Stolarick Sisters Win Mid-South Fair Title

Amy and Rebecca, 12 and 10, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Stolarick, of Memphis, formerly of Halls, joined Allison Anderson, 12, of University School in Jackson, as female vocalists in "Starlight" to win $100 by topping the Junior Youth Talent Contest finals Thursday of last week at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis, singing Alexander's Ragtime Band in the style of the Andrews Sisters.

The Stolarick sisters attend Germantown Middle School.

Wrestler 'Housequake' Feels New Vibrations

Rodney Dwight Napper, 27, of Gates, who has appeared as "Housequake" in professional wrestling on Memphis television, was sentenced last week to 6 years, 6 months in prison and fined $4,000 on two counts of selling cocaine.

Dyer County Circuit Judge Joe G. Riley added the sentences to a Tipton County sentence for violating probation.

Halls Board Facilitates Allen-Stone Expansion

Halls' city board agreed Monday evening to sell or lease to Allen-Stone Boxes, Inc., land west of its present building to permit addition of a 25,000 square-foot warehouse.

The board was told Kathy Ashmore, water plant supervisor, is moving from the area, with her husband, requiring a qualified replacement within six months to meet state standards.

On Mack Stanley's motion, the board raised the interest limit to finance the city's new garbage system from 7.5% to 7.65%, adding air-conditioning to the new garbage truck (total cost to remain under $150,000).

After a heated discussion, Eugene Pugh's motion to ask the Planning Commission to change zoning regulations to allow no multi-family dwellings in R-1 areas was 2-2, one abstaining. Mayor Randall Harris declined to break the tie, citing the possibility of alternative solutions.

On Stan Young's motion, the board approved having police officer George McKee pick up stray dogs and deliver them to the Humane Shelter in Ripley, for a fee, during his off-duty hours, if agreements can be worked out.

To facilitate its sale, the board declined the city's right to repurchase (if undeveloped) Nelson party — Earl Norman.

Violating bad check law — Michelle Davis (6 counts), Richard Tibbs (3 counts), Elizabeth Lewis (4 counts).

Young property on Industrial Rd. and Gate 6 Road.

On Barry Britt's motion, the board approved up to $23,000 in street repairs and up to $5,000 in sidewalk improvements as allocated by Street Committee members Pugh and Stanley.

On Young's motion, health insurance offered by Dolan G. Craig, of Ripley, agent for Business Men's Assurance Co., for city employees was accepted at $3,824 per month, to replace insurance through the Tenn. Municipal League which cost $4,200 per month.

On Young's motion, with a second by Stanley, the board voted 4-1 to buy a blue Ford LTD Crown Victoria police car from Dyersburg Ford for $14,400. Voting against was Noel Sherrod, because the same car in white would have cost $500 less, he says. James Tyus was not present to vote.

On Stanley's motion, the board agreed to remove the sidewalk on West Main, in front of the Lighthouse Church, with the church installing new sidewalk at its expense.

Aided By FmHA

MRS. MAXINE MITCHELL, of Halls, has just completed repair work on her house, with the help of a $5,000 grant from the Farmers Home Administration.

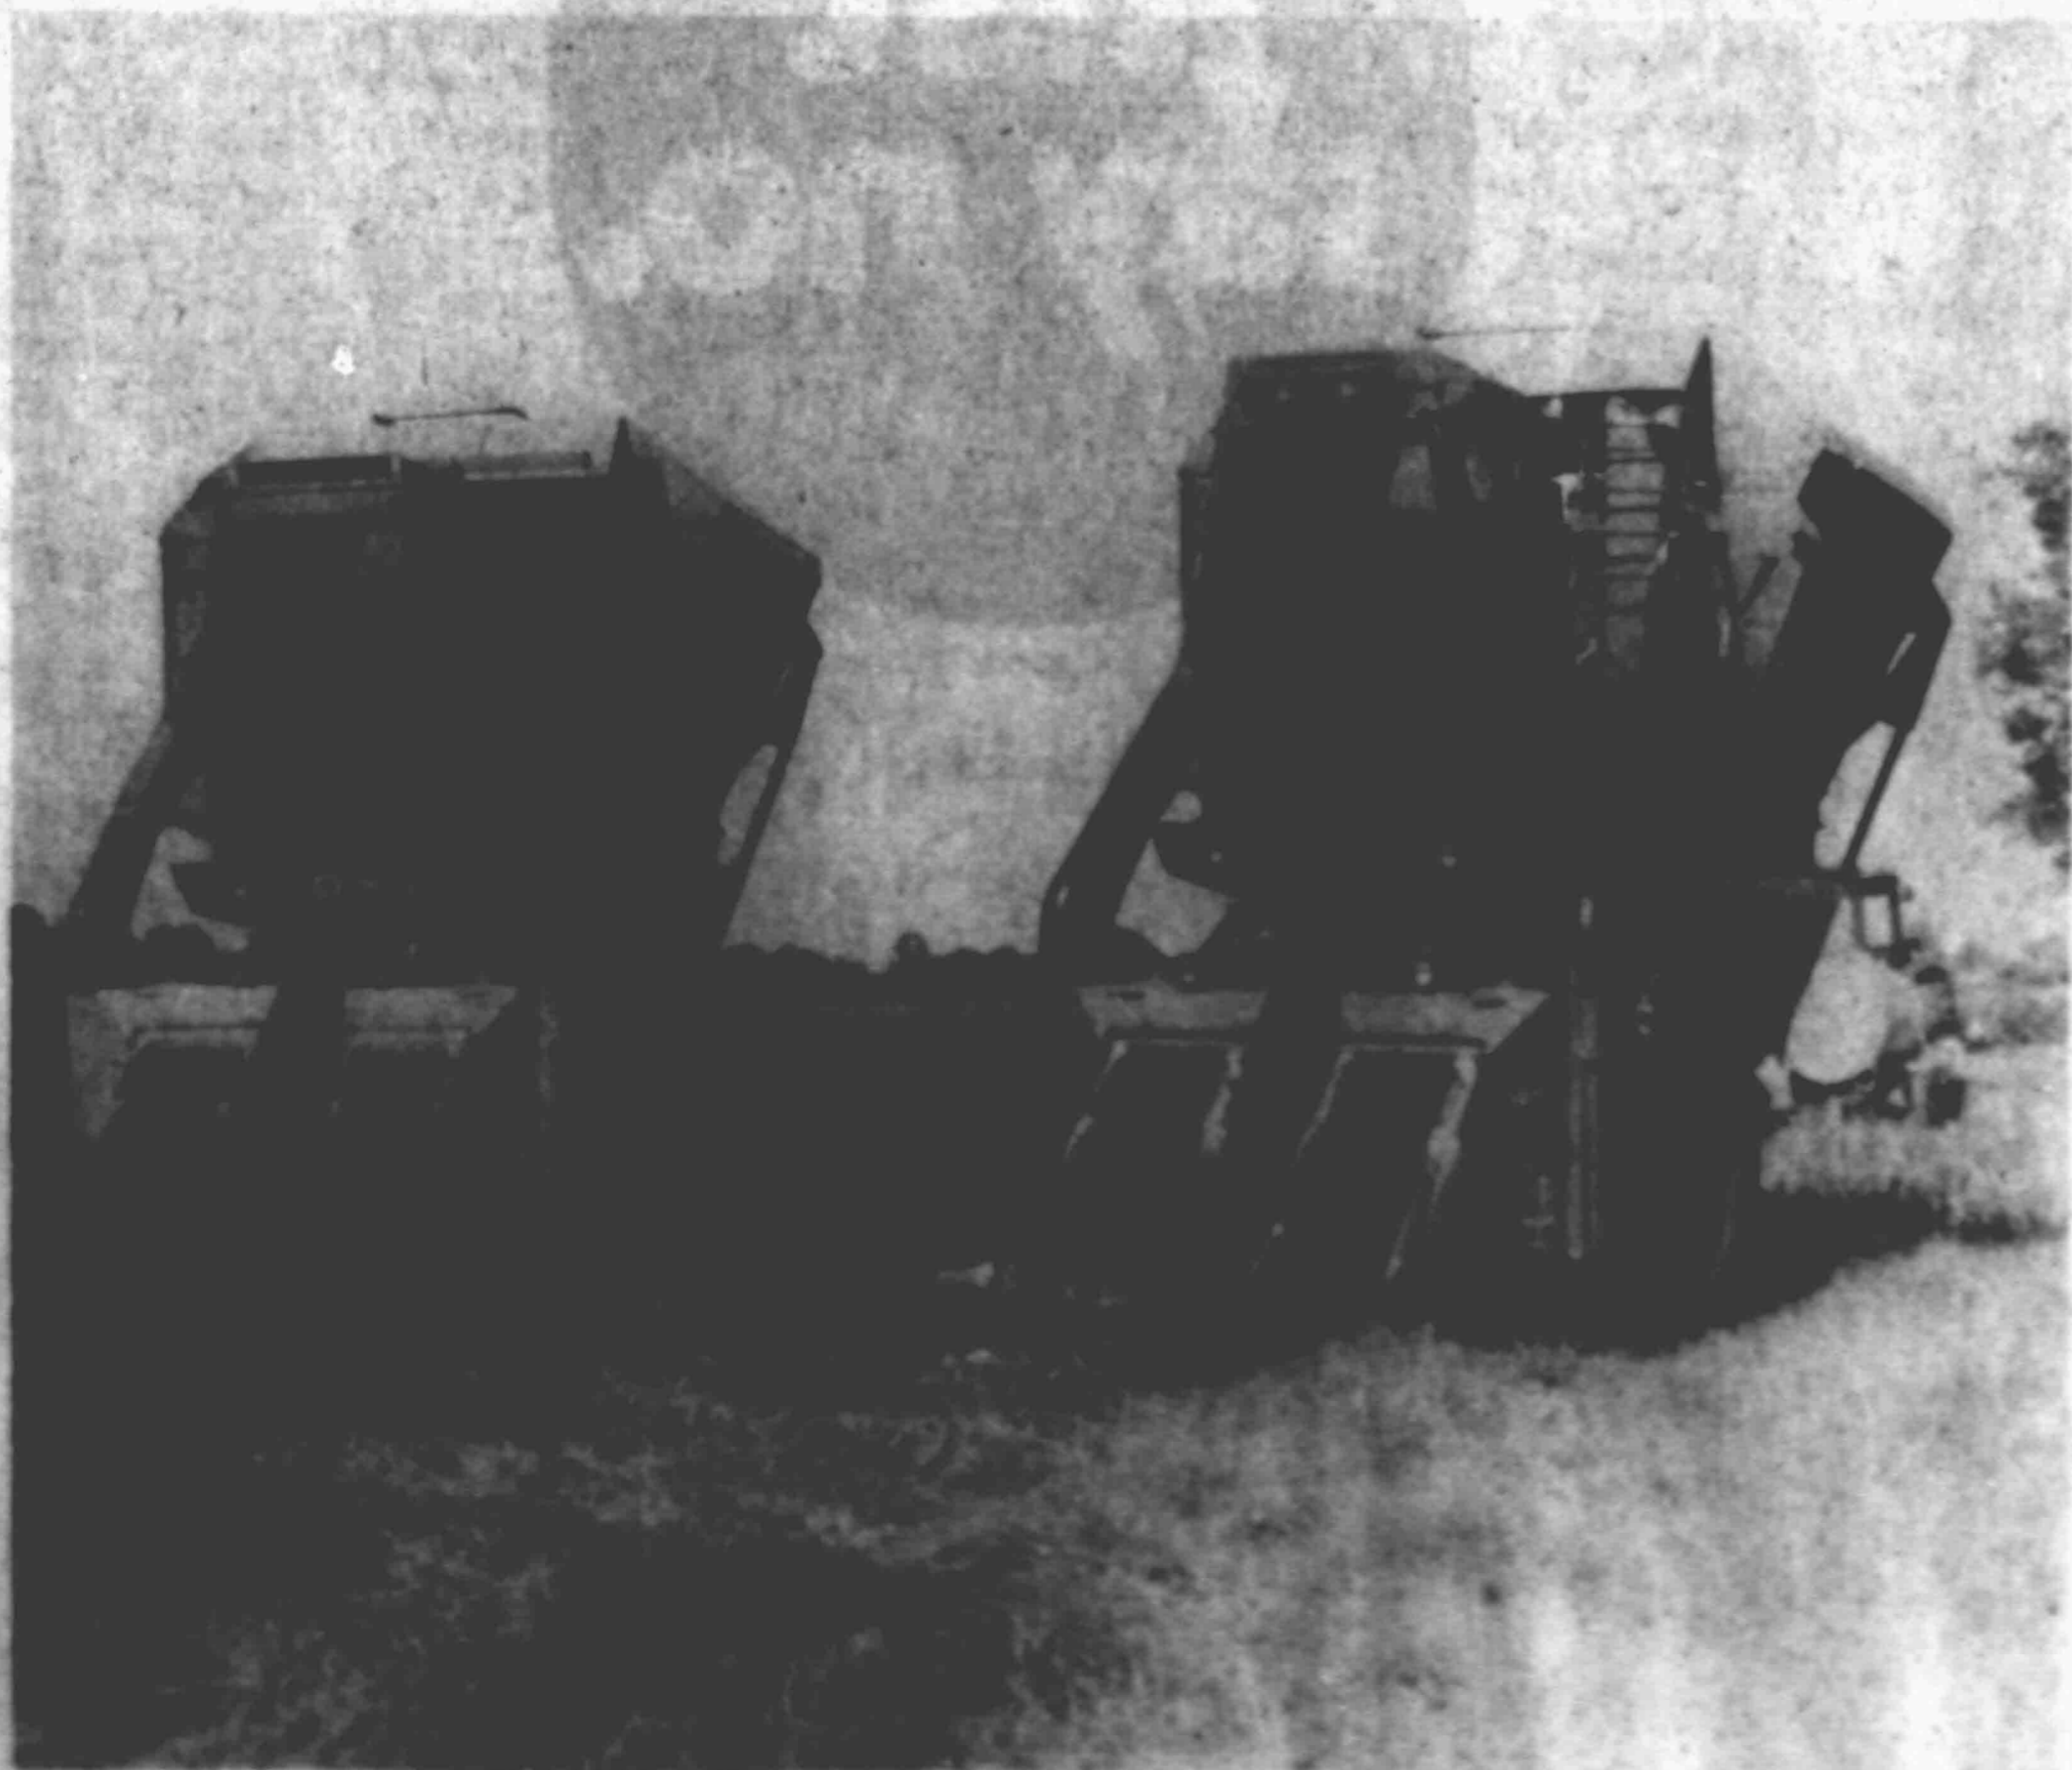

FmHA makes loans and grants to assist eligible, very low income, owner-occupants repair or modernize single family homes. Grants are only available for repairs that remove health or safety hazards. Families in the eligible income categories can receive up to $15,000 in loan and grant assistance. The maximum grant is $5,000. To receive a combination loan and grant, the applicant must be 62 years or older. The interest rate on loans is 1%.

Mrs. Mitchell purchased her house in 1950. It was almost sitting on the ground. With the grant funds, she had her house raised and leveled and placed on concrete blocks. The contractor replaced rotted sills, cornice, and window sills, installed Masonite siding, and put on a new roof. Information from the FmHA Office at 109 E. Jackson St. in Ripley, phone 635-4331.

Cotton Pickers Idle

COTTON PICKERS owned by Bubba Hartman, of Gates, sat ready and greased in muddy fields after more than three inches of rain last weekend. The late-planted crop is suffering because of boll weevil infestations in August and rains in September.

Benches Funded

BOBBY VAUGHAN, treasurer of the Halls-Gates Rotary Club, gives Mrs. Faye

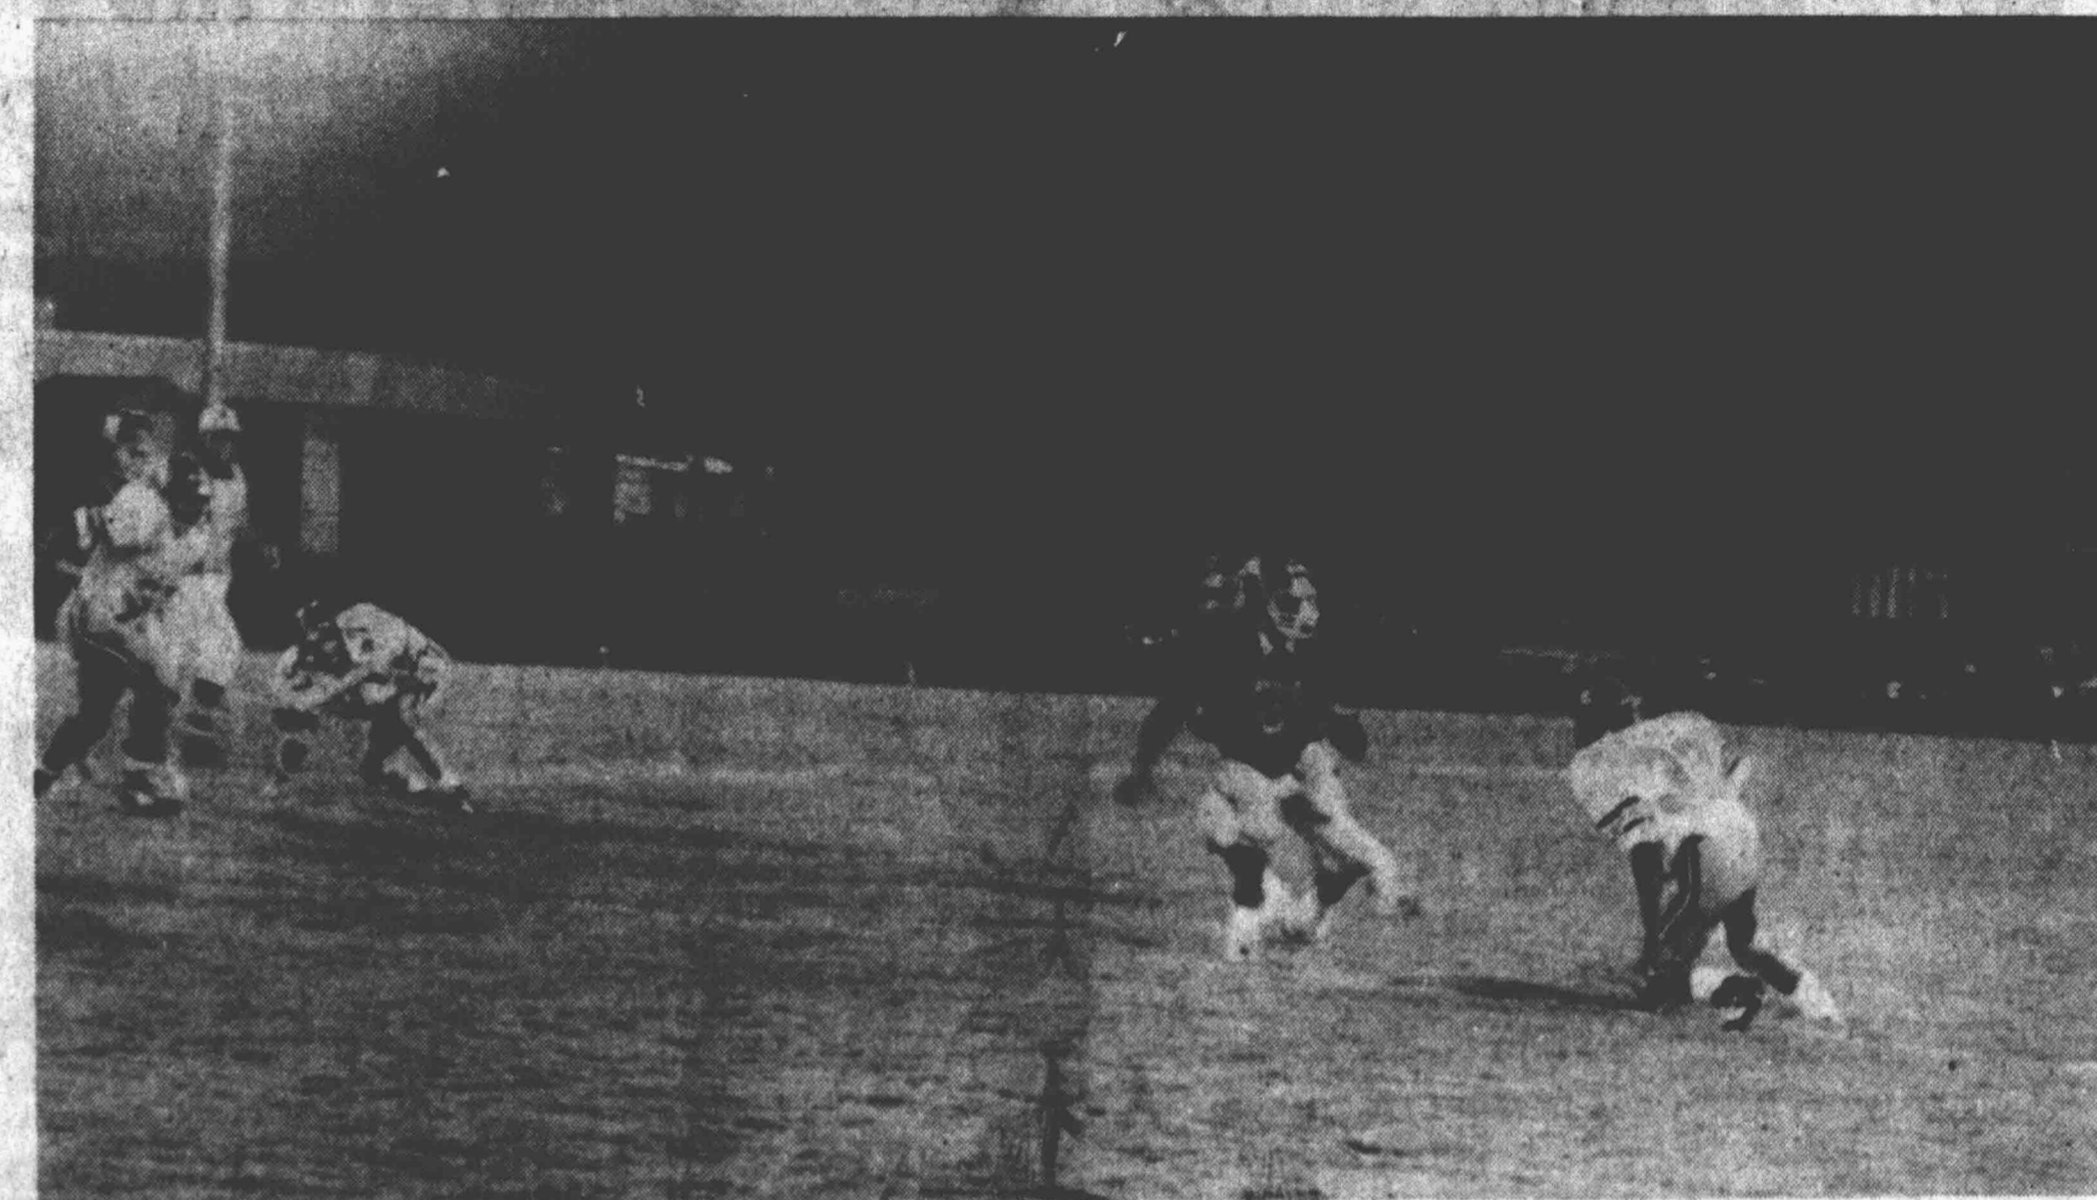

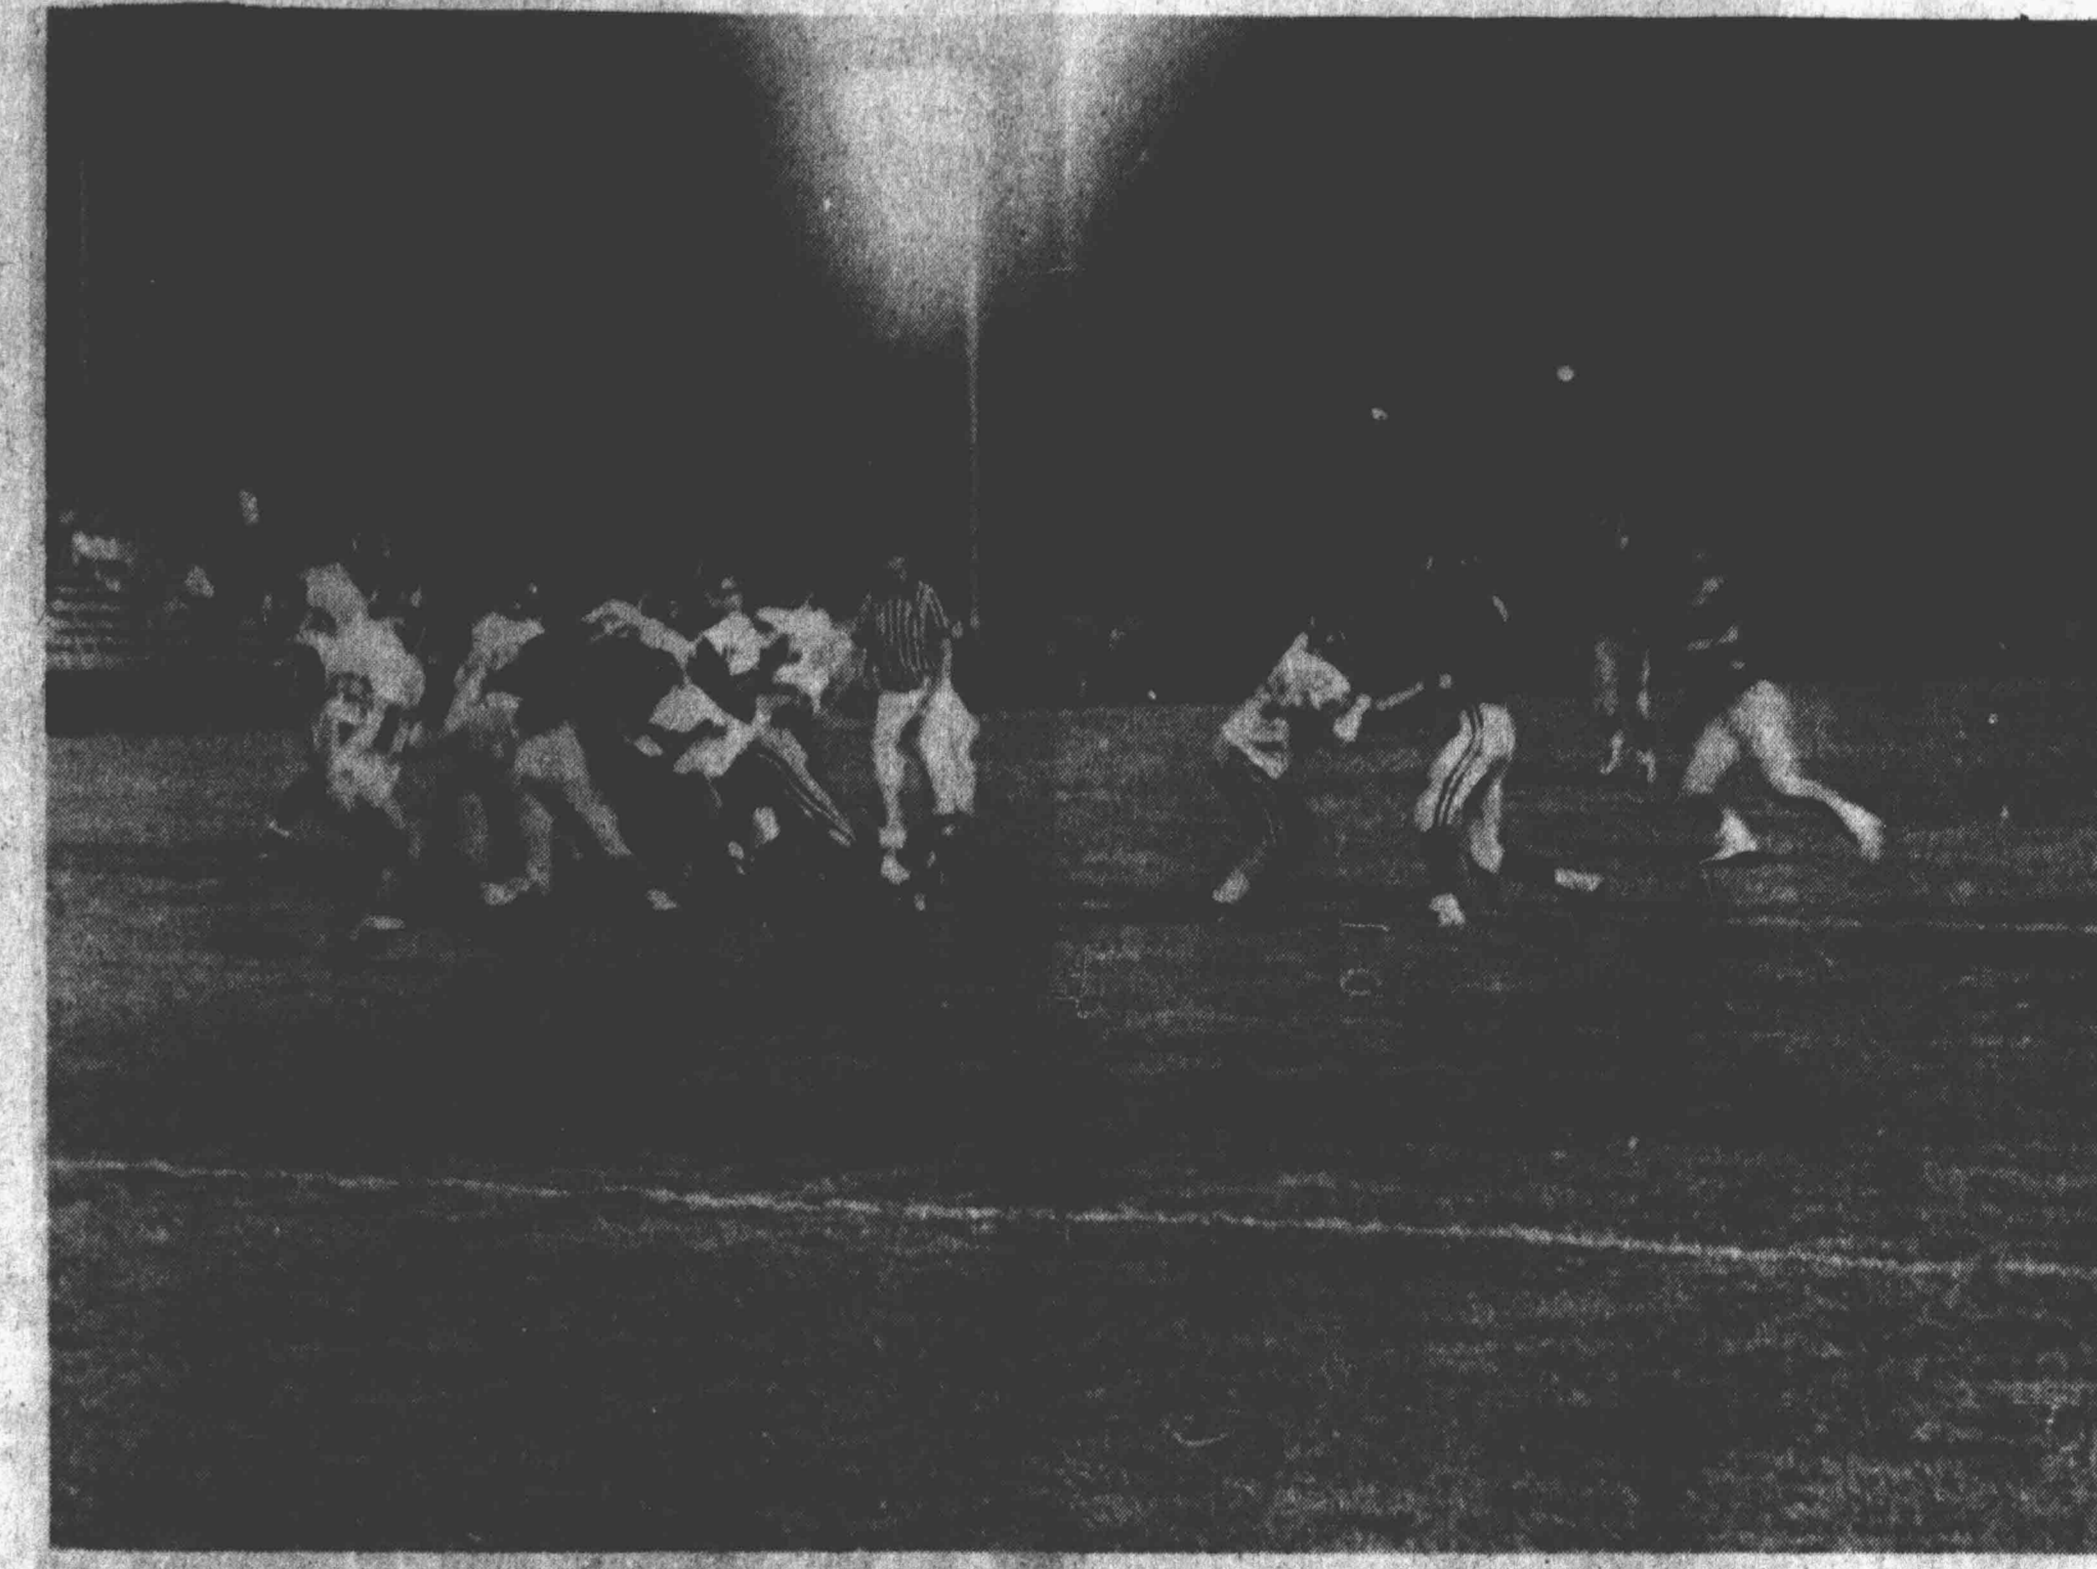

Currie, of Halls, a check to buy two benches for the Mini-Museum in Halls.

Book Fair In Halls

DIANNE (MRS. ANDY) SEAT is seen selling books, posters, stickers, and other items during Halls Junior High School's Book Fair this week. Proceeds buy books and supplies for Halls Junior High and Halls High Schools.

Greenville: A Tennessee Gem

GREENVILLE, Tenn. - In the late 18th century, America's western frontier was found in northeastern Tennessee, a mountainous territory whose beauty enticed settlers to stay and establish Tennessee's first towns.

Among them is Greenville, created in 1783 by North Carolina, 13 years before Tennessee became a state. Today, this restored town's rich heritage is preserved in its homes, churches, war monuments, museums and downtown.

Greenville's first claim to fame was as capital of the State of Franklin from 1785-1788. The formation of the state with John Sevier as its governor was an attempt "to form a separate and distinct state independent of North Carolina," according to Franklin's Bill of Rights. After continual feuding with North Carolina and the refusal by Congress to recognize the state, it ceased to exist in 1788. The capital building is gone, but a late 18th century log building stands as a reproduction of the original.

Many famous men who were instrumental in the formation of Tennessee and the nation are found in Greenville's history books. Among them are Revolutionary War General Nathanael Greene for whom the town is named, frontiersman and congressman Davy Crockett, military and political leader John Sevier and Confederate General John Hunt Morgan.

Greenville's most famous resident was Andrew Johnson, the country's 17th president, who settled here in 1826 to open a tailor shop. The log tailor shop, a Visitors Center, a two-story brick house where Johnson and his wife Eliza lived from 1838 to 1851, another home where they lived from 1851-1875 and their burial site are all part of the Andrew Johnson National Historic Site owned by the National Park Service.

Although Johnson is mostly remembered for his impeachment, Greenville offers a quite different view of the self-made man whose wife taught him to read and write. Rising through the ranks of Greenville politics, Johnson held every elective office - alderman, mayor, state representative, state senator, United States senator and governor.

Johnson was staunchly pro-Union in the Civil War, and his appointment as military governor in Nashville led President Abraham Lincoln to select him as a vice presidential running mate in 1864. Lincoln's assassination left Johnson as president, inheriting the problem of post-war Reconstruction.

Johnson's dismissal of Secretary of War Edwin Stanton resulted in an impeachment trial which fell one vote short of removing him from office.

Photographs from 1875 show Greenville draped in mourning upon Johnson's death. Thousands of mourners made their way up Signal Hill to his burial site where a tall marble shaft marks his grave. An American eagle sits atop the monument. On the sides are an American flag and a scroll depicting the Constitution. Inscribed are the words "His faith in the people never wavered."

Greenville offers a glimpse of many periods of history. A tribute to Davy Crockett is found at his birthplace on the banks of Limestone Creek at what is now Davy Crockett Birthplace State Park. A replica of the log cabin where Crockett was born in 1786 provides an understanding of the hardships early settlers faced.

Greenville was quite sophisticated for a frontier town, building brick mansions as early as the 1790s. Many late 18th century churches have been in use since their construction. Here too is Tusculum College, founded in 1794, the oldest college west of the mountains.

Like much of Tennessee, Greenville was divided in its loyalties to the North and South. From 1822-24, resident Benjamin Lundy published the "Genius of Universal Emancipation," a paper devoted to the abolition of slavery, and although Tennessee joined the Confederacy, many residents remained loyal to the Union. Monuments to both North and South were placed on the lawn at Courthouse Square after the war.

A reminder of the conflict is seen in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church where a cannonball remains lodged in the building's facade. Because there were only minor skirmishes here, much of Greenville's antebellum architecture remains. One of the most impressive is the Dickson-Williams Mansion, built in 1815 by Greenville's first postmaster for his daughter. Once a showplace, the mansion is undergoing a long-term restoration. Originally the house and its extensive formal gardens took an entire block near downtown. It was here that Confederate General John Hunt Morgan spent his last night and was killed in the garden.

The history of Greenville can be traced at the Nathanael Greene Museum in a number of excellent exhibits. Among them are the bed General Morgan slept in the night before he was killed. Other items include a wool and silk wedding coat made by Andrew Johnson in 1850, tickets to Johnson's impeachment trial, books detailing the trial and photographs of the town draped in mourning.

Exhibits also include a handsome collection of furniture - much of it made in Greenville in the early 1800s, a display of early agriculture implements and military uniforms worn in various wars.

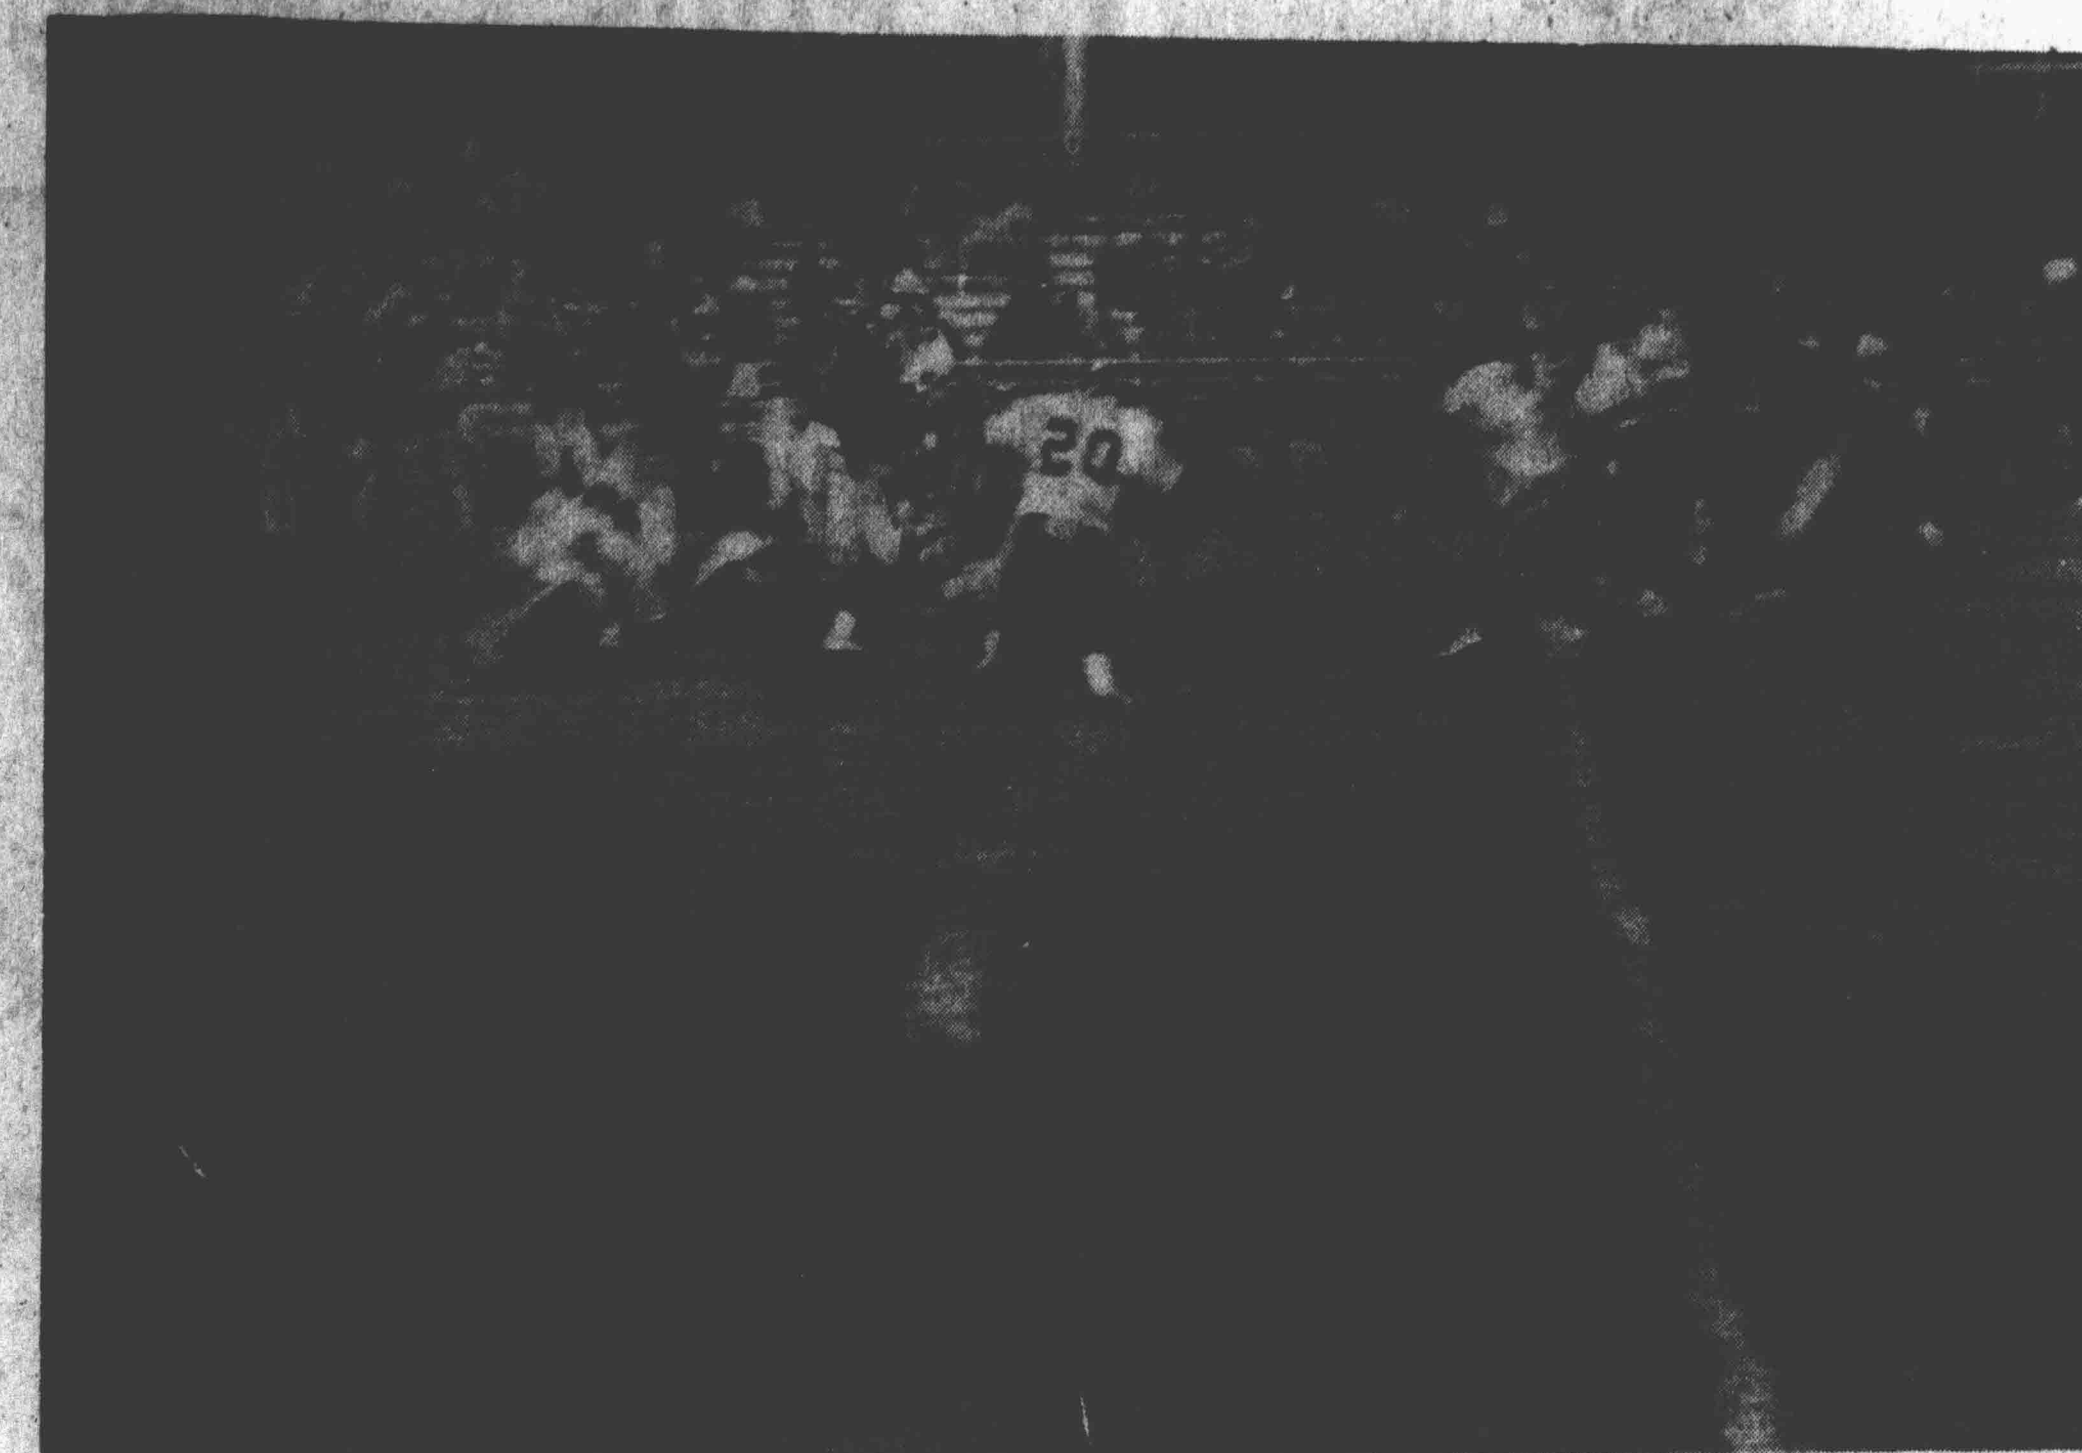

Many of Greenville's historic buildings have been adaptively reused. The Little Theatre of Greenville is located in what was the first public school building, built between 1910 and 1920. The theatre has an established reputation for excellent productions, having celebrated 25 years of continual operation in 1988. Major building renovations uncovered the original maple floor, added 350 seats from a 1923 theater and installed a box office. The all-volunteer theatre produces four productions each year including comedies, dramas, mysteries and musicals.

Also restored is the Big Spring Inn, a three-story house built in 1905, which is open as a bed and breakfast establishment. The house features a grand entrance hall, leaded and stained glass windows and two acres of gardens. Each of the five rooms is uniquely decorated in a blend of antiques and reproductions.

For more information on Greenville, contact Room T Tennessee Department of Tourist Development, Box 23170, Nashville, Tennessee 37202.

Church Vows Said

Mr. and Mrs. David Paul Green are residing at Cherry after Aug. 4th vows in Concord United Methodist Church.

The bride, Lorie Michelle Criner, was given by her father, James W. Criner, Jr., of Gates, as her great-uncle, The Rev. Roger Criner, of Ripley, officiated in an early evening ceremony.

Tapers glowed in a focal brass candelabrum, dressed with white gladioli and stephanotis, tied with a white satin bow, and bedded in ferns, and in flanking brass candle-trees amongst greenery.

A prayer bench was flanked by tables holding white globed candles lit by mothers of the couple, as they entered.

Similar candles, nestled in stephanotis and greenery, with white doves and pearl bows, adorned the stained glass windows.

Greenery and white satin bows marked family pews.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a high neckline of hand-headed Alençon lace, above a sheer top and, below the elbows of puffed sleeves, sheer sleeves pointed over finger-tips. Detailed lace, pearls, and bonnetiers of white and pink lily of the valley.

The groom's mother chose a tea-length dress of ice blue with pleated bodice and skirt, accented at the neck-line, waist, and on sheer long sleeves with soft ice blue satin. She wore white accessories.

Each mother was given a white rose corsage.

The bride's maternal grandmother, Elsie (Mrs. William) Jackson, of Gates, wore a street-length dress of deep rose, with pearl accessories.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Thelma (Mrs. James) Criner, of Gates, selected a street-length jacketed dress of taupe, with taupe accessories.

The groom's maternal grandmother, Dorothy (Mrs. Raymond) Minner, of Pleasant Hill, wore a white dress with short puffed sleeves, tucked at the waist with a soft pink ribbon belt, and white accessories.

Each grandmother wore a gardenia corsage.

Janet (Mrs. Bob) Savely, of Ripley, registered guests as they arrived.

Martha (Mrs. William) Miller, of Henning, played piano selections and accompanied Charlotte Langley, of Ripley, soloist.

For the reception in the church's recreation hall, pink votive candles glowed amidst baskets and flower boxes of pink Jackson-Madison County Hospitality flowers and greenery.

The bride's 3-tier pink and white cake was served with pink lemonade punch, nuts, and mints, from crystal appointments.

The groom's chocolate cake depicted ski scenes.

Another table offered finger sandwiches, ham rolls, cheese balls, and chicken salad molds.

Childhood photos of the couple were displayed.

Hostesses were Vicky (Mrs. Jimmy) Emerson, Donna (Mrs. Mike) Moore, and Carol (Mrs. Danny) Young, of Gates.

Tea girls were the bride's cousins, Rachel Anthony, Pam Jackson, and Tammy Sweat, of Ripley, the groom's cousin, Terra Sinquefeld, of Cherry, Sherry Ellis and Stephanie Lynch, of Halls, and Kathy Emerson, of Gates.

NOT MRS. SEAT

A lady identified last week as Dianne (Mrs. Andy) Seat, aiding Halls Junior High School's Book Fair, was Billie Kitts. We regret our error.

Miss Leslie Jackson and Miss Kimberly Sweat, of Ripley, distributed pink and white rice bags before the couple left for a wedding trip to Memphis.

RIPLEY HIGH SCHOOL BAND SUPPER, sponsored annually by E. W. James and Supermarket in Ripley, was well attended Tuesday evening.

In lower photo, Lorie, center, is seen being honored at a shower July 15th in the home of Donna (Mrs. Clifford) Simpson, left, at Pleasant Hill. At right is the groom's mother. Other guests included the bride's grandmothers and the groom's grandmother. Guests enjoyed cake, a cheese and summer sausage tray, ham and cheese rolls, mints, and nuts, with cranberry punch.

On the bride's birthday, July 30, Lorie was given a shower by ladies of Concord United Methodist Church. Cake was served with punch.

A kitchen shower was given Lorie Aug. 20th in the home of her cousin, Judy (Mrs. Don) Conrad, in Ripley. Co-hosting were the bride's aunt, Naomi (Mrs. Nesbert) Jackson, Pam (Mrs. Lynnwood) Jackson, Amy (Mrs. Mike) McBroom, and Miss Tammy Sweat, of Ripley. Guests were served cake with nuts, and mints, with punch or coffee.
