CONFIDENTIAL CORNER

By Henry Murchison

Happy Birthday

We hope that "Miss Kitty" Brown had a fine and happy 99th birthday. We are sorry that we were unable to contact her Saturday to wish her many happy returns.

We tried to call and got no answer so presume that she was at the home of one of her children.

Our first acquaintance with "Miss Kitty" and her late husband, J. R. Brown, was while we still lived in Maury City and the Browns lived at Old Field community near Maury City. The Browns moved to Halls in 1917 but my father continued his connection with Mr. Brown by purchasing several Model-T Fords from him after he located at the corner of Main and Front Street in Halls.

We last talked to Mrs. Brown about ten days ago when she called after we had returned home from the hospital and we had an enjoyable short chat. We wish her continued good health and happiness.

A Pleasant Experience

Alice and Oliver Nunn returned home last week after a visit with their son, Jimmy Nunn, and family in California.

While in California Alice and Oliver were guests at a meeting and dinner for members of Daughters of American Revolution which included about twelve chapters in the San Diego area. While registering one lady noticed that they had shown Halls, Tennessee as their home and spoke up and said she had attended Halls High School for one year. After questioning it turned out to be Katie Osteen who with her brother, Leonard, attended Halls High School in 1926 and 1927.

Many persons will remember Katie as a vivacious young lady, a cheer leader and active in school affairs. Mrs. Nunn has her name and address if anyone wishes to contact her.

Everybody Is Happy

Like this writer we suppose everyone drew a sigh of relief Monday morning when the spaceship Discovery returned safely to earth.

Thirty-two months ago the tragic explosion of the Challenger occurred causing the loss of seven lives and bringing the American space program to a complete halt.

Since that time new tests, new methods and every precaution had been taken to insure safety for the astronauts before Discovery was shot into orbit last Thursday. Let us hope that the space program can continue to make progress on the safest possible basis.

U.S. Leases Sunk Lake

The state, which in February, 1986, purchased 1,333 acres including Sunk Lake in this county, has leased the area to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which will manage it as part of the Lower Hatchie Wildlife Refuge.

It will be closed to the public from Nov. 15th through March 15th annually; observation, but no hunting, will be permitted the rest of the year.

The area is north of Fort Pillow State Farm and Cold Creek, in southwestern Lauderdale County.

REGIONAL ENTRY

William Jackson, of Halls, was one of 30 4-H Club members from Tennessee exhibiting in the Southern Regional Horse Show in Baton Rouge, La.

FREE BARBECUE

The public is invited to free barbecue at 5 p.m. Oct. 8th at the Phelan farm, seven miles west of Trenton on Highway 104, to honor U.S. Rep. Ed Jones.

SAWYER HONORED

Patrice Y. Sawyer, of Gates, was among minority scholarship recipients recognized with an appreciation breakfast at Memphis State University.

A graduate of Halls High School, she is a freshman this fall.

Mary Estelle Utley Viar, of Louisville, Ky., writes that she well remembers the ride she and Frances Nunn took in 1936 with J. U. Overall and Bobby Hart, from Dyersburg, quite an event in those days when you were only 14 years old. She says, "Hello, J. U. Overall."

Continue to write and call, as I appreciate it.

Delay Planting To Curb Worms

By Charles T. Peal
County farmers are advised to delay planting wheat or fescue until Oct. 15th, after reports of army worms (18 to 20 per sq. ft.) destroying Benton County fields. Another flight of worms can be expected this week.

If wheat is delayed until Oct. 15th, worms will have matured and gone to the next stage by the time the wheat is large enough to be consumed.

There's no cure except best growing conditions (fertilizing, watering, mulching) to keep bushes vigorous.

Rose Disease Found

The Plant and Pest Diagnostic center reports that a rose bush with deformed leaves referred to us by Mrs. Archie Sanford, of Glimp, has rosette disease, from a virus transmitted by a mite.

There's no cure except best growing conditions (fertilizing, watering, mulching) to keep bushes vigorous.

Survey Forms Slated

If you receive a form asking your views of water resources and economic revitalization, please complete and return it to aid planning in these areas.

Seeds Can Be Saved

To save seed (left after plantings, or gathered from plantings), reverse germination conditions and store in a dry, relatively cool, well-ventilated place.

Include (in a folded paper in the storage container) powdered milk, to absorb moisture) and place container in a refrigerator. Be sure to label seeds.

Test Garden Soils

Jeff Colvin, of Ripley, testing garden soil, found an excellent pH level of 6.6 (7.0 wouldn't hurt vegetables).

Proper pH helps make fertilizers more available and restrains some elements, like manganese, which can damage plants. No lime was required, because of the pH level.

Jeff's phosphorus level was high and potash medium. Our recommendations is for 15-15-15 per 1,000 square feet before planting. The University of Tennessee does not recommend the addition of minor elements, when pH levels are adequate.

About the only problems we have noticed in this county are zinc and sulphur deficiencies, in most cases on corn.

For soil tests, take samples from six places, mix well, dry into a crumbly condition, suitable for planting, and bring to the County Extension Office to be sent to the lab in Nashville. The cost is $2 per sample, plus postage.

If soil is wet when you sample it, dry it on a newspaper, stirring it periodically for a day or so.

Woods To Yard

Jerry Parker, Associate Extension agent, advises, to transplant trees from woods to yard:

In October or November, dig the tree to be moved so all the roots are cut. Water the roots, mulch, and then leave the tree in place in the woods until ready to be moved. This allows the tree to grow lateral roots before transplanting. Be sure to mark the tree, so you can easily identify it.

Prepare the hole in your yard around Thanksgiving. Dig the hole twice the size of the root ball and supplement the soil with organic matter and fertilizer. Fill the prepared spot and mulch.

Transplant the tree about Feb. 14th. Keep it watered for the first growing season. Do not over-water or over-fertilize.

Weigh the size of the mature tree in relation to its new location.

Keep in mind electrical wires, underground pipes, foundations, sun light and future enjoyment.

Co-Op Seeks RPL Services In Halls

Russell Jacocks, with 17 years of experience as manager of Forked Deer Electric Co-Operative, based in Halls, Monday asked Halls' town board to deny Ripley Power & Light Co. a 20-year extension of its 50-year-old franchise to provide electricity to most of Halls, and to let FDEC serve all of Halls.

He said FDEC could offer competitive rates and could have Halls citizens on its 9-member board (elected at annual meetings from five counties).

FDEC's board currently includes four members from this county — H. G. Caldwell, of Central, William Carter, of Dry Hill, Thomas Jones, of Woodville, and Richard Lazure, of Nankipoo.

Other members are Lynn Burnett, of Crockett County, and Prentice Johnson (bordering Gibson County), James Reasons, Alford Williams, and Harold Willis, of Dyer County.

RPL, closely supervised by the Tenn. Valley Authority, as FDEC is by the Rural Electrification Administration and the TVA, has three board members appointed by Ripley's mayor, with approval from aldermen.

They are, currently, alderman Tommy Dunavant, Ripley pharmacist; Jim Seeley, former alderman and executive vice-president of Bank of Ripley; and Samuel C. Lee, former principal of Lauderdale High School and former dean of admissions at Dyersburg State College.

Mike Allmand, RPL manager, gave the Halls board a 16 page summary of all the factors involved:

• RPL computers monitor power failures anywhere on its system and can swiftly shift power sources; it has three to the Town of Halls and two to Tupperware; FDEC has only one.

Allmand notes that RPL has three employees residing in the Halls area, for swift emergency response, and plans a new building in Halls.

"We have no quarrel with Forked Deer Electric," Allmand says; "they do a great job of providing electricity to rural areas, under enormous difficulties.

"We do believe we can provide better service to the urban Halls area, at a far lower cost, and offer our services, if desired."

4-H WEEK

Charline Pipkin, Don Paris, and Mary Jones.

JERRY PARKER, Associate Extension Agent, is in charge of Resource Management Conservation Farms, and Livestock and Adult Agriculture.

JANE (MRS. DON) CONNELL, Extension Agent for adult home economics and 4-H club work, has many and various jobs.

RICHARD BUNTIN, Assistant Extension Agent, is responsible for 4-H Club work and 4-H agriculture.

CHARLES PEAL, Extension Agent and Leader (adult agriculture), is in charge of row crops and vegetable crops in addition to administrative work.

The earliest record of the Lauderdale County Extension Service was made in 1926. E. B. Wright was the entire staff. The total boys' and girls' club enrollment was 340 members. These members were organized into community clubs with local leaders. The poultry project with 186 members appears to have been the most popular project. Corn and pig projects were popular also.

Cotton variety tests were popular. At a time when the county yield average was less than 200 pounds per acre, the 4-H Club average was 559 pounds of lint per acre. Jesse and Aubrey Thompson won the yield contest with a yield of 2,006 pounds of lint per acre.

In 1928, county agent N. S. Martin added strawberry and dairy projects for the 261 members. Enrollment in clubs decreased due to bad road conditions in the winter and spring. But by 1932, all clubs were organized in the schools. An contest was held to improve enrollment. That year enrollment was 10 girls and 189 boys in 10 clubs. No financial support was sought from local banks due to the Depression.

Juanita Bradley became Lauderdale County's first home agent in 1933. Under her influence, 100 boys and girls enrolled in agriculture projects and 250 girls enrolled in home economics projects. Helen Weller was the home agent by 1935.

1936 brought the first Negro agents, the peanut project, the fat pig project and home agent Dixie Ashcraft. In 1939, F. H. Paschal transferred to the county from Chester County as the new county agent. The training of judging teams was first attempted at that time. In 1940, home agent Nancy Warren held canning, tea towel and slip contests. 4-H girls won approximately $35 in prize money at the Mid-South Fair. There were 114 girls in 15 clubs and 226 boys in 21 clubs. The mule colt project was popular that year, a beef calf show was held on the court square in Ripley.

In 1941, there were 706 boys and girls in 4-H and 195 days had begun. This was also the year for the first mimeographed yearbook for all club members.

With World War II, 4-H scrap drives were held, and projects and activities that would be helpful in winning the war were emphasized. In 1944, the county garden agent went to Evone Crithfield of Ripley. The Farm Bureau provided 12,800 chicks and 12,800 pounds of starter mash, payment was to be made in the fall. Mary Justice Fry was the new home agent.

In 1946, the first assistant agent was hired in Lauderdale County. Leroy Collier was the first such agent. He was followed by O. J. Nunn in 1947. Mary Bailey was followed as home agent in 1947 by Cora Livingston.

The year 1947 brought several firsts. The Young Farmers & Homemakers were organized in the county. Clubs were broken down within each school. Junior 4-H leaders became part of the program. That year Lauderdale County had a County 4-H Club Council, officers were Lucian Earl Chipman, president, Elizabeth Ann Moore, vice-president, and Joyce Ann Kimble, secretary. Club meetings and school schedules were worked around the cotton harvest. Rodent control was a popular club demonstration. A tractor maintenance school for 4-H boys was held in 1948.

In 1949, William C. Lanham Jr. was named assistant county agent. The crops judging team took first place at the West Tennessee State Fair in Jackson. All clubs were encouraged to complete the requirements of the 4-H Club charter in order to become official 4-H Clubs. Three hundred boys and girls attended the Mid-South Fair. Enrollment in 1949 was 1,113.

A dairy judging school was held at Fort Pillow State Farm in 1950. The crops and poultry judging teams won first place at the Mid-South Fair. Four hundred people attended a livestock show of 35 pigs and eight steers.

Program Growth

Charles T. Peal was named as the new assistant county agent in 1951. Under his supervision, 4-H rally days brought 4-H Club members into Ripley once a year for a movie, share-the-fun festival, parade and musical games. Club enrollment doubled between the mid-'50s and mid-'60s.

During that time period, several 4-H'ers won in district competition. In addition to Roundup delegates, the county also had three members who attended national 4-H Club Congress, two of whom were national winners.

Swine was a popular project with both boys and girls. The pig chain program helped to upgrade the quality of swine herds on Lauderdale County farms. Corn and cotton were also popular agricultural programs. Clothing was the most popular project at the time. Dress textures were also popular.

Each year approximately 750 4-H'ers attend 4-H Days at the Mid-South Fair. 4-H Clubs were integrated in the county in 1966. Lauderdale County was considered to have one of the top overall 4-H programs in Tennessee during the period.

Present Activities

Current 4-H Club enrollment is approximately 1,400 and is divided almost evenly between boys and girls. Lauderdale County 4-H members are enrolled in all 48 projects, in addition to participation on 4-H judging teams and other activities. The chick chain has been popular for several years. The arts and crafts project has been the top project in the county.

Projects that are gaining in popularity include swine, wildlife, photography and clothing. Non-farm related projects have gained in popularity in recent years with the decline in the number of farms in the county.

Lauderdale County hosted five Japanese teenagers in 1984 in the 4-H/LABO exchange. Tennessee's turn to travel to Japan was in 1985. Angela Connell represented the county and stayed with the family of the girl she hosted the year before. Plans are to continue the program.

City Records Lost

ARSON IS REPORTED by fire marshals in the burning, just after midnight early Wednesday of last week, of a 60-foot trailer housing Gates City Hall and Gates police headquarters.

The total loss, estimated at up to $35,000, with only 20% of the loss insured, destroyed all city records, including the 1901 charter.

As city officials set up temporary offices in the Water Plant on 6th St., alderman Jackie Newman suggested consolidation into a building on Wardlaw housing a community center and the fire department, but Mayor Leamon Critchfield feels the site, half a mile from downtown, is not convenient for the public.

Halls Hosts Dresden With Play-Off Hopes Dimming

After a 14-9 loss to South Fulton, which dropped Halls High School's Tigers into a 1-2 tie for third place in District 14-A, behind Lake, 3-0, and South Fulton, 2-1, Halls this Friday hosts Dresden and next Friday Madison County's Denmark West before a district tie-breaker at Greenfield, also 1-2 with only Halls left on its district plate.

The tie winner is unlikely to be in the state play-offs this fall. Lake and South Fulton have only one district foe left—Sharon, 0-2 in the district and 1-6 in all its games this season.

On the Halls field Friday, South Fulton's Red Devils lost four of four fumbles, but the hosts lost three of six, and one gave senior end Langston Rose (6-2, 180), despite a deep thigh bruise in pre-season practice, a 99-yard camper for a Devil TD in the first quarter.

Senior quarterback Tab Vowell (6-4, 170) got two yards in the second period for another Red Devil tally and ran the points after to make it 14-0 at the half.

Halls senior back Derrick Cluff (5-11, 208) went 51 yards to score in the third period, and junior Justin Taylor (6-0, 193) booted a 38-yard field goal to narrow the South Fulton victory.

The National Ornamental Metal Museum

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Ever since man first discovered that he could purify some of the elements he found in the earth into sturdy substances like iron, or combine them into durable alloys like bronze, metals have played both a functional and decorative role in everyday life.

Metalsmithing is one of man's oldest trades, and the art form it represents ranges from delicate gold jewelry to massive wrought iron gates. Examples of both are contained in an unusual museum high on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi River in downtown Memphis.

The National Ornamental Metal Museum is headed by Jim Wallace, an enterprising blacksmith who took over a three-acre complex of building leased by the City of Memphis to the Museum Foundation in 1977 to establish a memorial to the art of metalsmithing.

"This museum is the only one of its kind in the United States," Wallace explains proudly. "It is a place dedicated to metalwork of all kinds. That includes precious metals, semi-precious materials, and not precious at all — iron, for example."

Iron is Wallace's own particular medium, and the museum's permanent collection includes a variety of examples, ranging from weather-vanes and handmade nails to large outdoor sculptures and a delightful little Victorian era gazebo with a spectacular view of the Mississippi River.

Visiting exhibits, which change on a regular basis, can feature almost any type of metal from exquisite gold jewelry to ancient iron locks.

"The changing exhibits are the basis of the museum," Wallace says. "What you see here today is entirely different from what was here last month, and entirely different from what we will have next month, or next year. They range from one-person contemporary shows to historical works. We have had exhibits from many countries on loan at the museum for extended periods. In most cases we try to combine old work and new work in the same exhibit. We are interested in showing that the history of metalwork is old and rich, and while styles may change, many of the techniques are centuries old."

As fascinating as the exhibits are, The National Ornamental Metal Museum is much more than just a showcase for examples of the art of metalsmithing. It is also a very busy working smithy.

"A smithy is any place where itself has some claim to historic significance. The grounds are part of what was once known as "The Marine Hospital."

The oldest of the three large brick buildings dates from 1870 and was a facility used in the extensive Memphis research which led to a cure for the infamous yellow fever epidemics which once swept the Memphis area.

The museum's main exhibit building dates from 1932. Originally a WPA project, it once served as a nurse's dormitory for the hospital complex.

The third of the remaining historic buildings on the grounds was once the Junior Medical Officers Quarters. It is now used as temporary housing for visiting craftsmen, consultants and scholars.

The National Ornamental Metal Museum is located at 374 West California Avenue just off Interstate 55 near downtown Memphis. It is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for students and children 5 to 18. There is no admission charge on Wednesdays.

For more information about the museum and other attractions in the Memphis area, contact the Tennessee Department of Tourist Development, Room T, Box 23170, Nashville, Tennessee 37202.

Readers Speak

Editor:

I read with great interest your coverage of last week's meeting of Halls Mayor and Board of Aldermen. I am quite certain that the citizens of Halls also read with great interest, so it disturbs me that they did not receive the full story. I would now like to set some minds at rest by calling the rest of the story and correcting part of what was printed.

First and foremost, I must address rates because more than half of Mr. Almond's "fact sheet" addressed this subject. The fact is, I told Mayor Higdon that if Forked Deer Electric Corp. rejected the Halls franchise, we would initiate a split rate schedule, so the city of Halls' rates would remain the same. We did not propose that the city of Halls have the same rate schedule as our rural customers. Our proposal included no additional cost to the citizens of Halls as a result of this proposed change. Forked Deer Electric Corp. would absorb all costs.

There also appears to be a misunderstanding about power source. The "fact sheet" says Forked Deer Electric Corp. has only one power source to the city of Halls. Under our servicing arrangement, Halls would receive power from our Halls Sub-Station. In the event of a power outage, either the Bonicord Sub-Station or the Richwood Sub-Station would restore power to Halls almost immediately.

Finally, Ripley Power & Light says it has three employees living in the Halls area, and it plans to build a new building. Forked Deer Electric Corp. has four employees living in the city of Halls, and virtually all of our employees live in the Halls area. What's more, we won't have to build a new facility because we are already here and have been for more than 40 years, so our customers will always find someone in the Halls office during working hours.

We believe consumers are interested in two basic factors, whether they are in the market for power or any other product. These two factors are cost and service. Forked Deer Electric Corp. proposed identical cost and reliable service—identical cost by using a split rate schedule and reliable service because Halls is the base of our operations.

RUSSELL JACOBS
Manager, Forked Deer Electric

[We welcome these clarifications, but the Tenn. Valley Authority does not permit a split rate schedule in any of 160 power systems it supervises.

[RPL's presentation to the Halls board included a letter 3 Oct. from Glenn E. Parrish, Western Region manager for TVA, in which he states:

"I see no basis for you or any other system in West Tenn. to apply different retail rates to a portion of their customers."—Ed.]

Editor:

The Mayor and Board of Aldermen of Halls have the difficult decision to make regarding the franchise of the electrical service to the town of Halls.

The current franchise is with Ripley Power & Light. Forked Deer Electric Co-Operative has requested to bid on the franchise.

According to the information given at the October board meeting, Ripley Power & Light's rate is presently lower than that of Forked Deer Electric. If Forked Deer Electric is granted the franchise, it will have to purchase, from Ripley Power & Light, lines, poles, meters, etc. This, in itself, would be a great expense that would have to be passed on to the consumer. In my opinion, there would be no way Forked Deer Electric could maintain or even lower their rates to Ripley Power & Light's present rates.

Do we, as citizens and taxpayers, want to pay higher electric bills? I feel Ripley Power & Light has furnished our town with excellent service for years. As a manager of low income and elderly housing, I realize how higher electric bills would put a hardship on these people.

It is my hope that the Mayor and Board would see fit to continue our present service with Ripley Power & Light.

Everyone who pays an electric bill has the right to an opinion. Voice it!

Careful Study Needed

Because of our illness and eye sight problems we have not been able to maintain a close check of civic affairs in Halls and for this reason have expressed no opinions.

However, we think that the proposed franchise change to Forked Deer Electric Corp. from Ripley Power and Light Co. needs careful study.

We do not doubt the statements of Russell Jacobs, manager of Forked Deer Electric, concerning rates or service but in the past TVA has been very reluctant to have varied rates. Because of the long distances involved Forked Deer Electric has many more miles of line to maintain and this could create a problem.

We have no quarrel with Forked Deer Electric and are certainly glad to see them located in Halls but we think careful study is indicated before any decision to change the franchise is made.

It Can Happen

This writer has been a consistent and faithful fan of the University of Tennessee football team since high school days. During the years we have seen them play many games and have always hoped they would win. This year the Vols are having a terrible year with a 0-6 record and will come to the Liberty Bowl Saturday to play Memphis State. For the first time we will be pulling for Memphis State Tigers although it will be with some misgivings.

Memphis State has played excellent football for the last three games and pulled a major upset two weeks ago over the University of Florida. It would not be an upset if MSU should win Saturday's game but it would mark the first time that the Tigers have beaten the Vols. It can happen!

Halls Band Third In Memphis Meet

Halls' Golden Tiger Marching Band placed third in Class AA Saturday in the Mid-South Invitational competition in Memphis, behind Daniel High School, of New Albany, Miss., and Germantown.

Halls will play Saturday in the Heath High School "March for the Gold" near Paducah, Ky.

Boosters plan a soup and chili supper, 5 to 7 p.m. this Friday, in the Halls High School Cafeteria ($3, take-outs available).

They plan an Arts and Crafts Fair Nov. 12-13th in Halls Elementary School; for a booth ($10), contact Mrs. JoAnne Jones, 836-9065.

She's 100

MRS. HATTIE SHAW celebrated her 100th birthday Tuesday in Lauderdale County Nursing Home, with a key to the City of Ripley from Mayor Rozelle Crimner, greetings from Gov. McWhorter and President Reagan, and a cake. Friends says sweets are her weakness, but Tuesday, no one was counting her calories.

Tucker Advances To State First VP

William "Bill Pete" Tucker IV, Lauderdale County executive, has been elected first vice-president of the Tenn. County Executives Assn., after service as second vice-president.

Halls Hosts Denmark In Home-Coming Tilt

Halls High School's Tigers are 3-5 as they host Madison County's Denmark West this Friday in their Home-Coming game.

Halls led Dresden last week, 13-6, for its first win in four games. Halls led 6-0 after the first period, on quarterback Jeff Ezekiel's toss to Thomas Robinson for 45 yards and a TD with 5:58 in the period.

It was 6-6 at the half—after a Halls punt went awry and Justin Taylor's 47-yard field goal try hit the cross bar—and 6-6 after three quarters.

Robinson intercepted on the Dresden 42 to let Chris Smith ramble 21 yards and set up Halls' fourth period touchdown, on Ezekiel's pass to Robinson for 17 yards.

Phone Bills Are Shaved

County telephone rates will rise 60¢ (with some long-distance savings) Dec. 1st but will drop steeply Jan. 1st, for basic residential service and in-state long distance.

On Dec. 1st, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will begin collecting 60¢ more per month (total $3.20) connection charge, but will cut inter-state long distance rates an average of 3.8% for more than 124 miles, less for shorter distances (for about 25% of its inter-state calls).

On Jan. 1st, South Central Bell will cut its basic residential rate in this county from $10.05 to $7.55 and cut rates for long distance in the state from 10¢ to 20¢ (the largest cuts on calls within 40 miles).

Readers Speak

Editor:
 Cotton farmers and businesses of West Tennessee would like to let the public know and to publicly say "Thanks!" to all the cotton gins for getting together and starting a rebate program for farmers.

In the past, a gin would gin a farmer's cotton for the seed. Starting this year, you would believe that when West Tennessee farmers produce a total of 600,000 bales, that the gins will offer an average rebate of $12.50 back to the farmer for each bale! This means at least a $7,500,000.00 return to the farmers' pocket! Banks, fertilizer, chemical, farm equipment and auto dealerships should also appreciate what the gins have done for the farmers, businesses and economy of West Tennessee.

We, the farmers, believe that when gin owners update machinery, add trailers and mobile buildings, they are thinking of us and the future of cotton in West Tennessee. When new gins are built, once again, it is with the farmer in mind. We appreciate all they (the gin owners and operators) have done for us in the past. We know it has been hard on them to keep trailers empty for our use and to run a gin 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for several weeks, just to keep up with our demands.

We would hope that all concerned in planting, raising, and processing of cotton would continue the good effort to make cotton "king" once again in West Tennessee. And we know that our gins are doing more than their share.

Tribute Paid Mrs. Carter

Mrs. A. C. Carter, of Dry Hill, has received a tribute from Linda Weeks, reprinted by permission from the Dyersburg State-Gazette.

"Mrs. Annie Buford Carter was my first grade teacher. I knew her before school started because she was a friend of our family and visited my grandmother, but I had never seen her in her own place—the classroom.

"My mother took me to school that first day and Miss Annie Buford was waiting in the doorway of the classroom. She looked almost as tall as the door, much taller than when I saw her standing in the yard or sitting in church. I felt smaller as I stood there waiting to be a first grader.

"She leaned down and welcomed me for the first time. I remember the room was filled with tiny wooden desks that weren't much higher than her knees. I think she could reach to the top of the chalkboard. I had only known her as my grandmother's friend, but now she was my teacher.

"First grade was exciting. I remember how much I liked reading about the adventures of Dick and Jane, and how much she encouraged my efforts. One day she did something special. When my mother came to pick me up, Miss Annie Buford told me to have her step beneath the open windows of the classroom. My mother pulled the car onto the gravel drive just outside the first grade classroom, and Miss Annie Buford leaned out the open window and handed her a copy of the first grade reader. I was allowed to take it home over the weekend to practice reading. I can still see her in the window giving that special book to my mother.

"I liked first grade. We had a secret playing spot near the gravel driveway. There was a crawl space beneath the bushes that lined the drive, and we would squeeze in there to play during recess. It was more fun than any organized game or elaborate playground equipment.

"Miss Annie Buford read stories to us, and in the background we could hear birds outside in the bushes and cars passing on the road. Dirt doobers would buzz through the open windows and hover around the lights and the fans. If a breeze came up, it

JEANNE JONES

KING RANCH CHICKEN GOES "GOURMET"

Dear Jeanne:

Enclosed are two recipes that I would like to have a lighter version of. I heard you on the Ed Bush radio show, I enjoy your articles in the Fort Worth Star Telegram and I have your book. Thank you very much.

Naomi H. Lord
 Fort Worth, Texas

KING RANCH CHICKEN
 2 chickens, cooked, boned and diced (4½ cups)
 1 medium onion, finely chopped
 1 clove garlic, minced
 1 bell pepper, seeded and diced
 1 can Ro Tel tomatoes, green chilies

1 can mushroom soup
 1 can cream of chicken soup
 1 teaspoon cumin
 1 teaspoon chili powder
 1 (11-ounce) package tortilla chips
 ½ pound Cheddar cheese, grated

Sauté onion, garlic and bell pepper. Mix Ro Tel tomatoes and green chilies, soup and spices. Layer a 9x13-inch baking dish with the tortilla chips, vegetables, soup mixture and chicken, and then top with the cheese.

Bake in a 350 F oven for 20 to 30 minutes. Makes six servings, about 1½ cups each.

I'm thrilled that you are enjoying my work. I have revised one of the recipes you sent me, but the other one is still not quite right. I'm still working on it!

This casserole is another example of the price you pay for the convenience of opening a can, or in this case, several cans. Many of us don't realize that "gourmet" simply means "made from scratch." To make this dish more healthy, you will need to become a "gourmet."

By making your own soup bases and tortilla chips, you can control exactly the ingredients that go into your casserole. Not only will the final product be better for you, it will taste fresher too. By reducing the amount of cheese called for, and using a fat-reduced cheese, the calories and cholesterol are further reduced without an appreciable difference in taste.

Since I couldn't find Ro Tel tomatoes in my market, I have used plain canned tomatoes and diced chilies instead. Try my Gourmet King Casserole and see if you don't agree that the little extra effort is worth it.

The cooks came in early, and as they prepared lunch the smells would drift through the screen door that separated the cafeteria from the classrooms. The aroma of baking bread filled the classroom almost every day. After lunch, we could buy poppicles—pushups and two stick poppicles, just like the ones they sold down at Ford's grocery.

"The school was old and the hallway was a dark contrast to the bright classrooms. Squeaky wooden floors gave away anyone who dared to run to the water fountain or the bathroom. The handrails on the stairs were worn smooth and there were slight footpaths in the wooden floors that even layers of wax couldn't hide. I remember the smell of oiled floors, and I can still hear the sound of the handbell that signaled recess and the end of school. It was a good place to begin a school career. A kind teacher, books, recess, hot rolls and poppicles—what more could anyone want in the first grade."

Services were at 3 p.m. Oct. 9th in Cleaves Temple Methodist Church, of which she was a member, with burial in Old Chapel Cemetery, Thompson's Mortuary in charge.

She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Ora Jane Jackson, of Jackson; a grandchild; and two great-grandchildren.

Ballots made of broken pottery were used by the citizens of Ancient Athens to get rid of unpopular politicians. Whenever 6000 or more were cast, the official was sent into exile for 10 years.

Cattle branding was practiced 4,000 years ago. Old tomb paintings show Egyptians branding their cattle.

Cragfont's Builder Still Keeps Watch

GALLATIN, Tenn. — General James Winchester was an early settler of Middle Tennessee's frontier, a contemporary of Andrew Jackson, Sam Houston and John Overton. Like his friends, the general prospered in the wilderness, and in 1798 he began constructing Cragfont, a remarkable mansion and a noticeable contrast to the area's log homes. Here he and his wife, Susan, raised 14 children, carving a civilization out of their surroundings. Today, when curator Kim Fayna unlocks Cragfont's doors each morning, she checks to see that everything is in place for the day's tours. Everything appears in order — except for Winchester's 1824 daybook. It is open again. And the case holding his epaulettes from the War of 1812 is closed. The secretary door is also open, and a book has been removed. General Winchester has been visiting his homeplace again, it seems. "And he always takes great care," Mrs. Fayna said. "There is a candlestick in front of the door to the secretary. If you just opened the door, it would knock over the candlestick — but it has always been moved to the other side. "When I first came here eight years ago, it scared me to death when I realized things like this were happening," Mrs. Fayna says. "But finally I decided that this is where his home and his life was, and I don't blame him — I guess if it were me I'd still be here too." Born in Maryland in 1752, Winchester and his brother, George, were honored for bravery in the Revolution. They came to the Cumberland area to establish Sumner County for the state of North Carolina. James selected a site on a hilltop and at the base of a spring, thus the name Cragfont, to build his home. This was an unusual move, for not only was the area still a frontier, there was still a danger of Indians. George was killed by the Indians in 1794 at age 37. But Winchester was determined, and he brought stone masons and carpenters from his native Maryland. Built of gray Tennessee limestone quarried in the area, the house has a "T" shape. Poplar, walnut, cherry and ash from the surrounding woods was also used. Across the front are seven iron stars used as anchors for iron rods extending front to back for support. The front doors open onto a spacious hall leading to a small sitting room and a large parlor. Further back is the general's office, a back hallway and dining room, kitchen and smokehouse. Upstairs is a large master suite, a hallway and two bedrooms. Behind this section is the ballroom. "This was the first private home in Tennessee to have a ballroom," Mrs. Fayna said. "General Winchester entertained Andrew Jackson, John Overton, Sam Houston and General LaFayette here. "Behind the ballroom is the gentlemen's refreshment room," she said. "Upstairs is the nursery where guests could send their children during parties." Guests could step out on either side of the ballroom onto airy porches overlooking well kept gardens, a pond and the surrounding hills, just as it does today. General Winchester died in 1826, but the family occupied the home a total of 66 years. The Winchesters left after the Civil War, and a succession of owners lived there. In 1956, the state of Tennessee purchased Cragfont, and the Sumner County Chapter of the Association for the Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities began restoration. Since that time, Winchester descendants have returned many original furnishings, including the dining table, a desk, an 1800 pencil post bed, a half-tester bed and a mirror. Other furnishings are American Federal antiques. Several owners declared that the Winchesters never really left their home at all, most notably Nell C. Satterwhite, whose family lived there from 1890 to 1931. Nell kept an extensive diary of her life at Cragfont, including references to the apparition of Susan Winchester. Three friends had come to spend the night, she noted, and after a bridge game, Nell gave a tour of Cragfont. One lady became very upset in the attic, insisting that she had seen something. The next evening, she described to Nell the features and clothing of the apparition. Nell recognized the characteristics, and they decided to talk with two Winchester descendants. After hearing the story, the ladies produced a portrait of Susan Winchester — the same figure seen in the attic. At other times, the invisible occupants could be more mischievous. A guest was napping on the parlor sofa one morning and heard someone enter the room. Assuming it was Nell, she listened as the person came to stand over her. Suddenly, a pillow was snatched from under her head and thrown to the floor. She sat up, only to find herself alone. Nell left Cragfont in 1931, and whatever else had been there all those years decided to give a special farewell. Several friends came to spend the evening with her. After dinner, one guest became increasingly agitated and finally revealed what had happened. Throughout the dinner he had felt a hand clasp his under the table, but saw only his hand. Later, another guest admitted that an invisible hand had also grasped hers repeatedly during dinner. Nell does not reveal in her diary whether she too felt the handclasp, but perhaps she took them to mean goodbye to one who was leaving forever, from those who were staying forever. Cragfont is open by appointment Nov. 1-April 15. Call 615-452-7070. Hours from April 15-Nov. 1 are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays, except Monday, Sunday 1-5 p.m. For more information on Cragfont and Gallatin, contact the Tennessee Department of Tourist Development, Room T, Box 23170, Nashville, Tennessee, 37202. — Carolyn Brackett —

A Report for Tennesseans

Since I co-sponsored the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights last year my office has received hundreds of letters and calls in support of it. Some of the stories I've heard from around the country about the Internal Revenue Service and its collection techniques are startling. They vary from property being impounded without notice after arrangements had been made to pay the taxes in question, to a man who was fined $10,000 for filling out his tax forms with a typewriter that was the wrong pitch. The IRS itself is aware that it sometimes goes too far in its collection efforts. During a 1986 hearing of the IRS Oversight Subcommittee, the IRS disclosed that it had conducted 582 investigations of alleged employee misconduct in 1985, with 221 employees requiring disciplinary action. At least 84 IRS employees were convicted in that same year for their crimes against taxpayers. As I see it, there is no question that it's time that the powers of the IRS are limited and that taxpayers are given a means of recourse if they are treated unfairly. The Taxpayers' Bill of Rights does just that — it extends to taxpayers the protection of the basic rights that they have with all other private and public entities. This bill mandates, for example, that the IRS prepare and distribute a statement of the rights and obligations of the taxpayer, including a description of the procedures for appeal, filing complaints, pursuing refund claims, and the rights and obligations of both parties during an audit. The bill also shifts the burden of proof to the IRS on all issues. Unlike other legal proceedings in which the citizen is assumed to be innocent until proven guilty, the IRS assumes guilt until innocence is proven. Once the burden of proof is shifted to the IRS, it will have a much greater incentive to ensure that it has a legitimate case before acting against a taxpayer. Other important provisions in the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights include: allowing taxes to be paid in installments if it facilitates collection; increasing to thirty days the notice required before property is seized; ensuring that the taxpayer cannot be charged interest or a penalty if he makes a mistake in his filing based on incorrect advice he received from the IRS through a written request; requiring that the IRS disclose in all notices a breakdown of the claimed amount into tax, interest, and penalties; revising the rules governing taxpayer interviews to make them fairer to the taxpayer; and mandating that the evaluation of IRS employees by their superiors must not be based on the amount of taxes collected by the IRS. This week the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights, as part of the Technical Corrections Act of 1988, passed the Senate by a vote of 87 to 11. I am working hard with my colleagues to see that this bill is passed by the full Congress and sent to the President as soon as possible. It's time that every American taxpayer is confident that he or she will be treated fairly by the IRS.

Epilepsy Still Misunderstood One out of three Americans still believes "having epilepsy makes other people think less of you and your family," according to results of a recent Gallup survey.

One out of every six people polled in this survey believes epilepsy is a form of mental illness.

One in eight people polled believes people with epilepsy should not have children, and one in six thinks it is possible to tell if people have epilepsy by looking at them. The Gallup study was sponsored by Park-Davis.

Such perceptions reveal that, despite improvements in public awareness about epilepsy over the last 30 years, misconceptions about epilepsy persist, adding social stigma to the difficulties people with epilepsy must confront.

Dr. Ilo E. Leppik, Professor of Neurology and Clinical Professor of Pharmacy at the University of Minnesota, says that, "In reality, thanks to great strides in diagnosing and treating the disorder, most people with epilepsy have gained control over seizures and are able to attend school, hold a job, and lead a full life."

"Dilantin," the first non-sedating anticonvulsant drug, is the mainstay of treatment for people with epilepsy.

"Dilantin has freed people with epilepsy from uncontrollable seizures for the past 50 years, allowing them to lead full and valuable lives," says Dr. Leppik. November is National Epilepsy Month. This is the perfect time for Americans to realize that people with epilepsy are no different than themselves.

Time To Choose

Voters of the United States will go to the polls Nov. 8th to elect a president for the next four years. The sad part of this is that during each presidential election fewer and fewer of the eligible voters actually vote.

Some predictions have been made that the voter turn-out in this election will be the lowest percentage in history. Failure of the two candidates, Vice-President George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis, to attract strong support has left apathy among the voters.

At the present, Bush, the Republican nominee, is leading in the polls by several percentage points. However it has been estimated that as many as 60% of those planning to vote have not yet fully decided who will receive their vote. We feel that this estimate is much too large, but still there remains a large group of voters who can go either way.

Every voter should vote for the man the voter believes will make the better president and not let a small portion of the electorate choose the winners.

Purely Personal Opinion

It is a privilege of every voter to decide whether to support Bush or Dukakis, but each voter should vote for which of the two will do the better job as president.

Personally, we endorse the candidacy of Bush with the feeling that he has more experience and is better equipped to serve our country. Gov. Dukakis has some strong points, but he is an Eastern liberal who believes much as Sen. Ted Kennedy does and can be expected to favor big government and more spending.

Bush has stated that he will not raise taxes, and Dukakis has stated he will not raise taxes unless necessary. We do not believe that either man can avoid some increase in taxes, but some of the programs favored by Gov. Dukakis would be far more costly than those proposed by Bush.

Another reason for supporting Bush is that a Democratic Congress and a Democratic president will add additional spending programs for any new money raised, while Bush would attempt to hold down spending.

Halls Band 3rd In W. Ky. AA Before State A Bid Saturday

The Halls Golden Tiger Marching Band placed third Saturday evening in Class AA competition in the Western Kentucky Invitational at Heath High School near Paducah.

Halls Field Commanders Trevis Nash and Sherry Prescott took first place in the class over Union County High School, of Morganfield, Ky., Trigg County High School, of Cadiz, Ky., and Reidland High School, of Paducah.

Halls' baritone soloist, Chris McCallister, was Outstanding Soloist Overall, topping Class AAA winner Lone Oak and Class AAAA Marshall County High Schools.

The Halls Band received a superior rating, along with only six other bands in the contest, out of 12 bands competing. Reidland High School was sweepstakes winner.

A large crowd of Boosters accompanied the Band to its last contest before the State Class A Competition at Lebanon High School this Saturday.

County Harvest Here Bountiful

By Charles T. Peal

Many county cotton producers are picking more than a bale per acre, the first time over. Reports are common.

Green Scene

Yields look pleasing, though they were never expected to reach last year's 915 pounds of lint per acre. Cotton acreage is up this fall, to about 28,000 acres.

Last fall's 25,500 acres gave the county its top income crop, to the tune of $14,699,475.

Last year's 115,000 acres of soy beans (averaging 20 bushels per acre) sold for about $12,650,000.

Wheat (39 bushels per acre) was marketed at about $2,842,242. Corn (11,060 acres, average yield 123 bushels) may have set a county record, grossing about $2,448,684.

Forest products grossed about $2,200,000; 400 acres of tomatoes; about $1,500,000; nursery products, including a turf farm at Cherry, about $1,000,000; other produce, about $500,000; grain sorghum (down in acreage because of lower prices) about $432,160; and hay, becoming an important supplemental crop, about $175,000.

Gross income for all county crop producers in 1987 is estimated at $38,447,561.

Value of all beef on farms in 1988 is estimated at $4,200,000; of swine, at $560,000.

Insurance Urgent

Farmers who plan winter crops with Farmers Home Administration drought emergency should check now on need of crop insurance for 1989.

Any farmer with a production loss exceeding 65% of normal must agree to purchase insurance for 1989 crops, with some exceptions, to obtain an FmHA emergency loan to help cover 1988 losses. Information from 635-4331.

Bark Mulch Ideal

Hardwood bark, applied correctly, is an ideal organic mulch. Besides protecting and beautifying plants, it is easy to apply and maintain and is relatively inexpensive.

It has been used for many years by nurseries and golf courses. Spring applications conserve soil moisture plants need during a dry summer and help curb weeds. Besides practically eliminating water and wind erosion, bark will greatly improve soil texture and aeration.

Fall mulching helps maintain an even soil temperature to prevent plant damage caused by alternate freezing and thawing.

Hardwood bark mulch is also useful as paths and walkways and as bedding material for plants.

Time For Planting

Fall is a good time to plant trees, shrubs, ground covers, cool-season grasses, and spring-flowering bulbs.

The ground is generally drier than in the spring, easier to work, and less likely to become compacted.

Soil temperature in the fall is favorable for root growth, enabling plants to establish themselves. Moderate air temperatures reduce water stress on the plants. Since summer shoot growth has almost stopped, there is little tender tissue to be damaged by low temperatures.

Leaves will remain active in photosynthesis for some of this period, but the demand for carbohydrates is less. This creates a surplus of food supplies for producing new root growth. A good selection of plants at garden centers and nurseries is another good reason to plant at this time of year.

ED JONES REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

8th District, TN Recently the House unanimously passed the Veterans' Judicial Review Act. This legislation will allow veterans to take claims against the Veterans Administration into a newly created appeals court. Under present policy, veterans have no judicial remedy with respect to claims for veterans benefits. Currently there exists a Board of Veterans' Appeals. Under the new legislation, this board would be done away with and an independent Court of Veterans' Appeals would be established. This new court would be similar to the Court of Military Appeals and would make rulings on all cases involving veterans and the Veterans Administration. The judicial review would allow decisions of the new court, as well as VA regulations, to be appealed to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Any legal matter except factual findings may be appealed. Such matters include constitutional, statutory, regulatory or interpretive issues. The Court of Veterans' Appeals would consist of approximately 65 judges. One of the provisions of the bill would prohibit attorneys from charging any fee in connection with a VA benefit application. If the Veterans Administration should issue a denial of that claim, however, the veteran could then engage the services of an attorney and be required to pay a reasonable fee. This fee could be reduced if deemed too excessive by the court. The purpose of this particular inclusion is to protect the veteran from being charged an unreasonable amount by a lawyer for a veteran's case. At present, the Board of Veterans' Appeals is a branch of the Veterans Administration which considers appeals of denials for benefits or claims. Veterans are currently prohibited under a Depression-era law from filing suit against the VA over benefit disputes. Under the new legislation, benefit disputes could be challenged in the Court of Veterans' Appeals where final action would be determined. The Court of Veterans' Appeals would operate independently of the Veterans Administration. VA regulations, on the other hand, would be first brought to the new court then taken to the appeals courts if necessary. The Senate is also considering legislation which would establish a court to hear appeals from the VA's internal review process. House and Senate conferees will work on a compromise to be voted on and hopefully sent to the President for signing before adjournment of the 100th Congress. In separate legislative action, the head of the Veterans Administration is expected to become a Cabinet level position next year.

I would like first of all to thank The Halls Graphic for the opportunity of sharing with its readers a history and information of all our churches in the Halls area. We as Christian brothers and sisters have much to offer our town in the areas of biblical training, encouragement, introducing people to Christ, and learning how to live the best lives God intends for us. We as United Methodists are quick to point out that we do not have all the answers about life and neither are we perfect or profess to be, but we try. Trying to be better every day as we walk with God is the best way to praise Him. We believe that Christianity is more than a set of rules or guidelines, it is a way of life. We also believe that our lives can be important and meaningful as we trust in the redemption of Jesus and try our best to follow His ways; the ways of love, forgiveness, patient endurance, and seeking first God's kingdom. We certainly believe in the authority of the scripture, conversion and new birth, faith and good works, human dignity, and the grace of God. I do not have time in this article to go into much detail on all our beliefs and it is not my intention to do so, but to acquaint the readers as to where we stand and what we believe, and hopefully to hear from those interested in being a part of our church family. My hope and prayer is that everyone who reads this article and those that follow in the coming weeks will find a church home for themselves and if there is any way the Halls United Methodist Church may assist you, feel free to call or drop by my office. My door is always opened. Brother Kim

Barr Means Burroughs, And They Have A Great Store Of Historic Lore

By Mrs. Sandra Holman
 Hopefully this will be one of those treasured stories from days gone by...stories that have only one outlet for preservation—word of mouth. Originally intended to be the story of life in the Barr community of Lauderdale County's earlier days, it seemed to mushroom into the story of one man and one woman and the families their lives have touched, existed, and struggled to survive for. Maybe with the telling of their stories, there will come a better understanding of a way of life that left its mark on the lives of the people who survived those years...and still came away with fond memories of those days long past.

T. E. 'Seebo' Burroughs was born, at home of course, on the Barr, in 1909. His parents were Emma and John Henry Burroughs. At the time of his birth, the Barr was a bustling little community located on the banks of the Mississippi River. With 35 or 40 families living, farming, raising their children and worshipping together, there were all the necessities life had to offer available at that particular point in time. There was a post office, school, church, and a general store.

There being only one church building in the community to serve both the Methodist and Baptist religions, the two congregations held services on alternate Sundays. Baptists worshipped twice a month and Methodists worshipped the remaining two Sundays. It makes one wonder what they did on their 'off Sunday'.

During this period of time, the people who lived at the Barr received their mail three times a week from across the river in Barfield, Ark. I was surprised to learn from Mr. Burroughs that they still only have three mail deliveries per week. In this instance, times have not really changed that much. The post office was a vital part of the community during those early 1900's, and Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday are the only days to look forward to even today.

There was one school that served 44 students in grades one through eight. It was a classic example of your one-room school house with the wood stove, cloak room and lunch pails lined up waiting for the bell to ring for the appointed hour. When the bell rang back then, someone had to pull the rope instead of pressing a button. The scheduling for school opening were planned around planting time and the harvest season. The students would attend classes for two months in the summer, adjourn to put the crops in the ground, then go back to school until the end of September or the first of October, when it was time to harvest. The young people's strong backs were so desperately needed during those months that this was the only solution to a family's dilemma. It was either this way or the child could never have gone to school at all. Although many chores had to be done before and after school hours, they were still able to attend on this staggered schedule.

The general store on the Barr could furnish a wide variety of goods and equipment. Because the supplies came to them by steamboat from Memphis, orders were mailed to the supplier, and the goods were then received on the next steamboat. Everything from dry goods and shoes, to the mule harnesses could be shipped, and the General Store was the gathering place for all the latest news from both within the community and from the outside world. The steamboat ran on Tuesday and Friday, so the community was never completely cut off from the latest news.

The steamboats place in the history of Barr is indisputable. One prime example was the announcement of the end of World War I in 1918. You could hear their whistles blowing all up and down the river that day. Communication, and even the very livelihood of the people of Barr depended on the boats.

'Seebo' Burroughs was the sixth of seven children born to John and Emma Burroughs. His father had moved to Cedar Grove from Huntsville, Ala. in 1890. At the age of 29, John Henry had married Emma Roberts. The year was 1891, and by 1892 the first of their six sons and one daughter had been born. He was named Elbert, and he was soon followed by Claude, Clyde, Mrs. Zuba Hilliard, Aubrey (Pete), Theron (Seeb), and J. D. Along with Seeb, Clyde and their only sister, Zuba, are still living. In 1894, John Henry heard that there was timber work to be found in Lauderdale County. With the hope of finding work and land to farm, he packed his family into a canvas covered wagon and brought them to the Barr. He also brought with him his mother, who died at the ripe old age of 95.

Tragedy struck early in the Burroughs family. Emma Burroughs died when Seeb was only three years old. She had gotten a splinter under her nail and blood poisoning quickly set up, even with the aid of a doctor who had been called in to help. She had been taken from her family at a very young age. Three of the boys were old enough to stay with their father at Barr to help with the farming, hunting and trapping. Hunting, fishing and trapping were done during the time that the crops were planted and the men were waiting for harvest time.

The death of their mother left the other three boys and their little sister without anyone to raise them properly. The baby (J. D.) was only six months old, and

Carroll County Yule Recalled

John Henry Burroughs was forced to call on his family in Carroll County for their help in raising his younger children. The four little ones went to Carroll County to make their home with an aunt and uncle—and there they remained for two years until February, 1915. Seobo can recall one particular Christmas spent in Carroll County. His father sent two big hams for Christmas and was able to make the long trip from Barr, so that he could be with his children during the holidays.

When Zuba was 14 and able to take care of the younger children, John Henry and his eldest son, Elbert, set out for a joyful reunion with his other children. Seobo can clearly remember Elbert telling him of that long two-day journey. The trip from Cedar Grove to Whitefield took two days. At Whitefield, they spent their first night with his aunt, Ger (Mrs. Hugh) Bray and her family. The next day they completed their journey home and spent the second night on the Barr with Claude and his family. Seobo has only one memory of his journey back to Barr—he remembers traveling through Humboldt and thinking it was the most beautiful town he had ever seen in his young life.

Thus began the memories of the happiest and most carefree days in the life of T. E. Burroughs. There were ball games on Sunday afternoon with all the "good old boys" from the Barr gathering to play just any team that was brave enough to show up. Or, if necessary, they would travel across the river to Tomato, Ark., or down the river to Hales Point. They would even go so far as Edith or Central if they heard the possibility of a good match awaited them.

There were all the church socials to attend. During all these years Seobo had known and courted Lucille Hardy, daughter of the E. R. Hardys. Mr. Hardy was the postmaster at Barr for 23 years, with the front of his home serving as the post office. Mr. Hardy died in 1986 at the age of 95. Mr. Hardy died in 1976.

Lucille Hardy was not allowed to go to dances, so the church socials were where she saw the most of her future husband. They married when she was 18, and from this union came eight children—Ann (Mrs. Rhea) Swims and Owen Dwight Burroughs, of Double Bridges, Lawanna (Mrs. Jackie) Walker and Mrs. Virginia Hurt, of Halls, Maxine (Mrs. Gaylon) Hardy, of Gates, Dallas Burroughs, of Double Bridges, and last but not ever least, the twins—Teresa (Mrs. Mike) Chisholm, of Double Bridges, and Alesia (Mrs. John) Wagoner, of Akin, S.C. They have been blessed with 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. They married November 4th, and on that date this year, they will celebrate their 57th anniversary.

In the winter months some of the families living on the Barr would gather at the designated home, bring the kids, and have what they called "card parties." Each family brought either sugar, pecans or walnuts, popcorn or any item necessary to contribute to the making of special treats for the parties. The women would gather in the kitchen and make what Seobo calls "some of the finest candy ever made." They would make popcorn balls, peanut brittle and many other special treats for which they could share recipes. They shared a lot of "girl talk" in that kitchen around the stove—while outside the wind howled and the snow blew, they were all happy and secure in the loving friendship of fine neighbors and friends. And of course, the kids had a hey-day. I can only imagine in my mind the kind of games they must have made up to play during those long social evenings. There were no televisions or other gadgets, so their little minds were doing what our children do not have to do today—being creative. For the men, there was a lot of rolling of Prince Albert cigarettes—just as Seobo still does today. Gal'darn those fancy cigarettes with the filters—they just don't taste the same, or so Seobo tells.

Seobo and his father farmed on shares with Seobo receiving $12.98 for his half of a bale of cotton. It had taken them six days to pick that bale of cotton, for which they had received 4 cents for the lint, and given the seed to the gin for ginning it for them. To make this crop they had borrowed $50 from Bob Kirkpatrick, and when all the cotton had been picked and ginned, they still owed him $12.50. These amounts seem so small today, but in their day, this was an enormous debt to the Burroughs family.

Mother Nature had a way of attacking these people who struggled to make their living during those lean years. She seemed to vent her anger often and without compassion. The flood of 1913 was deeply one could travel the roads in or out, and the ice gored to make river travel impossible. You could have walked across the Mississippi River all the way to their friends in Barfield, Ark., but no one was that brave or crazy.

Neighbors shared many things during this terrible time. They shared the chore of cutting wood and hauling it in to each family; they shared the task of going to Hales Point to get their corn ground into meal because they had long since run out of flour, and they shared their food. This was truly a time of "neighborly love" and a better people it would make of us today if we could have experienced these hard times. The appreciation of life and its provisions was instilled in these people for the rest of their lives—a lesson well taken by each.

The flood of 1937 began in January of that year. It began on a Sunday morning, rained all day and night, and when the Burroughs family woke up on Monday morning the water had started rising under their house. They watched Ewie Kissell and his boys running a boat in the water and attempting to call their cows to higher ground, with Horace Pankey doing the same with his herd. By Tuesday, they had moved everything but the kitchen stove upstairs. They placed the stove on the kitchen table when water began coming in the back door, and water was up to their waist in the front yard. The house floated away and the stove—still on the kitchen table—was found in a grove of cottonwood trees about a half mile from where their home had once stood. They had placed the food and furniture in a barn, and were very grateful that these things were spared. They were also glad that the flood had seemed to have gotten rid of one nuisance—the rats had floated away in the water.

For six weeks the family had to stay with an older sister of Mrs. Burroughs, who was married. The Red Cross gave them a tent, floored and screened it, and later the family added a kitchen that was made out of a neighbor's old storage house. They lived this way from August until the crops were laid by, then built another home and started over. During this time, Milton Swims ran a barge for shipping cotton, and the government paid him to keep up the river lights. This meant that he had to keep the lights filled with kerosene and was still able to run a ferry during his spare time.

After the terrible flood, the people of the community were encouraged, even urged, to participate in a program to preserve and raise all of their family's food. They were to keep records of their project and at the end of one year, the family that canned or preserved the most food would win a prize. The contest was sponsored by the Farmers Security Service and as the name implies, they had a motive for their encouragement to these families. Each store in the community gave gifts, and the top prize was a pressure cooker—a rare and precious item in those lean years.

The family at that time included eight people, including Seobo's brother, Clyde, now a patient in Lauderdale Nursing Home and 88 years old, and his son, Floyce. They had been brought home to Barr in the fall of 1925. Both were suffering from typhoid fever and needed a lot of care. Seobo's father was also making his home with them, so it took a lot of food for the family since Seobo and Lucille had three children by this time. They managed to eat 567 jars of food, raised chickens, hogs, cows, corn, peanuts, cabbage, and still raised 21 hales (500 pounds each) of cotton. The only items they had to buy were coffee (25 pound bags), sugar (100 pound sacks), and two barrels of flour. They churned their own milk for butter and buttermilk, and even though the contest covered three counties, with all of this work, they won the contest. The pressure cooker is still being used by the family, and the memory of this achievement remains fresh on their minds, even today. I can certainly see why—what an awesome job, and what a lot of work—and I do mean work!

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Burroughs were married on Nov. 4, 1931, by her uncle, Jack Hardy, who was a magistrate. Afterwards, they went to a Holiness Church meeting, and then home to her parents house. They owned three cane bottom chairs—no other furniture. Seobo owned a 1,000 pound steer and a heifer who gave birth to a calf on Christmas Eve. He then sold the steer to Harry Mohon for $36 and went to town to buy their furnishings. Their lives together have been filled with many happy memories and an abundance of love and family. He still fishes and can knit nets for dipping, which is a talent that few young men are able to do now; she belongs to the Key Corner Home Demonstration Club, in which she is a very active member. She also works—out of a need to stay active. I'm quite sure—in her daughter and son-in-law's restaurant (Jackie Walker's).

There is so much more I would have liked to tell you of my hours with the Burroughs, but time and space will cut this to the limit. I saw tears in his eyes when he spoke of many hard and happy times. I also saw his eyes light up when a trailer loaded with cotton would come by the window where we sat. He is a man who has worked hard his entire life for every inch of ground that he has ever owned, and she is the woman who has been at his side raising his children, tending his home, cooking his meals, nursing his wounds and illnesses, and those of his family. They have loved and they have shared a life time. With many years ahead of them, one can only hope and pray that these years will always be filled with the same love and understanding that they have always shared.

Thank you Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs for just a little insight into days and years that I had no idea were so completely filled. The good times and the bad—I feel as though I am a better person for having heard your story and for having been privileged enough to write such a small part of it down for others to share. This is the part of my job that I truly love—getting to know people like the two of you.

Doesn't Lauderdale County Deserve Representation In The State Senate Too.

This is the stationery of the incumbent senator for District 32. Since 1983, District 32 has included not only Shelby County but also Tipton and Lauderdale Counties. Why then does Leonard Dunavant still list his constituency as the 32nd Senatorial District of Shelby County?

Jeff Bloomfield believes that all of District 32 needs representation. He has the energy and vision to stand up for the entire district. He's committed to spending the time in Lauderdale County to properly represent you in Nashville. He will hold town meetings to hear your needs and concerns first hand.

So when you go to the polls on November 8, ask yourself, "Except for campaign times, when was the last time you saw Leonard Dunavant in Lauderdale County?" Then vote for Jeff Bloomfield.

Wants You To Know

COCAINE

The Fatal Facts

Sigmund Freud, Sherlock Holmes, famous personalities and popular songs have all contributed to the myths surrounding cocaine. Once believed to be a medicinal "tonic," we now know that cocaine is really a medical nightmare. As the myths begin to fade, the facts are becoming brutally clear—cocaine kills. Learning the facts about cocaine and where to find help if you have a cocaine problem, may prevent you or someone you love from becoming the next cocaine fatality.

Physical Effects

Cocaine is a powerful stimulant that acts on the central nervous system. Within seconds of using cocaine, heart rate, respiration, and blood pressure increase. This sudden overstimulation can cause cardiac arrest, respiratory failure, brain seizures, and as statistics show, sudden death. There is no such thing as "safe" amounts of cocaine—even first time users are at risk for these potentially fatal side effects.

Learning the facts about cocaine and where to find help if you have a cocaine problem, may prevent you or someone you love from becoming the next cocaine fatality.

This information is not intended to replace professional health care. See your health care professional for information relevant to your medical history.

Warning Signs

Many of the following warning signs may accompany cocaine use. If you, a friend, or loved one exhibits one or more of the following patterns, professional help is strongly recommended.

- Sudden, inexplicable mood swings ranging from euphoria to depression.
- Erratic performance at work or at school.
- Frequent absenteeism from work or school (usually after payday or before or after the weekend).
- Continuous money problems.
- Disappearance of valuable goods from the home.
- Brief, frequent trips to a bathroom or private room to cover up usage.
- Opposite behavior (i.e. a reserved person who becomes overly gregarious and talkative, etc.)

Where to Find Help

Fortunately, if you need help in kicking cocaine before it kills you—there are many local and national organizations that can provide help and referrals. Check your local phone books, "Yellow Pages," under Drug Abuse for numbers near you, or call one of the following cocaine "hotlines": (800) COCAINE, or (800) 662-HELP. Your private physician or religious advisor can also put you in contact with service organizations who specialize in helping people with cocaine and other chemical dependencies.
