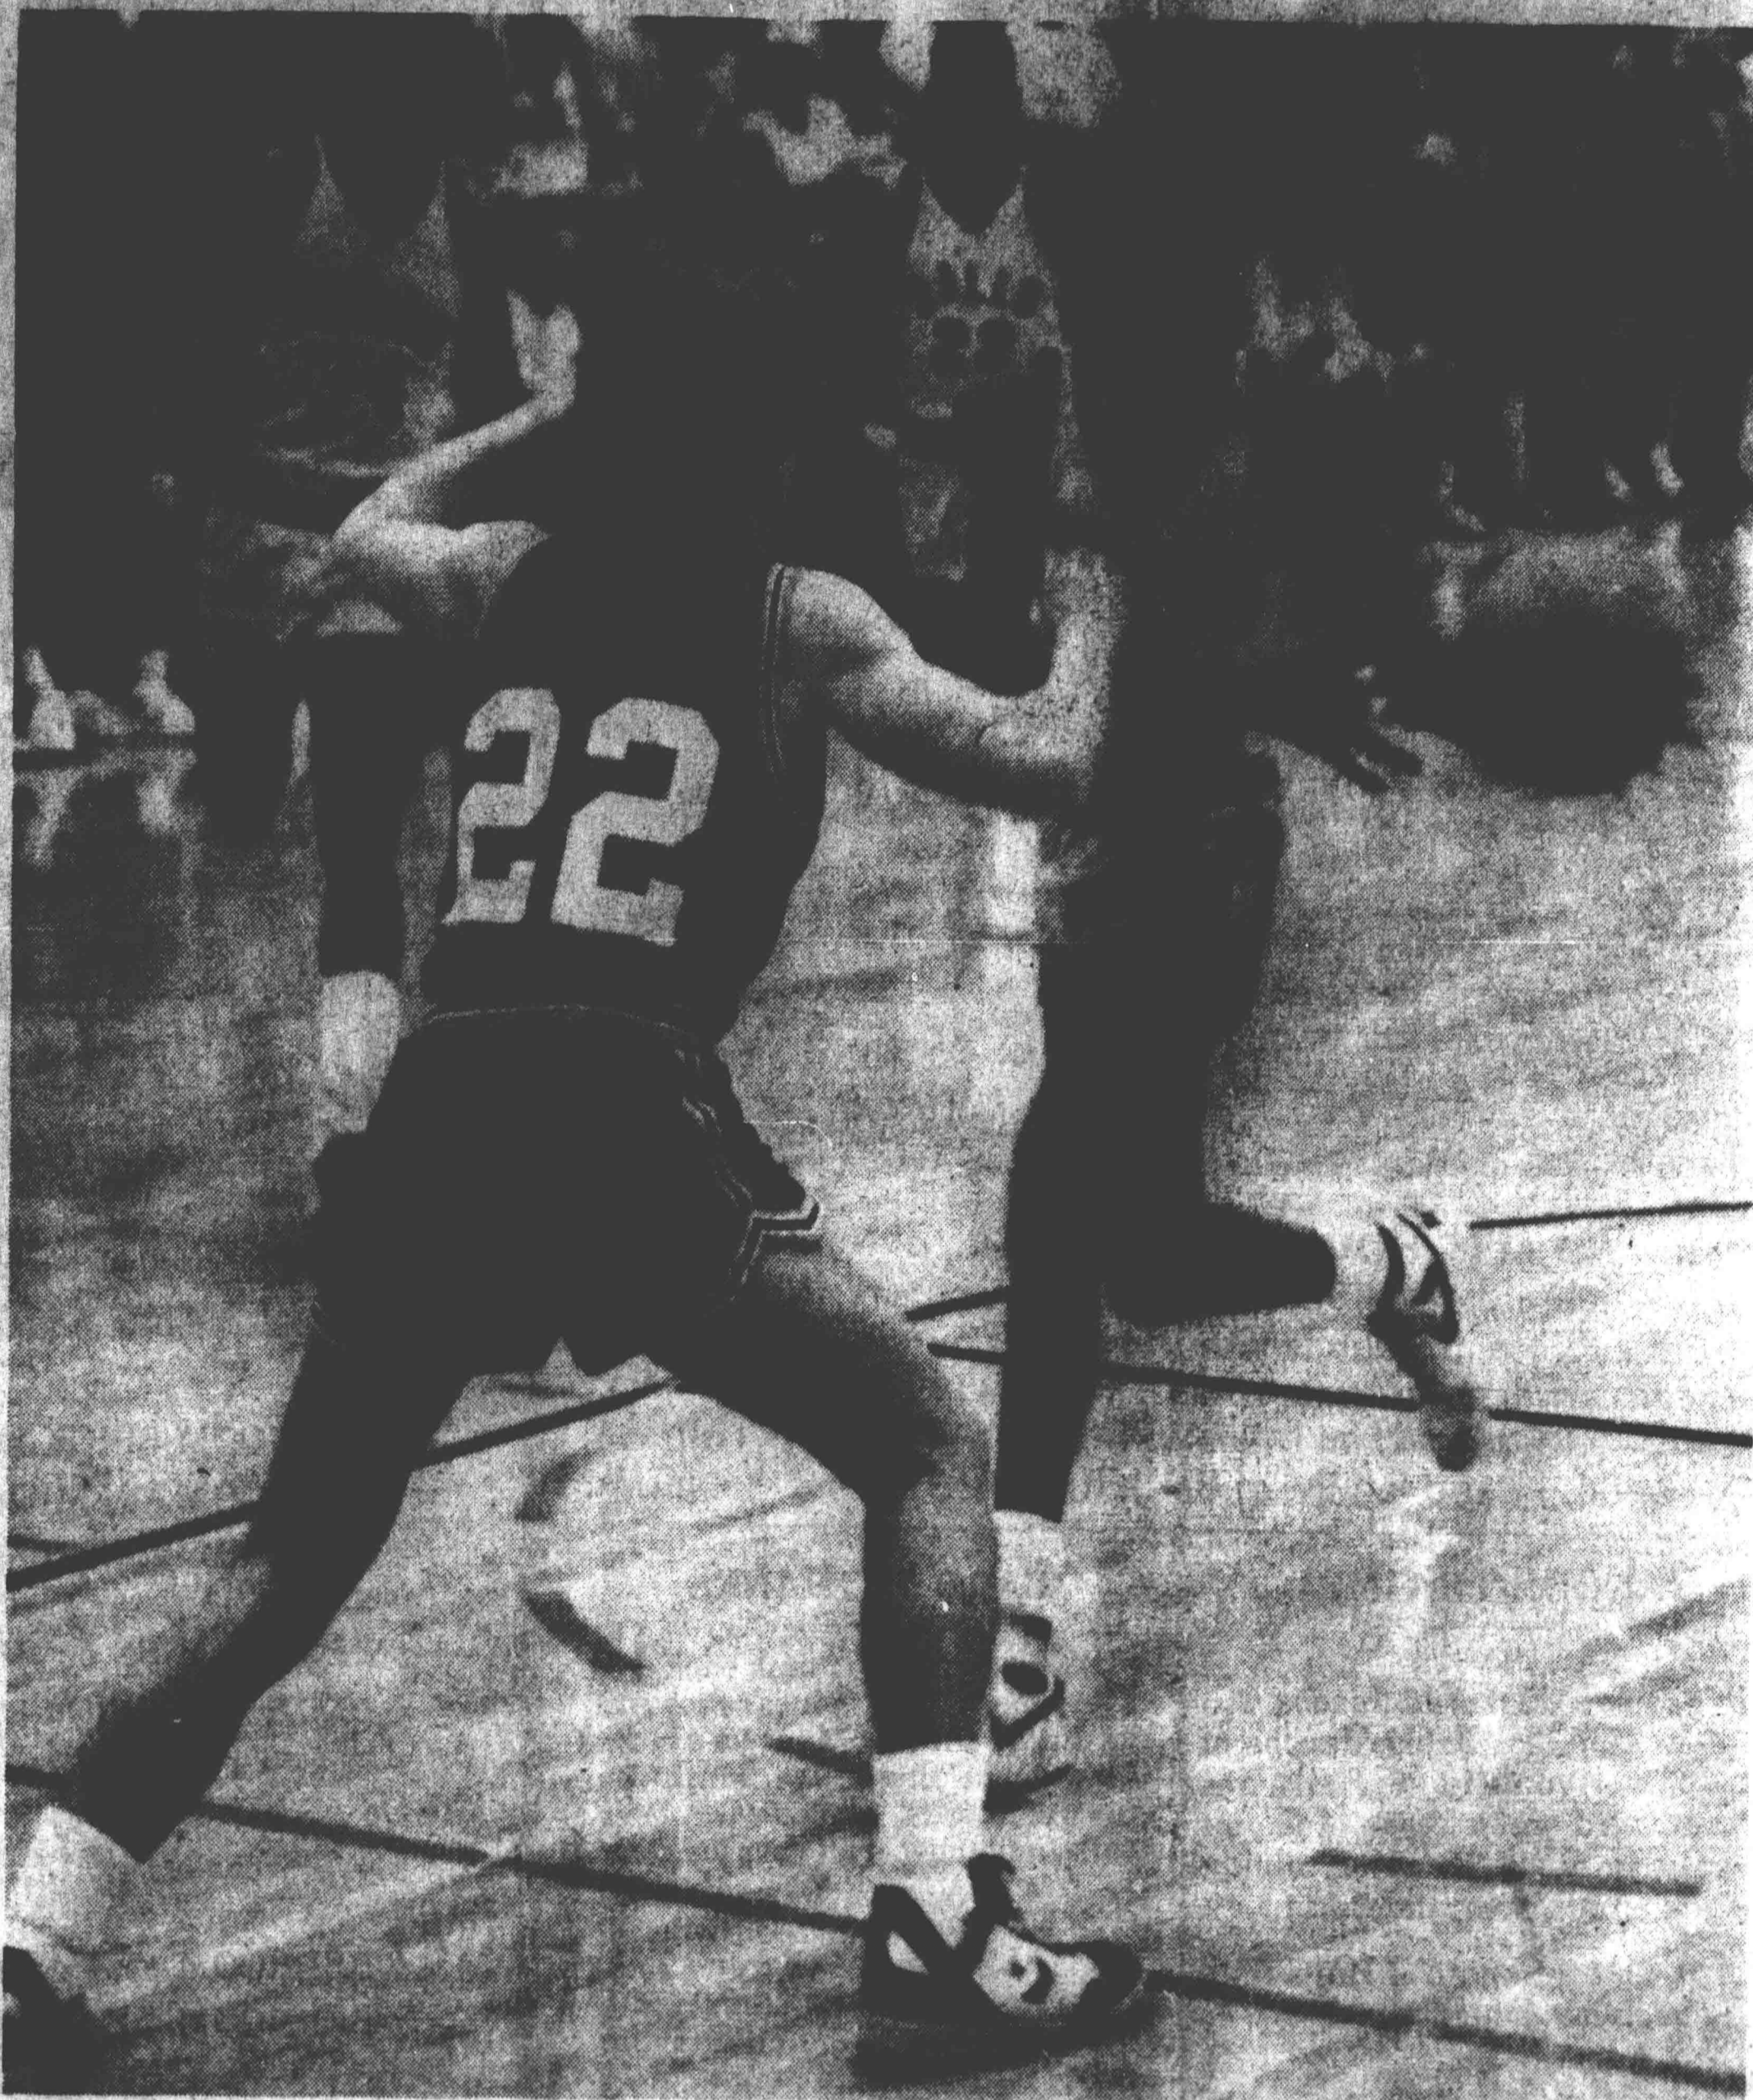

MICHELLE MURCHISON, a junior in Rhodes College in Memphis, granddaughter of the Henry Murchisons, of Halls, has been selected for Mortar Board, one of the highest honors for senior women in colleges and universities. She is corresponding secretary for Kappa Delta sorority, secretary of the Rhodes Honor Council, secretary of the Baptist Student Union, and junior class representative on the election commission of the Student Government Association.

She is the daughter of Buddy Murchison, of Troy, Ala., and Mrs. Linda Murchison, of Huntsville, Ala.

FRANK CLAYBROOK (4) has the ball at his finger-tips as he aids Halls High School's 87-43 win from Lake County's Falcons Thursday of last week in the first round of the Region 7-A tournament in Greenfield. Dalton Jackson, Bobby McKinney, and Tyrone Patrick scored 12 points each.

Bradford went to the freethrow line 38 times on fouls to overcome Halls' 10-point lead in scoring from the field and win Monday, 88-82, in double overtime. McKinney hit 32 points and Patrick 24 to close the Tiger season at 17-9.

Halls Six Fires Into Sub-State

Halls High School's Lady Tigers, already assured a sub-state berth, play Lake County at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in finals of the Region 7-A basketball tournament in Greenfield.

The Halls sextet, fourth in District 13-A and 4-17 for the season, Friday shocked, 32-30, South Fulton's District 14-A champs, now 16-13, in the region meet.

Gina Warren contributed half of Halls' points, hitting two free throws to put Halls ahead, 24-23, for the first time in the game, with 2:50 left. Halls led by six before South Fulton closed the margin.

Warren hit seven of seven from the free-throw line in the second half.

Tuesday, the Halls girls defeated Dresden, 51-46, in the semi-finals, after having led 15-10, 25-16, and 39-34 at the periods.

Kecia Miller paced Halls scoring with 14; Warren had 13, Pam Hutcherson 10 (sinking two as the third period buzzer sounded);

Paula Hutcherson 8; Falechea Qualls 4; and Veronica Jackson 2.

The Right Choice

The naming of former U. S. Senator Howard Baker, of Tennessee, to replace Donald Regan as President Reagan's chief of staff has been called "the perfect choice" by many political leaders.

We agree that Mr. Baker is probably "the right man, in the right place, at the right time" as Kansas Senator Robert Dole gave his reaction. We have little doubt that Sen. Baker can and will do what is needed to help Mr. Reagan regain control of our foreign policy as well as make progress in domestic affairs.

Mr. Baker's decision to accept the appointment probably was a difficult one since in doing so he had to relinquish his hopes of making the race for president in 1988.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Baker will receive the support and cooperation he will need to get the job done.

Our Week

In case you haven't noticed this is National Procrastination Week which means that it was especially designed for this writer.

We are not very good at most things but we certainly qualify as an expert in procrastination so we plan to take full advantage of this special week.

Long Awaited

Are most of you awaiting the coming of spring as anxiously as we are?

We have never particularly admired snow, ice and cold winds so we have always been anxious for spring to arrive but especially so this year.

Of course this has not been a really bad winter but all winters are bad for us. We have never been able to understand those who enjoy winter and we look forward to spring with the newly budding trees, the early flowers and the singing birds.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

Throughout last week, all of official Washington was primed for the release of the report of the President's special board reviewing the arms sales to Iran. Appointed by President Reagan, this board was headed by former Republican Senator John Tower of Texas. Its other members were former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and former National Security Council official Brent Scowcroft.

The report lived up to the suspense preceding its release. In its final form, it was as thorough as any reconstruction of events related to the sale of arms to Iran could be. It spared no one as it went about assessing the process of how this policy was determined and how the policy itself was flawed. It apportions blame in varying degrees for errors by many officials within the Administration from President Reagan right down to Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North.

More than because it simply points fingers, though, the significance of this report lies in its shocking conclusions of how proper procedures used to formulate foreign policy got out of the control of those charged with the immense responsibility of acting in the name of the United States of America.

It is important to understand, as the members of the board did, that the National Security Council is one agency that fully reflects the individual preferences and working style of the President.

To quote the board, "The National Security Council system will not work unless the President makes it work. The report points out that the President did not force his Iran arms sales policy to undergo the most critical review possible. Instead, the most powerful capabilities of the system were not utilized. In short, the process was ignored and the entire episode was treated in a very informal manner. By any standard, this is not a proper way to implement such a complex and high-stakes undertaking.

supported terrorism and hostage taking. It is the refusal of those involved in the formulation of the arms sale policy to follow established review procedures, and the contradiction between the administration's stated policy and its actions, that make this incident so troubling. It is also those factors that have done so much to erode the President's credibility and, unfortunately, our nation's credibility in the free world. Now that the Tower Commission report is out, it is incumbent upon the President and his Cabinet to repair the damage that has been done and demand that processes designed to serve the President are followed in the future.

Halls History

By Mrs. Charles Alcockbrook The Rev. Henning Andrews, a Southern Baptist minister, of Houka, Miss., writes: "I have enjoyed reading a brief account of Halls that appeared in the paper dated Feb. 5, 1987. It was sent to me by a person of my time and age that lived in Halls in the late twenties, Mr. J. B. Ellis, who loves nostalgia; we write sometimes.

"The section you refer to as being cleared and set for a new park has some memories for me. In the corner building, Ike Palmore had a barber shop and cut my hair (I had hair then).

Thanks for the article, and give my regards to Mr. Henry Murchison. It pleases me when this column brings back memories of Halls, and I appreciate the mail and telephone calls I receive.

Henning may not remember me as Mary Spence, a freshman, when he was a senior at Halls High School, but I certainly remember him.

Mr. Ols Palmora, his wife, is in her nineties and lives with her daughter, Mrs. Fincher (Mary) Smith, in Florida.

Horace Jordan and Miss Pearl Trebbe fell in love. He went to her home town, Alton, Ill., to marry her and going with him as his only attendant was his barber and friend, "Plunkit" Smith.

Grenn, Mr. and Mrs. Sewell Dave had three daughters, Mrs. Carl (Margaret) Massey and Mrs. Earl (Norma) Hendrix, of Ripley, and the late Mrs. Robert (Patsy) Hendrix, of Dyersburg.

Charles, my husband, remembers it was a happy day in his life when his grandfather (Big Pappy) Alcockbrook started taking him to John McClendon's barber shop to get his hair cut instead of his Big Mommy cutting his hair at home.

Wm. Winn Has Star No-Till Bean Yield

By Charles T. Peel
His 54.8 bushels per acre has won for William Winn, of Cherry, top honors — and a $1,000 expense-paid trip to a place of his choice in the West Tenn. Green Scene Soybean No-Till Field Contest for 1986, sponsored by Oils-Gra for BASF. Winn planted 60 pounds per acre of Essex and Asgrow 5474 varieties June 26th, in 8-inch rows. He fertilized with 40 pounds of phosphate and 60 pounds of potash per acre. Trisvax M plus an inoculant were applied at planting. Roundup, Benlate, and Blazer, and Post, all over-the-top materials, were used for weed control. He says good soil, high in organic matter, and excellent weed control were major factors in his yields. Pesticide Training Improper application of pesticides can be dangerous. Labels note fire, exposure, or chemical hazards and whether or not the product is toxic. To guide safety and provide training necessary to obtain a certified applicator's card from the Tennessee Dept. of Agriculture, meetings is set at 7 p.m. March 23rd. Limited space is available; if you desire to take this training, call 635-8551.

Young Poet

SPENCE HORNER, of Dyersburg, grandson of the Charles Alsbrooks, of Halls, has had his poem, Rabbit, which placed second in the Dyersburg Woman's Club Poetry Contest, published in the February issue of Highlights for Children, with a national circulation of nearly 2,000,000.

There was a rabbit as white as could be. He was chased by a dog and ran past me. His cheeks were scratched, his eyes were red, and his stomach was baggy. I stopped the dog and saved the rabbit. I took him home and named him Babbit. His fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Doris Binson, encouraged his writing the poem and sent it to the magazine. He is now a fifth grader, active in sports and playing piano. His parents are Dr. and Mrs. James Horner, of Dyersburg.

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER
By Henry Murchison

Short But Nice
We had a brief but nice telephone visit with Dr. Hutson McCorkle last week while he was in Halls for a visit with his mother, Mrs. H. G. McCorkle. Hutson, who is now practicing dentistry in Orlando, Fla., and his wife, Nancy, had been in Memphis to attend the reunion of his class at the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences. Among other things we talked about his son, David, who is now playing professional baseball after an outstanding collegiate career. David, a right handed pitcher, was slated to leave Orlando last week for spring training at Tempe, Ariz. After spring training David expects to be assigned to a Class AA league team in the west as a starting pitcher or to the Class AA team at Chattanooga as a relief pitcher. He is the property of the Seattle Mariners. We always especially enjoy a visit with Hutson since he was always around when his father, the late H. G. McCorkle, was principal of Halls High School and many of us were working so hard to improve the athletic facilities and programs at Halls High. Hutson, we appreciated your call!

Needs Controlling
During the many years that we have written this column we have called attention numerous times to the practice of ignoring stop signs on the streets of Halls. There is never a day passes that we don't see several motorists fail to stop. We're aware that it would be next to impossible to monitor all of these stop signs but some means must be found to bring an end to the failure to stop before a serious accident occurs. Maybe stiffer fines should be considered. Also motorists seem to be driving at greater speed through the intersection at Main and Church with speeds of 45 to 55 miles per hour despite the congestion. Only good fortune avoided a possible fatal accident one day last week. A car traveling west on Main Street had stopped for the light to change. After the light changed the motorist who did not recognize started to move through the intersection when the driver realized that an over the road truck speeded up and ran through the red light. Fortunately, the lady driving the westbound car was alert and was able to stop but we'll bet she was really frightened.

PLANS FOR A NEW COUNTY HISTORY is offered to the person drawing the best emblem for the cover; call Mrs. Harmon, 635-3791, for details; she or Ammons will accept entries until March 28th. The book committee will meet at 6 p.m. March 19th, an hour before the Society's regular meeting in Northcrest Community Center, all interested persons, society members of not, are invited to either meeting.

FACING LAKE COUNTY in Region 7-A finals in Greenfield Thursday of last week, Halls High School's Lady Tigers led by three after the first period but trailed by five at the half. Midway through the third quarter, Gina Warren (10, seen in right photo in action against Dresden) re-captured the lead, and the team extended it to five, but the Falcons rallied in the final period to win 56-51. Paula Hutcherson (32, in left photo) had a big night, with 20 points; Kecia Miller added 13. In sub-state play, Halls, at Bolton, led early but lost 63-48 on crucial free throws, logging 50% from the line; it couldn't shut down Bolton's Freda Fields, who scored 27 points. Pam Hutcherson had 13 for Halls; Gina and Paula had 12 each.

The Lauderdale County Bank would like to make a very important announcement to all of our Individual Retirement Account members. New tax laws will soon be in effect that will severely limit tax deductions for Individual Retirement Account—IRA—contributions for many people. However, the new regulations will not take effect until the 1987 tax year. So it still makes a lot of sense to fully fund your IRA for 1986. The Lauderdale County Bank makes this announcement to help keep our IRA customers a step ahead financially. This may be your last chance to take advantage of full IRA tax deductions. Remember, any monies invested in your IRA by April 15, 1987, will still be deductible on your 1986 tax return. This announcement is just one of many ways The Lauderdale County Bank keeps you—a step ahead!

NASHVILLE, Tenn. For millions of country music fans around the world, Nashville, Tennessee is "Music City, U.S.A." Each year hundreds of thousands of visitors from Kentucky to Kenya flock to Nashville in search of the city's most famous commodity. For many of them the shrine is a barn-shaped building called the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum.

Firmly planted in the heart of Nashville's "Music Row" district at the corner of 16th Avenue South and Division Street and surrounded by many of the city's 270 music publishing companies and 62 recording studios, the museum is as winsome as the music it shelters and the country music legends who populate it. The more than 30,000 square feet of floor space contains two movie theaters showing rare television and film clips and 14 separate exhibit areas.

One colorful exhibit highlights the various aspects of the Grand Ole Opry through its history. "The Grand Ole Opry: The First 60 Years" documents the Opry's birth in 1925 when the Nashville-based National Life and Accident Insurance Company launched radio station WSM as an advertising medium. Through a wide variety of sights, sounds and experiences, the six-part exhibit begins with an area designed to communicate the two most important aspects of the Opry—radio broadcast and live entertainment—and includes an "Opry in Business" section. Sixty years of memorabilia in this collection—costumes, instruments and other artifacts—bring the visitor to the current Grand Ole Opry, now part of Opryland USA Inc. and housed in a state-of-the-art theater at the Opryland USA entertainment complex.

Another intriguing exhibit is dedicated to the songwriter and includes the original manuscripts of many hit songs—one is written on a real estate form and another on the back of an old grocery list. There are also audio interviews with famous writers with thousands of tapes that test one's knowledge of country music songs and songwriters.

Among the treasures housed at the Country Music Hall of Fame includes admission to a recording studio RCA's famous "Studio B" where major artists are recorded. Visitors are allowed to sit on Elvis Presley's high backed stool or play Floyd Cramer's piano and take part in a sound mixing session.

The Hall of Fame itself enshrines more than 50 of the immortals of country music, the songwriters, executive musicians and singers who helped shape the growth and development of country music. A beautiful bronze plaque with brief biography, a lifelike painting and highly personal items go with each of these luminaries. The industries are chosen by the Country Music Association and range from Jimmie Rogers, the "Singing Brakeman" of the 1930s to Hank Williams and contemporary musicians—and superstars such as Chet Atkins and Johnny Cash.

Speaking of Elvis, perhaps the most popular attraction at the museum is his eye-popping, customized, white 1960 Cadillac—complete with gold-plated record player, gold-plated television set and ceiling lined with gold records.

One gallery honors contemporary country music superstars. On display through September 1987, "The Willie Nelson Exhibit" documents the life and career of the famous singer, songwriter and film star. The five-part show portrays Nelson's life and career from his Texas youth through his emergence as an American folk hero. This gallery will house a continuing series of exhibits to country music superstars.

The Artists' Gallery is a night and sound exhibit featuring color transparencies of 114 country stars. As each artist's best known recording is played and his familiar music fills the room, his picture glows and flickers so that it stands out from the others.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

In the midst of all the talk about important issues like arms sales to Iran, budget deficits, agriculture, and trade, it is interesting to see a bipartisan consensus emerging on welfare reform. The President had earlier indicated that welfare reform would be among his legislative priorities in 1987. Since then, rough outlines of what welfare reform ought to look like have been drafted by the Administration, the National Governor's Association, Members of Congress, House and Senate committees, and others. In every case, it is clear that these outlines are gaining support among conservatives and liberals alike.

It is quite likely that this consensus, which crosses ideological lines in both parties, is coming about because each proposal that has been submitted faces two realities. First, they generally agree that work must be more attractive than welfare programs. Secondly, they also generally agree that government has a responsibility to help provide training, education, and child care to those it is seeking to move off the welfare rolls and into respectable employment.

Those are broad concepts covering goals that are acceptable to most Americans. There is no doubt about that. In addition, and maybe more significantly, these ideas now being molded into concrete legislative proposals represent major innovations in our approach to welfare programs. That is best expressed by the policy statement issued by the National Governors' Association.

In part, it said that welfare reform should change the emphasis of our nation's welfare system. It should "turn what is now primarily a payment system with a minor work component into a system that is first and foremost a jobs system backed up by an income assistance component."

Consequently, proposals now floating around Washington put their emphasis on developing a system that requires able bodied welfare recipients to strive for self-sufficiency. That goal would be achieved by enrolling in education or training programs or searching earnestly for employment. In return the government would provide the training and job search assistance necessary for welfare recipients to make the welfare-to-work transition. If the recipient failed to live up to their obligations, government assistance for adults would stop.

Possibly the key word that can be used in describing these proposals is the word responsibility. In the past, government payments too often have been made without imposing some responsibility on those receiving them. That is not just true in welfare programs. It is true in other federal spending programs as well. In welfare programs, government sought to fulfill its responsibility by providing income support but did not always provide support necessary to make sure that welfare recipients could also acquire the skills necessary to obtain constructive employment. Consequently, welfare recipients could receive assistance payments but had no

Home, Health Needs Shown

By Christine Anderson and Jane H. Connell

A committee met Thursday of last week in the Extension Office in Ripley to study results from surveys taken in the county in January, 1986.

Present were Donna (Mrs. James) Ewell, home economics teacher; Billie Anne (Mrs. J. C.) Hendren, Dept. Human Services representative; Al Jones, Lay-Fay-Ton Community Action Agency representative; Mrs. Owen Solomon, homemaker; and Extension Agents Christine S. Anderson and Jane H. Connell.

Members not present were Mrs. Ben Emerson and Mrs. Earnlene Halliburton, homemakers, and Mrs. Bettie Smith, county health department representative.

Housing Results

Of 60 families randomly surveyed by telephone or in person, 60% had not had an energy audit; 75% had no inventory of household items.

Most problems were heating and cooling and of maintenance and repair, plus lack of kitchen and bedroom storage.

Proper insulation of walls was reported by 64.2%; ceilings, 65.5%; floors, 44.7%; water heaters, 37%; water pipes, 46.3%; heat ducts, 39.6%; storm windows, 68.8%; and storm doors, 72.9%.

Extension will:
1. Continue to emphasize proper insulation; the Tennessee Valley Authority says this will bring more savings on heating and cooling than from any other improvements.

2. Continue to emphasize dwelling inventories. Insurance agents say the biggest problem with fire losses is remembering what was in the house (things stored in attic are forgotten, etc.).

Take photos from four corners of each room in house, listing valuables such as silver, jewelry, etc. and store this information away from the home, in a fire-proof location.

3. Help improve kitchen and bedroom storage.

4. Teach simple household maintenance and repairs.

Health Results
In 70 families randomly surveyed, milk and cheese appeared to be the most common source of calcium for both adults and children—67.9% of all homemakers were drinking some milk, 80.6% of children.

This was a considerable improvement over the 1981 survey, when only 48% of adults and 44% of children were getting adequate milk.

Main protein sources continued to be meat, poultry and fish (80%) and dried beans and peas (46.7%). Organ meat (high iron source) was seldom eaten, tofu (high protein soy-product) was not familiar.

Roasting and broiling appeared the most common meat preparation methods (70%), with braising and pressure cooking the least frequent (8%). Frying ran 56%, 44.3% reported frying meats less frequently.

Steaming and boiling was the most used method of vegetable preparation (85.7%), with only 13% reporting frying vegetables. Stir-fry, an excellent method of preparing vegetables to conserve nutrients, was not used by the families surveyed.

More families are venturing into microwave meals and vegetables.

Food preservation appeared correct in most cases, especially with low-acid vegetables, but some homemakers are still not water-bathing or pressuring tomatoes—highly recommended, due to the low-acid tomatoes now being produced.

Regular exercise was reported by 51% of home-makers.

HALLS SR. CENTER

The Rev. Harold L. Burroughs, Helen Davis and Nelle Kendrick decorated the bulletin board for March.

Legal services will be at the Center March 19th to talk about food stamps and help with other problems.

Home delivery volunteers will be honored at open house from 2 to 4 p.m. March 20th. Sharon Kraeber, of Memphis Inter-Faith Association, meals, and Pat Horst, of Home Delivered Meals, will be at the center. The public is invited.

The seniors are enjoying a new ceramics instructor, Jan White. Sue England and Melba Watkins tested blood pressures last week and seniors visited Hillhaven Nursing Home in Ripley.

CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

Fair Warning

Halls Mayor Sammie Arnold and Police Chief Buddy Moore have asked us to remind owners of 3-wheelers, 4-wheelers, trail bikes and similar motor driven vehicles that state law forbids operation of these vehicles anywhere except on private property.

In the past local authorities have been lenient in the enforcement of this law but in the future the vehicles will be strictly prohibited on city streets and anywhere else except on private property.

The state law provides for stiff fines for violators and parents will be held responsible for violations by their children. City officials are asking the cooperation of everyone in observance of this law.

TV Commercials

No one realizes more than this writer the necessity for advertising if television is to survive since we have been a newspaper editor and publisher for the greater portion of our lives but TV commercials presently being shown are becoming more and more obnoxious.

Over the years we have from time to time written about our pet peeves and probably have included television commercials but they grow continually worse.

Included among our pet peeves about TV commercials are vulgarity, extreme loudness, treatment of the viewing public as a group of uneducated morons, misleading in fact dishonest advertising, and a general tendency to mislead the public.

On the other hand there are a few TV commercials that are clever, entertaining and informative. We are not stupid enough to think that conditions are likely to improve any time soon but at least we can hope that some of the worst can be removed from the screen and future advertising can be improved.

Drawing Near

Only a little less than a week remains for would-be candidates to qualify to run for office in the May 7th city election. If you are planning to enter either the race for Mayor of Halls or for the Board of Aldermen your qualifying papers must be in by March 25th.

Barry White Dies In Auto Accident

Barry White, 22, of Ripley, died in a car accident.

He leaves his parents, Highway Patrol Trooper and Mrs. Scott White Jr.; a brother, William Todd White, and a sister, Kelly Ann White, of Ripley; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Heathcott, of Gates, and Mr. and Mrs. Scott White, of Ripley; and his great-grandmother, Mrs. Johnnie Heathcott, of Ripley.

Pall bearers were Randy, Scotty, Tommy and Terry White, Lanny Chalk and Ray Benson.

Ramessees Preview Interest Increases

Interest in a preview of the Ramessees Exhibit to open in Memphis April 15th has been so great that it has been moved from the county Extension office to the fellowship hall of Ripley's First Baptist Church.

Sheila Kirby Shands, of Memphis, former Ripley, who will be working with the exhibit, will present the program at 7 p.m. this Thursday, March 19th, sponsored by the Do-See Extension Homemakers Club.

To plan refreshments, call 635-9551 if you're attending.

Tennessee Highway Patrol Trooper Raymond Smith said Mr. White's 1979 Chevrolet was headed south when it ran off into the median, then into a culvert, turning over and coming to rest heading north. He said Mr. White was not wearing a seat belt.

He was an Eagle Scout and

Curb Wild Garlic Now

The wild number one weed problem in county wheat fields is wild garlic (commonly called wild onions). For best control and least injury to wheat:

1. Apply 2.4-D low volatile ester at the rate of 0.75 to 1.0 lb. active ingredient per acre (1.5 to 2.0 pints of the 4-pound per gallon formulation).
2. Apply 15 to 20 gallons of spray volume per acre to insure proper coverage. The addition of non-ionic surfactant at the rate of one quart per 100 gallons of spray may improve wetting of garlic plants.
3. Apply when day-time temperatures of at least 55 degrees Fahrenheit are expected for three or more days.
4. Apply when wheat is well-tillered, but prior to jointing, usually March 1st to April 10th.
5. Harvest wheat early, before

Halls Regulating Beer, 3-Wheelers

Halls' city board voted 4-1 (James Jones absent) Monday of last week to ask the county Beer Board to recommend a new frontage requirement—not omit it, as the Beer Board asks.

The board approved enforcement of state laws against 3-wheelers on city streets.

Much business concerned the Halls airport, Arnold Field:

- Alderman Stan Young, seconded by Eugene Pugh, was backed 5-0 to deny Bob Rogers purchase of land leased by the Auto Auction, reserved for industrial use.
- On same motions, Ripley's Barcroft Welding and Building won a contract to house fuel tank pumps and other storage, as more responsive than a bid from T. O. Martin, Jr.

- Mayor Sammie L. Arnold was authorized to negotiate sale of land east of Hammond and Pounds, not reserved for industrial use, he said Wymond Lovelace, Nelson Young, and H&P are interested.
- The board accepted Roger Charest's recommendation to hold gas prices at $1.50 plus taxes, dropping a 10¢ increase previously recommended.

- Don Patton was asked for estimates on a receptacle and light for each hangar installation desired in two weeks.
- On Mack Stanley's motion, Pugh seconded, an airport zoning ordinance and map were approved on first reading.

A Young-McCorkle motion authorized Lovelace to raze the old fire-house for the lumber, within 120 days.

Police Chief Buddy Moore was asked for recommendations on double parking on the traffic light to the post office.

Re-surfacing of tennis courts in Critchfield Park was authorized.

The board agreed to enforce ordinances about overgrown yards and burned houses.

A revision of the town's mobile home park ordinance was approved on final reading.

CONTEST WINNERS

Winners in a poetry and poster contest sponsored by the county Educational Association in observance of National Education Week received $25 each.

Winners and teachers were: K. I. Cliff Sanders, Mrs. Dabbs; 2-3 Jennifer Long, Mrs. Cherry; 4-6 Rick Johnson, Mrs. Parham; 7-9 John Hargett, Mrs. Adeock; 10-12 Amy Bentley, Mr. Milner.

Williams, Winn Banquet Stars

Sam Williams, of Durhamville-Orysa, was honored as the county's Outstanding Conservation Farmer and William Winn, of Cherry, as West Tennessee's top No-Till Soybean Farmer when the county's Soil Conservation District held its annual awards banquet Thursday of last week in Ripley High School.

Williams was recognized for 14,000 feet of terracing, contouring, use of cover crops, and conservation tillage on most of his row crops.

Winn was presented a "Save Our Soil" belt buckle for his 55.1 bushels per acre yield.

About 150 persons enjoyed a meal, featuring country ham and chicken, prepared by the RHS cafeteria and sponsored by Monsanto and American Cyanamid.

Vernon McBride III, chairman of the SCD board, was master of ceremonies.

He gave Talmage Cribfield, Jr. a certificate of appreciation for seven years service as chairman.

Talmage presented certificates to 48 affiliate members.

Bill Parker, the board's secretary-treasurer, made the presentations to Williams and Winn.

The new district conservationist, Gary L. Moore, introduced his staff and reported current programs.

Lennie Benton, of Monsanto, noted his products, including Atrazine, Bronco, Lasso, and Roundup.

Glenn Pendergrass, of American Cyanamid, commented on his products, including Prowl, Scepter, and Squadron, and presented a film, Visions.

Jimmy Spencer, district conservationist in Weakley County, was key-note speaker, with slides on 1985 farm legislation.

Eugene Anthony, board member, closed the evening with door prizes—a West-Eater from Ammons Bros.; 100 lbs. of fertilizer from Caldwell Feed & Seed; a $20 gift certificate from Dyer-Lauderdale Farmers Co-Op; a $15 gift certificate from Charles Griggs Building Materials; and a small cooler from American Cyanamid.

HEZZIE AND MINNIE PEARL (the Lucian Forsytes, of Ripley) will again be among the Hee-Haw gang performing at 7:30 p.m. March 27th and 28th in Ripley High School to benefit the Cancer Crusade.

Readers Speak

Editor: Thank God for "Just Say No!" There has never been a time when the church as a whole has been under greater attack from Satan than today!

As bold and hard hitting as this statement is, the saddest part is it's the truth! The very backbone of the Christian Church (every denomination) is being tried today to its fullest. Sexual perversion, AIDS, drugs, alcohol, pornography, and divorce are just a few that are attacking the Christian and American families of today. Satan knows that the best way to try to tear up the church is through the very institution that makes up the church and that is the "Family Unit". Our kids and all other members of the family are being attacked every day.

Finally, people's eyes are being opened to the problems our adolescents face. Thank God for "Just Say No!"

Not to belittle the efforts of those involved, but these are not problems the government or the school systems can solve. All the issues listed above are not just problems, but more than that they are "moral issues" or "fruits of sin" in people's lives. This is not going to go away until people arise to the realization of Jesus Christ and a personal relationship with Him. That is the only solution to these problems! (Need proof? Check the State of Tennessee's Rehabilitation programs' rate of success!)

Just saying "No" is a giant step in the right direction, but just abstinence from these things will not insure you from Hell. Let's go a step further by telling these kids and parents alike that morals and Bible-based teaching instilled in them is the answer. I know this sounds terribly old-fashioned, but face the truth of the matter. Since the explosion of immoral freedoms years ago (Do you ever wonder if it feels good, do it) teen pregnancies have sky-rocketed, V.D. is on the rampage, homosexuality is running wild (no longer ashamed of the fact that they are homosexual), not to mention abortion.

These are the world's curses for sexual immorality. Cancer is never cured with "Band-Aids". I challenge all churches in Lauderdale County to arise to the need to stop pornography, fight the influx of drugs, immorality. Preachers, tell your people these things are wrong! Tell them that those who do such will go to Hell. (Not to mention the problems created for them in this life and the impact on their kids and family.) I believe the key factor to our realization of the church's death is our silence or passiveness to what's happening around us. When the church stops being the voice that God Almighty uses to speak to the world, we are in grave trouble.

I speak for myself and for my church in saying "I'm not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto redemption!" (Romans 1:16)

I pledge to this town and community to do my very best to communicate Jesus to all I see. God richly bless!

country get older, they seek care more often and require longer stays in medical facilities. That is true of all of us regardless of whether or not we are veterans.

The action of the Veterans Affairs Committee points up one of the difficult factors of putting together a budget that will achieve the savings necessary to reduce the federal deficit. As the Congress seeks to reduce spending, it cannot ignore the responsibilities that government has to groups such as veterans, who served with loyalty and faithfulness when their nation called. It is those kinds of difficult decisions that are confronted frequently as the Budget Committee puts its budget together. Most Americans support their government's continued commitment to veterans. Certainly, the sacrifices made by those who have served our country in the Armed Forces deserve our continued support.

Government should not back away from the commitments it has made to them over the years. The Veterans Affairs Committee has done an excellent job in reaffirming our commitment to those who have served our country in its time of need.

NOEL SHERROD

Candidate For Mayor Of Halls

1. I have no grudges.
2. I have no axes to grind.
3. Halls is going through a tough era, and things will get tougher in years to come. My pledge—to keep things going. Grants are not available as they used to be, and it looks as if we are going to have to be on our own, and it will take a good head. I have had six years experience as alderman; I am a successful professional and businessman.

We will need the help of the people to keep a city government of the people, for the people, and what's best for all the people. I have no special interest groups.

By the time election day rolls around (May 7th), I will be 63 years of age. I have no plans to retire from the funeral business now or anytime in the near future.

The six aldermen you elect will make the decisions, not the Mayor. He's only the chairman of the board, so to speak, and does not have a vote unless there is a tie, but he's still important in the operation of the Town's business because the Charter that governs the Town states in order to carry on the Town's business as an incorporated Town, there must be a Mayor and Board of Aldermen.

Should anyone violate the law and have to be fined, the fine money will go into a special fund to help with other expenses, and not in my pocket.

Based on these few facts, I sincerely hope you will elect me, Noel Sherrod, as the next Mayor of Halls. The only promise I can make is that I will do the best I can do for the benefit of all. Thank you.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

Recently, the House Committee on Veterans Affairs completed work on its budget recommendations for programs under its jurisdiction. Those programs essentially encompass the whole range of services provided through the Veterans Administration for those who have served our country in the Armed Forces.

Once again, the committee chose to reject the administration's budget proposal for veterans affairs. In reviewing the budget needs of the V.A., the committee quickly recognized that the administration's budget was not adequate.

As an alternative, the committee developed its own budget recommendations for submission to the Budget Committee. In the first place, it rejected the administration's proposal to increase the fee a veteran home buyer pays to receive a VA-guaranteed loan. The Budget Office had projected a $411 million increase in revenues resulting from an increase in the fee. In addition, the committee turned down the administration's proposal to cut the VA health care budget by $246 million. Basically, that action by the committee only allows the VA to continue to provide health care to veterans at current service levels.

In other action, the committee refused to reduce the $150 burial plot allowance as proposed by the administration and added $15 million to the budget for the care of homeless veterans.

The committee also included additional funds for veterans job training programs and rejected the administration's proposal to transfer the total cost of the GI bill program to the Department of Defense. Overall, the committee's action suggested a budget that is $686 million higher than the administration recommendation.

Committee Chairman Sonny Montgomery, of Mississippi, summed up the committee's work by describing it as fair and realistic. He also noted that the veteran population is getting older. As the veterans of our

"Bloody Shiloh"

"A case of Southern dash against Northern pluck and endurance... The troops on both sides were Americans... United they need not fear any foreign foe."—Gen. U.S. Grant

SHILOH, Tenn. — Shiloh was the first major battle in the western theater of the Civil War. It was fought mainly by young men who had never tasted combat, who had yet to "see the elephant," as the saying went. Shiloh would provide a cruel baptism of fire — for the soldiers who fought there, and for a divided nation that was only beginning to realize the grim realities of war.

In February, 1862, Union forces under Gen. Ulysses S. Grant penetrated the Confederates' western line of defense with the capture of Fort Henry and Donelson in northern Tennessee. "The way was open," Grant wrote, "to the National forces all over the southwest."

Stung by the ease of the Union victories, Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston abandoned Tennessee and withdrew his Confederate army to Corinth, Mississippi, an important rail center. There he was joined by Bragg under General Beauregard, Foy and Pick, and the army swelled to more than 40,000.

Meanwhile the Union Army moved up the Tennessee River to Pittsburg Landing, south of Savannah. Some 40,000 Union troops occupied "Camp Shiloh," (named for an old log meeting house which stood about two miles from the landing) while Grant bided his time, waiting for the arrival of Gen. Don Carlos Buell's Army of the Ohio. With Buell's 25,000 troops, Grant would have the manpower to overwhelm Johnston's army and bring an early conclusion to the war in the West.

Johnston, however, had other plans. He determined to launch a surprise attack and destroy Grant's army before Buell could join him. It was a long gamble with very high stakes, but if he could bring it off, he would turn the war upside down.

On April 3 Johnston set his army in motion. Moving untrained forces over muddy roads, it took three days to make the 20-mile march to Shiloh. On the night of April 5, two great armies, (at that time the largest ever assembled in North America) were camped hardy at a gunshot apart.

Beauregard and Bragg, convinced that the disorganized march had surely alerted the Federals, were ready to call off the attack. But Johnston stood firm. "I would fight them if they were a million," he exclaimed. "Gentlemen, we attack at daylight tomorrow."

As dawn broke on Sunday, April 6, 40,000 Confederate soldiers formed in four parallel lines and moved silently toward the Union camp.

Incredibly, the Federal high command had no idea of the storm that was about to rain down upon them. Grant was enjoying breakfast at Cherry Mansion in Savannah when he heard the low rumble of artillery fire coming from the direction of Pittsburg Landing.

The Confederates swept down on the Union camps "like an alpine avalanche," as Beauregard described it. The amazed Federals put up a brief resistance, then fell back toward the river. By 9 a.m. the Confederates had overrun the outer camps and were reforming for a second push. What followed was one of the most violent encounters of the entire war.

The retreating Union forces regrouped along an old sunken road, a natural line of defense. Supported by seven batteries of artillery, they pounded the Rebel forces charging across an open field. Time and time again the Rebels surged forward, only to be cut to pieces by the deadly crossfire. One Rebel declared it was like being caught in a hornet's nest. The name stuck, and the "Hornet's Nest" became a Civil War legend.

NEWSWORTHY TRENDS

The State of Romance in The Nation

A recent survey on romance commissioned by the makers of Korbel Champagne uncovered some romantic news: if you're in love, you're in the majority! Here are some of the heartful answers to the survey given by the 1,000 men and women interviewed.

Q: Who considers themselves more romantic—men or women?
A: Men! Eighty percent of the men across America consider themselves either very or somewhat romantic as opposed to 77 percent of the women.

Q: Do Americans feel romance is on the rise or on the decline?
A: Forty-two percent feel romance is on the rise and only 35 percent feel it is on the decline.

Q: What were the top ten romantic products?
A: From one to ten: flowers, wine, romantic dining, champagne, food in general, candles, perfume/cologne, jewelry, candy and clothing.

Q: Which region of the...

There is fresh war paint now over the brilliant 16-inch and 5-inch guns bolted to the decks of the retired USS Alabama. A 35,000-ton, 890-foot dreadnought, USS ALABAMA serves as centerpiece of the military memorial park's unique collection of armed service memorabilia. Under the ship's towering superstructure stands a windward byside green dotted with aircraft from three American wars, a Redstone rocket, a number of the tanks and other fighting machines. A submarine, the USS Drum, rests at moorings near the battleship. The park's newest prize—one of the nation's only B-52 bombers on public display is also prominent.

Visitors to the battleship can walk through galley, messing and berthing areas and over decks that in wartime accommodated 2,500 fighting men. Details of sailors' lives are laid out for visitors—the kitchen still holds the massive cooking vats used to boil up Navy chow—and most guests come away from the battleship with a heightened sense of history.

Aboard the nearby USS Drum, tourists see how World War II submarine crews lived, how they fired torpedoes and how they operated their ship.

The 200-ton B-52 bomber stands as the newest highlight of the memorial park. The Stratofortress, dubbed "Calamity Jane" by her crews, was used in the Air Force for three decades. The intercontinental high-altitude nuclear bomber saw duty as a Cold War weapon during the 1950s, as a troop support instrument in Vietnam and finally as a component of the round-the-clock nuclear defense network of the Strategic Air Command.

A towering rocket at the park is a replica of the Redstone rocket used to send America's first astronauts into space.

A large number of aircraft, some of them unique to service museums, also welcome park visitors. On display are a Kingfisher reconnaissance plane, the popular P-51 Mustang fighter plane, the F4U Corsair fighter (known as "Whistling Death" to the Japanese who faced it), an F100 fighter and a Coast Guard spotter plane and patrol boat.

Low Vitamin E Levels—A Lung Cancer Risk

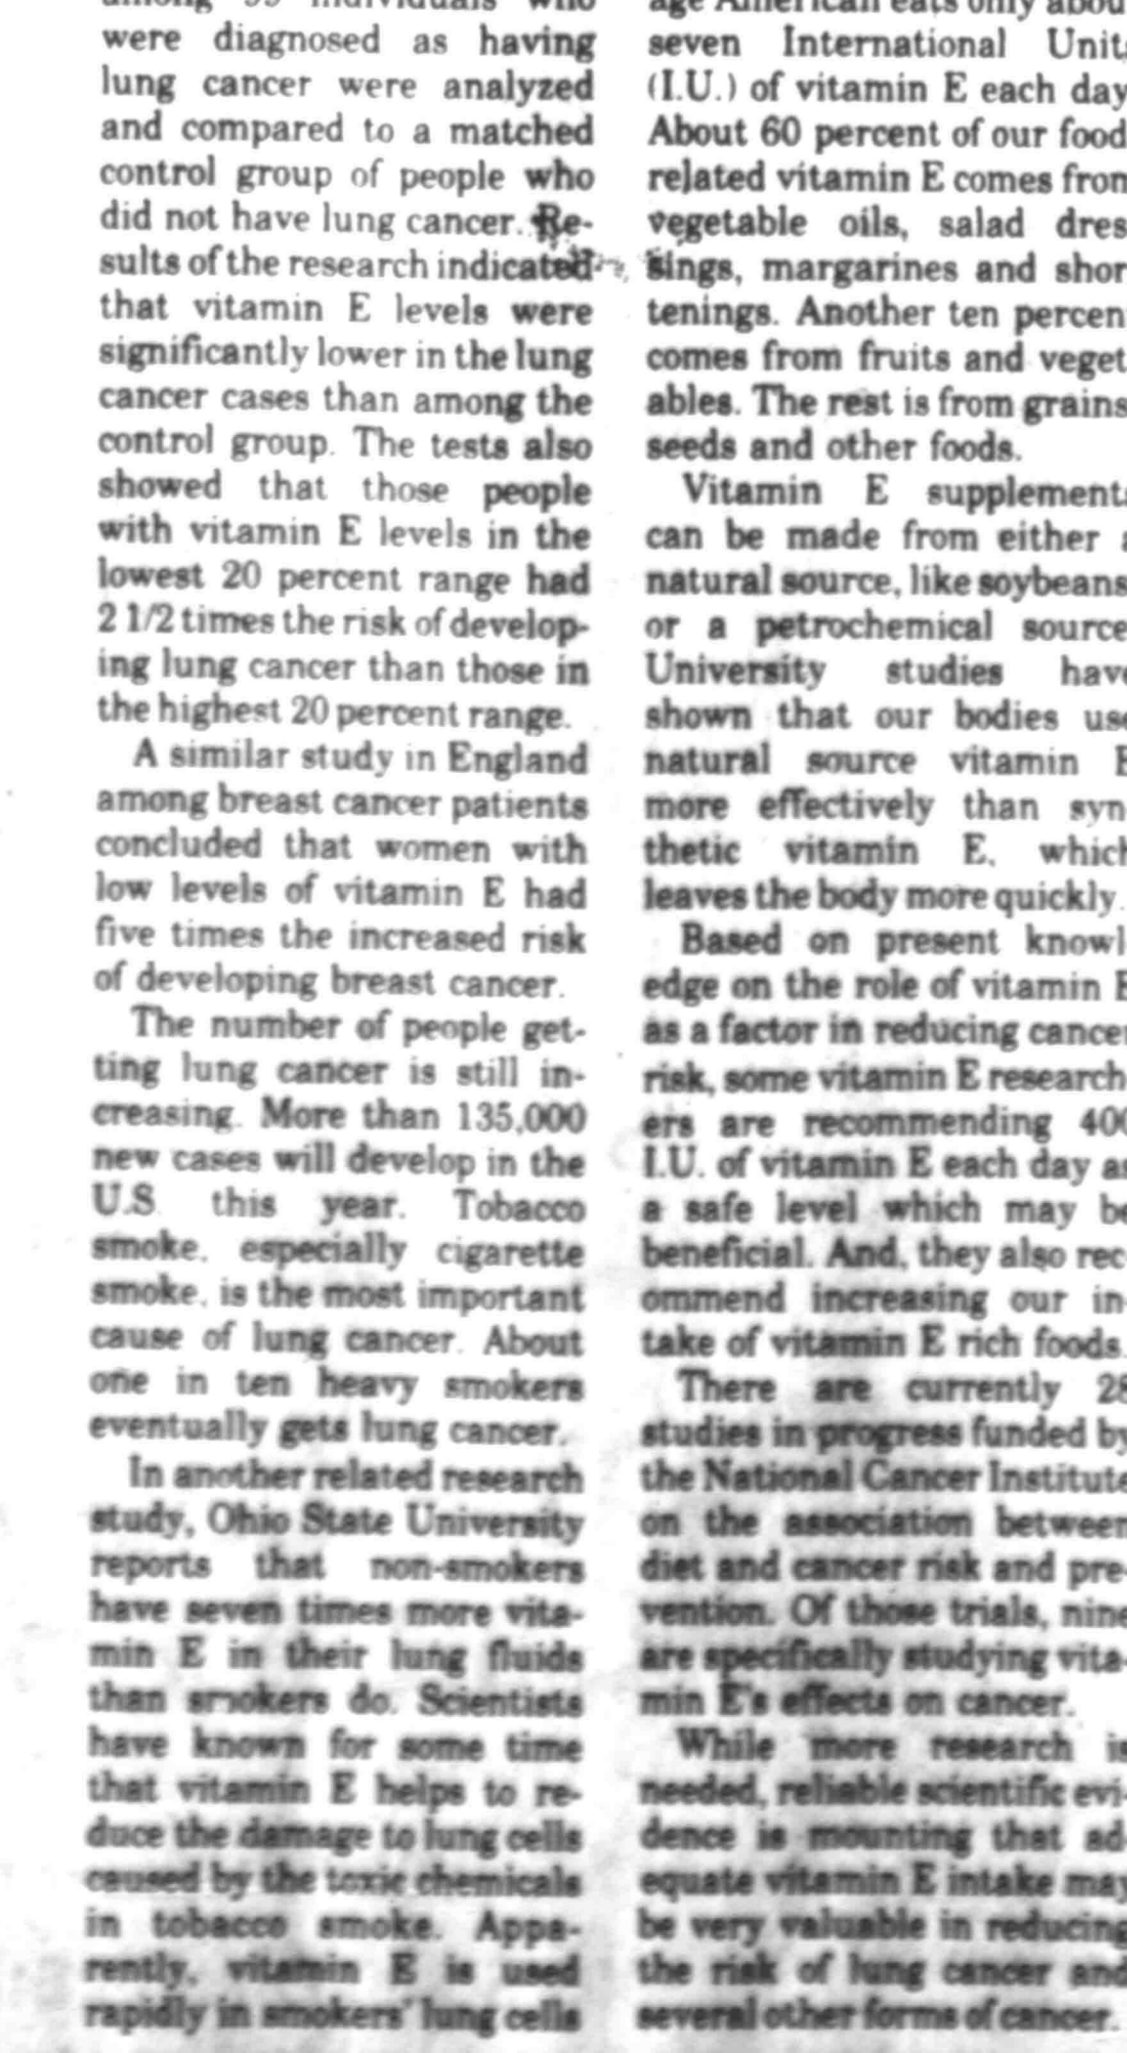

A very important scientific research study has just been published which offers potential for protection against lung cancer. It indicates that people with high levels of vitamin E have less risk of developing lung cancer than people with low levels.

The study, done at Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health, examined the relationship between a person's blood level of vitamin E and their future risk of lung cancer. Vitamin E levels among 99 individuals who were diagnosed as having lung cancer were analyzed and compared to a matched control group of people who did not have lung cancer. Results of the research indicated that vitamin E levels were significantly lower in the lung cancer cases than among the control group. The tests also showed that those people with vitamin E levels in the lowest 20 percent range had 2 1/2 times the risk of developing lung cancer than those in the highest 20 percent range.

A similar study in England among breast cancer patients concluded that women with low levels of vitamin E had five times the increased risk of developing breast cancer.

The number of people getting lung cancer is still increasing. More than 135,000 new cases will develop in the U.S. this year. Tobacco smoke, especially cigarette smoke, is the most important cause of lung cancer. About one in ten heavy smokers eventually gets lung cancer.

In another related research study, Ohio State University reports that non-smokers have seven times more vitamin E in their lung fluids than smokers do. Scientists have known for some time that vitamin E helps to reduce the damage to lung cells caused by the toxic chemicals in tobacco smoke. Apparently, vitamin E is used rapidly in smokers' lung cells.

SMART SPAGHETTI WITH FRESH TOMATO SAUCE

Spaghetti is one of America's most popular dishes. It is increasingly in demand as more and more people seek out light nourishing meals. Surprisingly, there are a number of smart ingredient substitutions that can transform this good food into one that's even better.

Switching from regular pasta noodles to spaghetti equals an interesting and healthy twist. When boiled, this vegetable yields a light, delicate spaghetti strand that bears a striking resemblance to spaghetti yet contributes only one-fifth the calories. Topped with a tomato sauce that cuts down on calories, fat, sodium and cholesterol, Smart Spaghetti with Fresh Tomato Sauce becomes a healthy accompaniment to a main meal. Instead of butter, this recipe calls for Prontos, a no-cholesterol sunflower-oil spread that's low in saturated fat. Foods low in cholesterol and saturated fat can help lower blood cholesterol levels, reducing risk of heart disease. Skillfully seasoned, this side dish also cuts out salt without sacrificing flavor. Of course, the Fresh Tomato Sauce is perfect on regular pasta, too.

For information on how to develop a total dietary plan to reduce your family's risk of heart disease by controlling serum cholesterol, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: Healthy Heart, Prontos Intensive Health Service, Dept. M2, 40 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019.

MAKING FAMILY LIFE MORE FUN

Museum Outings Offer Cultural Insights

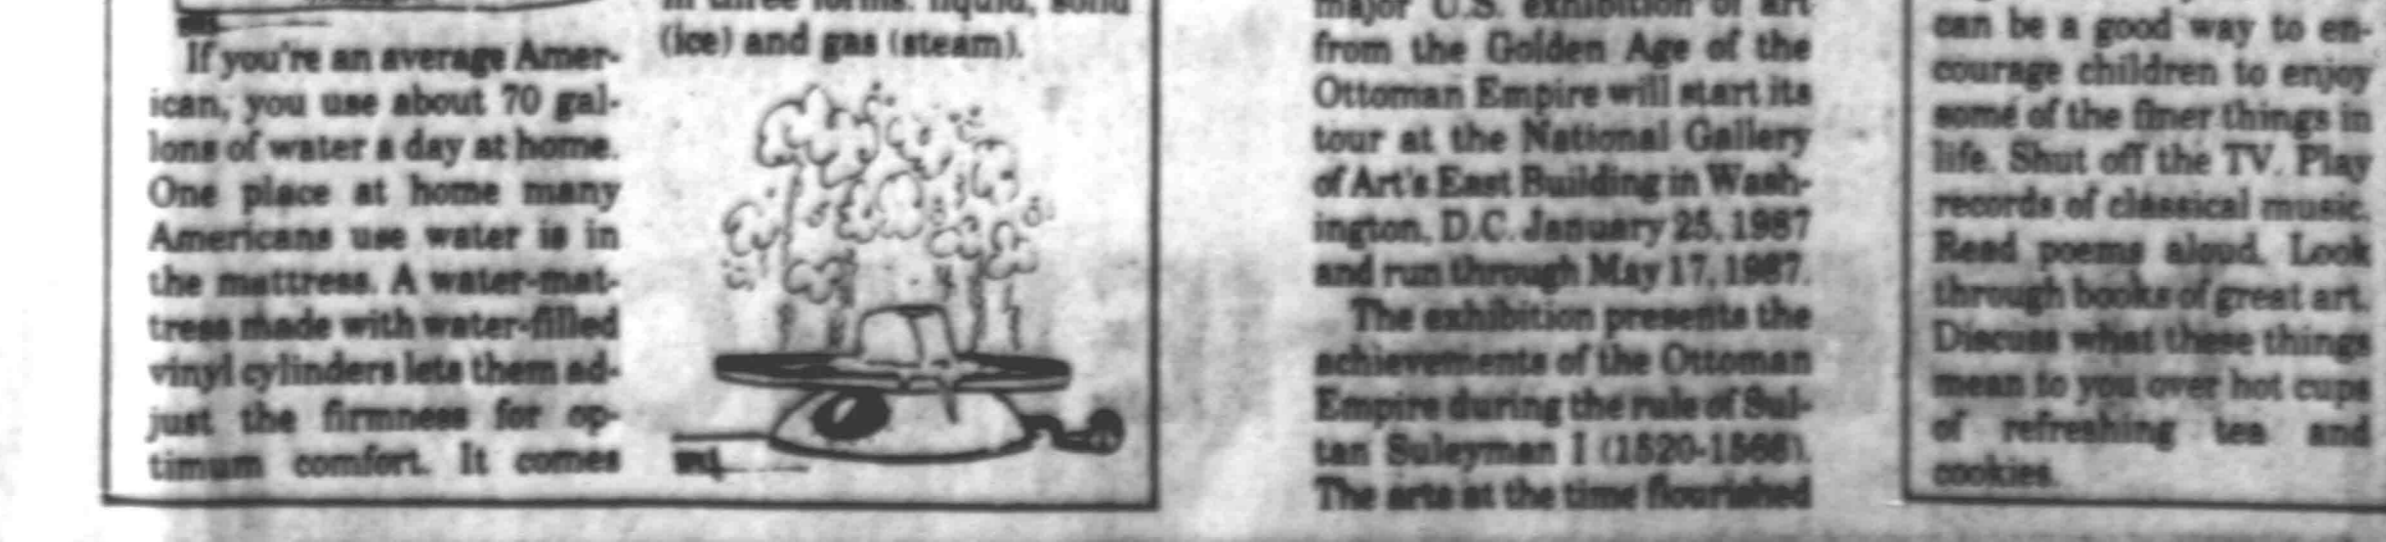

Visiting a museum can be more than a family outing—it may broaden the horizons of the entire family by giving them insight into history and foreign cultures. Here's information on a major new exhibition from Turkey that will travel to American museums.

After its Washington premiere, the exhibition will be seen at the Art Institute of Chicago, June 13 through September 6, 1987 and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, October 4, 1987 through January 17, 1988.

This mid-19th century helmet from Turkey is inlaid gold and set with rubies and turquoise.

The Age of Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent, the first major U.S. exhibition of art from the Golden Age of the Ottoman Empire will start its tour at the National Gallery of Art's East Building in Washington, D.C. January 25, 1987 and run through May 17, 1987.

A monthly Culture Night around your house can be a good way to encourage children to enjoy some of the finer things in life. Start off the TV. Play records of classical music. Read books of great art. Discuss what these things mean to you over cups of refreshing tea and cookies.

Idle Thoughts

Perhaps some readers will remember that last week this writer commented on his dislike of some commercials and announcements that may be viewed on television.

We would like to add to those pet peeves the use of long and complicated words which this writer cannot correctly spell, pronounce or define and in many cases neither can the person using the words. The problem is that such words become fashionable so that they are used unnecessarily much of the time.

Two of the words which come to mind that we have heard are "entrepreneur" and "vociferous." Loosely, entrepreneur is used to identify a person who is starting or promoting a new business to which some risk is involved. Vociferous actually translates into noisy and come to think about it perhaps it is a good word to use in describing such sports commentators as John Madden, Dick Vitale, Billy Packer and numerous other announcers.

There are dozens of other words that are being misused, mispronounced and misspelled. Perhaps if you listen you can pick out some of your favorites.

We need to call them $10 words but inflation probably has raised them into a higher bracket.

We're Disgusted

A couple weeks ago our grandson, Patrick, who lives in Miami had the privilege of caddying for the noted Spanish professional golfer, Seve Ballesteros (hope we spelled his name right) in a golf tournament played at Doral Country Club in Miami. He was one of a number of young players who were permitted to caddy for cooperating golfers on Saturday in the PGA tournament.

That is fine but we are aggravated because we watched part of the tournament and at least twice saw Ballesteros and his caddy and didn't even recognize our own grandson. We learned about it from Chuck, Patrick's father, and since then have talked to Patrick who was 16 on St. Patrick's Day.

A sophomore in a Miami High School, Patrick is no. 1 on the high school golf team and participates in many tournaments in South and Central Florida.

After 28 years with Bank of Halls, he purchased and operated Western Auto Store for almost 10 years. He later operated Hurt Insurance Co. before he retired 12 years ago.

He served two terms on Halls' Board of Aldermen, was a member of the county Selective Service Board during World War II, was director of the American Red Cross in Halls, served on the Halls and Lauderdale County tax equalization boards and on the Halls Planning Commission, and was a former member of Halls Lion Club.

His wife, Pat Spence Hurt, to whom he was married for almost 58 years, died March 29, 1985.

CARD OF THANKS

There are no words to express the love in our hearts that we feel for each and every one of you who have shared in the lives of our beloved son, Barry. We are truly blessed to have so many wonderful caring friends. God gave us one of the sweetest gifts ever given to anyone when he let us share our love with Barry for almost 23 years. He was so very special to us and we will always cherish all the memories that we had together. We want to thank all of our many friends and the many friends of Barry's, some of whom we just met during the recent tragedy, for every thoughtful word and deed of kindness bestowed upon us. The visits, the cards, memorials, money, food and beautiful flowers were truly a tribute of love to us and to his memory. The funeral service was so meaningful to us all. To listen to our beautiful choir full of friends, that we sing with every Sunday singing because He Lives, Dan Ferry for the lovely solo, Amazing Grace, and Bill Kelly for his uplifting music almost made us feel that we were already in heaven with Barry listening to the angels sing. The loving consoling words from our minister, Bro. Luther Clark, were like a healing spirit flowing through our bodies. To Garner Funeral Home and staff, who were so efficient but even more important so loving and kind as if they knew exactly how our hearts were breaking, we owe a special debt of gratitude. We are so grateful to the ambulance service, hospital staff, sheriff's department and city police department for their help and support. To the Tenn. Highway Patrol, we love you all and will never forget your farewell salute to our son. Lastly, we could not have made it through the sadness of the past days without the loving bond of strength and enduring love that is so ever present throughout our entire families.

It is already obvious that banking legislation is going to be an often discussed issue in the 100th Congress. There is currently moving through committees what is called an omnibus banking bill that addresses several issues within the financial community. That bill includes assistance to the federal insurance programs for savings and loans, issues relating to "non-bank banks," as well as other important banking issues.
Some of these issues have been developing over the last year or so including the question of whether the federal government should impose statutory guidelines on how long a bank can hold a check deposited by a customer in his or her checking account. Unfortunately, there are many horror stories of incidents where depositors have deposited checks into their accounts and found later that checks they have written were not honored because the bank had held the funds for an inordinate amount of time. That has caused embarrassment and unnecessary expense for return check fees for too many bank customers.

What occurs in many reported instances is that bank policy requires that deposited checks be held for a specified period of time to insure that the check clears. In the past, some of the delay of the availability of funds caused by this "hold" was necessary due to the time required to send checks from one bank to another for clearance. In today's world of modern technology, that is not as true as it was even a few years ago. That is one reason the Congress passed legislation last year to set standards on how long deposited checks could be held. That effort expired when a conference committee named to work out the differences in the House and Senate passed versions of the bill were unable to reach agreement.

However, a similar bill was recently passed out of subcommittee in the House and is expected to be included in the major banking bill that will be considered later this year. This legislation is expected to phase in new standards for check holding policies over the next three years. Initially, it will require that deposited checks drawn on local banks would be available for withdrawal in one to three business days. Most out of state checks would be available for withdrawal in seven days when fully implemented, the legislation would require that local and in-state checks would be available in one day, and all other checks would be available by the fourth business day after deposit.

It should be made clear that not all banks are guilty of the practices that necessitated this legislation. However, the incidence of these abuses are of sufficient quantity that federal statutes became necessary.

Miss Mary Bobo's Boarding House

LYNCHBURG, Tenn. — Miss Mary Bobo was an institution around Lynchburg, Tennessee (Pop. 361).

From 1908 until her death in 1983 at the age of 101, Miss Bobo's Boarding House was as much a landmark of Lynchburg as the town's other internationally famous attraction — the Jack Daniel Distillery.

Jack Daniel himself regularly ate his noon meal at Miss Bobo's table. Tom Motlow, the president of Lynchburg's Farmer's Bank and the brother of the man who ran the distillery, was one of Miss Bobo's long-term boarders, as were many of the federal revenue agents assigned to the distillery by the government. Miss Bobo's Boarding House was not just the popular place to stay in Lynchburg; it was the only place it was also Lynchburg's most famous eating place.

Over the years Miss Mary's dinner table was graced by almost everybody of any importance who ever came to Lynchburg and by thousands of guests of the distillery as well. An invitation to dinner at Miss Bobo's was a prize to be treasured.

When Miss Bobo died in 1983, the boarding house closed its doors for a while and its passing was mourned by everyone who ever visited the big two-story white frame house with the distinctive white picket fence just off the Moore County Courthouse square. Its re-opening under the sponsorship of a charming young lady named Lynne Tolley was greeted with an enthusiasm generally reserved for football Saturdays and tailgate parties.

"It's an easy place to find," Lynne Tolley says. "Lynchburg is so small that you can't help but find it if you just walk around for a few minutes. The boarding house is just down the street from the Moore County Jail, or just ask anybody."

Lynne Tolley seems a practically perfect choice as Miss Bobo's successor. She is, for instance, a great-great niece of Jack Daniel himself.

"That's not really so remarkable in a town the size of Lynchburg," Lynne laughingly explains. "Practically everyone in Moore County is related to everybody else in one way or another. My grandmother was the sister of Lem Motlow, who took over the distillery after Mister Jack died. My uncle was the head distiller for Jack Daniel for more than 40 years. He's the man who taught the present head distiller, Frank Bobo, who was also one of Miss Mary's relatives. Miss Mary herself was Lem Motlow's sister-in-law."

With credentials like that, and a degree in home economics from the University of Georgia, Lynne Tolley has set about carrying on the boarding house traditions established by the legendary Mary Bobo. "Miss Mary prided herself on the table she set," Lynne says. "The noon meal — dinner in country terms, as opposed to the lighter evening meal called supper — was always the major meal of the day in country communities."

"Miss Mary's dinner always offered a choice of at least two meats, six vegetables, beverages, breads and dessert. We serve things like fried chicken, roast beef or pork, fried catfish, stuffed peppers, turkey and dressing, pork chops and pork tenderloin and gravy. Most of our vegetables come right out of the gardens Miss Mary always planted around the house. There's nothing quite like fresh sliced tomatoes right off the vine or fresh boiled corn-on-the-cob just seconds off the stalk. She just put everything on the table — serve yourself and pass it to the left, please."

DRIVING DRUNK

KILLS

It kills friendships. It breaks up families. It destroys happiness. It ruins lives. We can't say it any plainer than that. Get in a car with someone who's had too much to drink and you take your life in your hands. Get behind the wheel after you've had too much to drink and you not only endanger your own life, you jeopardize the lives of innocent people besides. If you drink, don't drive.

Pioneer Life In The Smoky Mountains

CADES COVE, Tenn. — There is an almost overwhelming feeling of serenity in this broad valley surrounded by the soaring peaks of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

The log cabins and split rail fences of a century ago still stand in clearings at the foot of the mountain slopes. An ancient grist mill powered by a small stream still grinds corn. White-tailed deer graze in the wide meadows beside white-faced cattle. An occasional black bear wanders down into the valley from the wilderness rising up the mountain slopes. Wild turkeys can sometimes be seen at the edge of the forest, and groundhogs regularly scold intruders from the mounds of their burrows beside the narrow two-lane road.

Cades Cove is an oasis of tranquility in the otherwise urban world on the far side of the high mountains.

"The popular myth about Cades Cove is that it was a very remote and isolated place, untouched by the modern world," says Dr. Randy Shields, author of The Cades Cove Story and a native son born into this broad and beautiful valley long before it became a part of the national park. "The fact is that there was a pretty sizeable population in this valley as far back as 1821 when the first settlers arrived with their families, tools, livestock and land grants."

By 1850 the population in Cades Cove had reached 685 and the 15,000 acres of useable farmland were under cultivation, turning the whole valley floor into a neat patchwork of farms.

When the National Park Service took over the cove in 1936 the more modern elements were removed and the cove was preserved as a piece of living history detailing the early Appalachian Mountain lifestyle. An 11-mile one-way loop road originating at the Cades Cove Visitor Center winds through the broad, open fields filled with cattle at the base of the steep mountain slopes.

"The cattle and the fields are important to the preservation of the cove," Shields explains. "Without the cattle these open fields would disappear. The forest reclaims open land very quickly. We already have to look very closely to see where the farms once were."

"It is the broad, open fields which give Cades Cove much of its unique charm and sense of tranquility. The views are sweeping vistas toward the magnificent mountains rising on all sides. There are places along the road where almost the entire valley is on display and far distant Mount LeConte, one of the Smokies' highest peaks, looms on the horizon. The road leads past pioneer homesteads and tiny white frame churches."

"There were five churches in the cove in the 1920s," Shields says. "Three of them are still here. The oldest is the Primitive Baptist Church established in 1827. The other two are the Missionary Baptist Church and the Methodist Church."

The old cemeteries around the churches contain some fascinating epitaphs. One isolated Civil War inscription reads simply, "Bas Shaw — Killed by Rebels."

Halfway along the loop road is a working farm of the 19th century with houses, barns and out-buildings, all furnished and used as a sort of open-air museum for demonstrations of pioneer crafts during the summer months.

"The farm is the old John P. Cable farm," Shields says. "There were several Cable families in the cove. Becky Cable lived in the house. She managed a store, kept boarders, farmed her land and cared for the orphaned children of her brother until her death in 1940 at the age of 96."

"The showplace of the farm is the John P. Cable Mill built in 1868. The water-powered grist mill with its large overshot wheel still grinds corn raised in the cove. Adjacent to the mill is a horse-powered sorghum mill which fills the air with the delicious scents of cooking molasses in the autumn when the sorghum cane is ripe and ready for cutting."

Martha Simpson Prepares Lawn

By Charles Peal
An attractive lawn is a goal of Martha Simpson, who is preparing to seed as soon as the weather will allow with a suitable lawn grass.

On a typical 1/2 acre lot, which will have between 10,000 and 15,000 square feet of lawn, it is recommended that 100 pounds of lime and 25 to 30 pounds of 15-15-15 fertilizer be applied per 1,000 square feet. This generally provides adequate reserves of phosphate and potash for good seeding growth.

Once these materials are applied, disk or rotary till to a depth of 6 to 8 inches. Smooth the lawn with a rake or harrow, taking care to smooth the areas near light poles or other places the harrow will not reach, so that it will be easier to mow later on.

Many disappointing lawns result from sowing grass seed mixtures in capable of producing a good lawn. The recommended lawn grass for this time of year in Lauderdale County is common Bermuda grass, 1/2 to one pound per 1,000 square feet. The new varieties of lawn fescue, 5 to 6 pounds per 1,000 square feet, and the tall fescues are also recommended.

It would be advisable to apply half the seed one way and use the other half to seed in the other direction, to get a good distribution.

The seed germinates best when covered by 1/4 to 1/2 inches of soil. A garden rake may be swept over the surface, or a corrugated roller to press the seed into soil will be satisfactory. Another method is to simply irrigate the lawn and let the dissolving action of the water droplets wash soil over the seed.

Before the lawn is irrigated, apply a layer of clean straw mulch uniformly over the lawn, so the soil surface is about one half covered. Keeping the soil wet for about nine days will result in Bermuda grass germinating. Fescue will germinate in five to 10 days.

The lawn should be cut when most of the grass reaches three inches high. Cut to a height of at least 2 1/2 inches for the fescue and one inch for a warm-season grass, such as Bermuda.

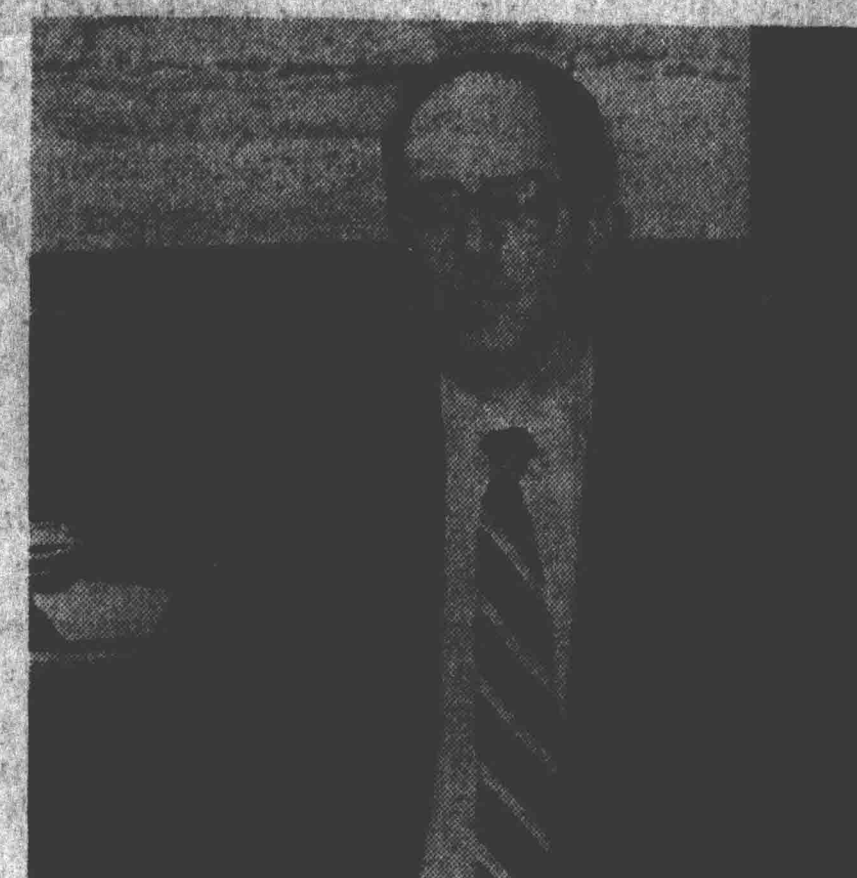

In the early stages, clippings should be removed to allow the plants to grow freely.

Fertilizing with ammonium nitrate about July 1st at the rate of two to three pounds per 1,000 square feet will keep the lawn growing and in a healthy state. The use of 15-15-15 on Sept. 1st

On March 30, there will be a group of people recognized for their community services, the dedication with which they serve, and the long hours spent in sharing their knowledge and talents with others to promote wellness as well as trying to cure illnesses. The people we are talking about are our local physicians.

They work long, hard hours helping to heal or maintain the levels of health of our family members as well as ourselves.

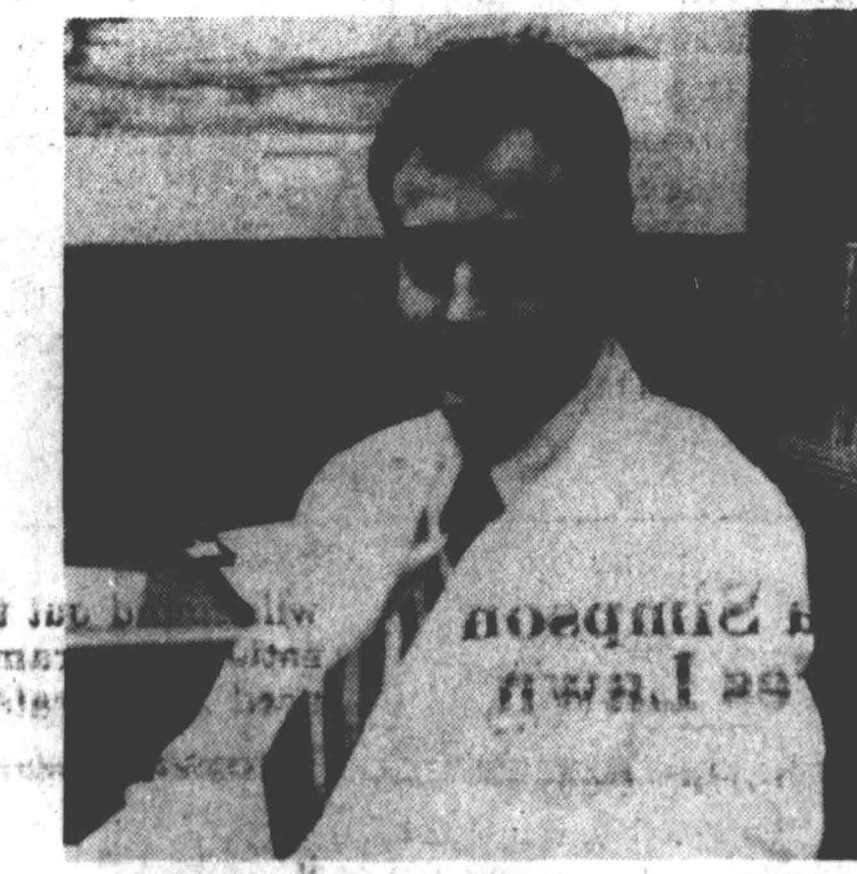

We at Baptist Memorial Hospital Lauderdale recognize and appreciate the time and dedication given by our local physicians, and we join the Nation in recognizing March 30 as DOCTORS DAY. We take this opportunity to say "THANK YOU FOR A JOB WELL DONE!" and hope that each of you take the time out of your day to let your physician know that you appreciate him.
