

U.S. Grant Aids Focus On County's Wetlands

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has granted the Tenn. Department of Environment and Conservation $171,357 for a 2-year inventory of wetlands in the state which are candidates for preservation and restoration.

Most of these are in West Tennessee, and most of those are in this county.

Though there is no direct connection, the inventory has been funded while a major project for county wetlands is pending.

The Tenn. Wildlife Resources Agency has applied to the North American Wetlands Conservation Council for a U.S. grant of $1,500,000 toward a $3,940,000 program to preserve and improve wild-life habitat in five areas in five states.

The major project in that program is 161,000 acres in this county and a bit of Dyer County.

Many, from the Fort Pillow prison complex to the Forked Deer River, are already state or federally owned or managed.

The TWRA plan would buy 1,836 acres from willing sellers at an average $1,290 per acre.

Other land-owners would be encouraged to farm their lands to aid wild-life, through existing farm programs.

Reggie Reeves, director of the Division of Natural Heritage of the state Department of Environment and Conservation, says his agency estimates that Tennessee, achieving state-hood in 1796, had then about 2,000,000 acres of wetlands. The current estimate is under 700,000.

Besides wild-life habitat for fishers and hunters, and educational and recreational uses, wetlands limit flood damage and protect water supplies.

Halls Seeks Step Up As Westview Visits

Halls High School's Tigers, whose loss to Trenton Peabody last week, 42-20, dropped them from a 4-way tie for second place in Region 7-2A, 1-1, to a 4-way tie for third, 1-2, this Friday host Martin Westview, now holding second place in the region, 2-1.

Still pacing the race for four play-off spots from the 8-team region are Huntingdon and Union City, 3-0 in region play. Huntingdon, 4-2 in all games, won Friday from Camden, 42-8. Union City, 5-1 in all games, won Friday from Middleton, 26-6.

Friday's clash in Halls is a key game in each team's quest for a berth in the play-offs.

Chargers Re-Shuffled

Westview's Chargers were 5-6 last fall, losing to Briarcrest in the first round of the state play-offs.

Coach Don Coady (31-18) had 10 regulars on offense and seven starters on defense back this fall, but many are playing new positions.

Halls High School Reports Burglars

Halls High School reported Monday morning that burglars had taken a computer station, a VCR, General Electric and Sanyo TVs, two remote controls, and a Sony radio/cassette recorder.

Special Prosecutor Probes Jail Labor

Dist. Atty. Gen. Elizabeth T. Rice, of Somerville, who serves Lauderdale County, has obtained Dist. Atty. Gen. Robert "Gus" Radford, of Huntingdon, as a "special prosecutor" to probe charges that jail prisoners were forced to work for county trustee Paul Meadows for little pay.

Mrs. Rice said she could not pursue the charges while prosecuting some of the prisoners on other charges.

Hargett Sentenced For Taking Bribe

Gus L. Hargett, Sr., of 1211 Jeff Webb Road, Ripley, who resigned as a County Commissioner after he pleaded guilty in U.S. court in Memphis to taking a bribe to support Wiley Hutcherson's land-fill project near Halls, was sentenced Friday to six months in a "half-way house" in Memphis, three years of "supervised release," and a fine of $5,000.

Hutcherson reported the bribe scheme and aided authorities in securing recordings of it.

TANNER AGENT VISITS

A representative of U.S. Rep. John Tanner will be available for questions Oct. 10th at City Hall in Halls, 9 a.m., Gates, 9:45 a.m., or Henning, 1:30 p.m., or in the County Courthouse, 10:30 a.m.

Promoted

JUD MILLER was promoted to Sergeant Sept. 21th by Commissioner Billie Ann Hendren. Officer Miller has 17 years with the Ripley Police Department. He has demonstrated leadership in his appointment to acting sergeant for the last six months and was promoted to permanent rank of Sergeant after a battery of tests from an outside agency including an oral interview by Commissioner Hendren, Chief of Police Dennis King and other commanding officers.

RHS, Runner-Up In 7-4A, Hosts Haywood Tomcats

In second place in Region 7-4A, behind a tie for first, Ripley High School's Tigers will play host Friday to 6-4A's Haywood High.

Collierville and Somerville's Fayette-Ware remain tied for first place in 7-4A, 3-0, and have two of the region's four play-off spots nailed down. Collierville led Covington last week, 35-7, with 132 yards passing, to 15, as the big statistical edge. F-W led Bolton 44-22 at the half, to win, 58-43. Covington and Bolton sank to 0-3.

Ripley's win from Dyersburg last week, 28-15, earned a 2-1 rank in the region, with the Trojans falling to 1-2.

Next week's play will make or break some play-off hopes, when Ripley visits Collierville, Dyersburg hosts F-W, and Bolton hosts Covington.

Final region games, Oct. 27th, pit Collierville at F-W, Covington in Ripley, and Dyersburg at Bolton.

Tomcats Are Unbeaten

Haywood's Tomcats, the only undefeated 4A team in the state, are tied with Bolivar, 3-0, for first place in Region 6-4A.

They came into the season off a 9-1 regular season last fall and a 4-1 performance in the playoffs, losing to Cleveland, 7-6, in the Clinic Bowl.

Third-year coach Phil Massey (24-7) has twice been elected, by fellow coaches, as the region Coach of the Year.

Back this season were only two regular players on offense and three on defense, but the lack of experience hasn't shown.

Haywood has won from Humboldt, 31-0, Jackson North Side, 32-6, Jackson Central-Merry, 29-6, Bolivar, 42-0, Fayette-Ware, 37-14, and Lexington, 38-3.

The Tomcats use a Pro I offense and a "40" defense.

County Proposed For Miss. River Corridor

The Mississippi River Corridor Commission, on which Don Ammons, of Ripley, represents Tennessee, has recommended to the U.S. Congress that Lauderdale County and all other counties (in Louisiana, parishes) adjoining the river be designated a National Heritage Corridor.

Congress is asked to provide $900,000 of an annual budget, plus $10,000 from each of 10 states.

The agency would co-ordinate management of the route's "unique and nationally significant resources."

Involved in that now are at least 10 federal agencies; 17 regional agencies; the departments of agriculture/conservation/wild-life, economic development, transportation, industrial relations, natural resources, and/or historic preservation in 10 states; port authorities; and non-government organizations such as the American Waterways Association, the Miss. River Basin Alliance, the Quad Cities Conservation Alliance, Farm Bureaus, and many others.

The proposed Corridor would not acquire any land or impose any restrictive regulations.

Ripley FmHA Office Closes

The Farmers Home Administration Office at 109 East Jackson, Ripley, is closing.

Harriet S. Cannon, county supervisor, is being transferred to the Rural Economic and Community Development Office at 127 Mueller Brass Road in Covington (476-2464). That office will handle housing applications from this county.

Farm loans will be handled by the Farm Services Agency at 360 S. Bell, Alamo (696-5538).

The Alamo and Covington offices are working on plans to have representatives in this county at least once a week.

Five More Awaiting Circuit Court Trial

Five persons indicted (held for Circuit Court trial) by the county grand jury last week were not reported, pending their being taken into custody:

Charles L. Chipman, charged with forgery.

John H. Gillon, of Gates, charged with reckless homicide, aggravated assault, and assault in an automobile collision April 6th. Gillon, 24, was reported driving a pick-up truck west on Industrial Rd. north of Halls and failing to yield at the intersection with U.S. Highway 51. Fatally injured was Terry Glynn Phillips, 35, of Maury City, a carpenter. Injured in an El Camino southbound were James O. Haynie, 30, of Route 2, Halls, and his passenger, Limmie O'Neal Haynie, 49, of Route 3, Ripley.

Sylvia Powell Koonce, charged with "unlawfully and knowingly exercising control over property, to-wit, approximately $72,000 cash and/or checks...with the intention to deprive the Town of Henning thereof." She was town Recorder at the time of the alleged mis-use of funds.

Cleotha Nash, held for aggravated assault.

Sonny M. Porter, held for attempted aggravated rape; aggravated burglary; especially aggravated kidnapping; and aggravated assault.

Porter is accused of burglary of the home of a Henning woman July 6th, kidnapping her and attempting rape at knife-point; and threatening Henning police officer Steve Jackson with a knife. Court records last week, by typographical error, listed Michael Lee Filzer. His correct name is Michael Lee Kilzer.

Wesley Jennings Going To Prison

Wesley Jennings, of Henning, who resigned as County Commissioner after he was charged with accepting a bribe to support a land-fill project proposed by the Wiley Hutchersons, of Halls, was sentenced last week, in U.S. District Court in Memphis, to 27 months in prison and three years of supervised probation. He was also fined $50.

strated knowledge about and active involvement in local community activities, as well as understanding regional, national and international issues.

Superintendent Webb will be honored at the American Association of School Administrators National Conference in San Diego, Calif., in March. He will represent Tennessee for National Superintendent of the Year.

Superintendent Webb is the son of Harvey Webb, of Ripley. He is married to Peggy Webb, a sixth grade teacher at Lauderdale Middle School. They have three sons, Alan, Corum and Richard. He attended Lauderdale County School and graduated from Ripley High School in 1965.

He earned a bachelor's degree in music education from the University of Tennessee at Martin in 1970. He earned a master's degree in educational administration and supervision from the University of Tennessee at Martin in 1979. He is currently enrolled in the Doctoral program at the University of Memphis.

Before becoming school superintendent in 1988, he was band director at Halls High School.

Land-Fill Zoning Move Fails, 22-2

The County Commission's regular meeting Monday rejected, 22-2, re-zoning 184 acres near Halls to permit the Wiley Hutchersons, of Halls, to build a land-fill.

Commissioners Lawson Elder and John Snead supported re-zoning. Commissioner Neal Crain was not present.

The vote came after a public hearing in which six supporters and six foes of the project were allowed five minutes each.

Mr. Hutcherson stated that in addition to being "essential to the continuance" of Hutcherson Metals, in Halls, "a Class I land-fill would also be beneficial to Lauderdale County."

He noted that his wife, Frances, and he started the business in Halls in 1964.

"Still 100% family-owned, Hutcherson Metals is now operated by Frances and myself, my son, Randy, his wife, Melinda, my daughter, Pam, and her husband, Ricky.

"We began in 1964 with one employee and now have in excess of 100..."

"This proposed land-fill ... is essential not only for the existence of Hutcherson Metals but also for the well-being of our employees and their families.

"Approximately five years ago, I began to realize that a Class I land-fill and re-cycling center would be crucial to Hutcherson Metals as well as other local industries..."

"Costs of having to dispose of waste generated by Hutcherson Metals operations at a facility not owned by Hutcherson Metals would be a determining factor in the business's existence.

"Secondly, knowing that new federal and state laws would mandate what went into a land-fill, I knew a re-cycling center on location would be vital to the existence of the land-fill itself.

"Thus I began to consider the idea of Hutcherson Metals constructing its own Class I land-fill and re-cycling center on farm property."

Another highlight was performing at New York's Carnegie Hall in 1982, giving a one hour and twenty minute program. He describes this as "very nerve-racking".

Mrs. Cecil Massey has played with Bill on many special occasions at the church and the two combined their expertise to select the organ that is in the sanctuary.

"This church is a wonderful church," exclaimed Bill. "God has blessed it and continues to do so."

"We are so fortunate to have Bill as our organist," said The Rev. Gallimore. "It's a joy and a privilege to work with him. I hope everyone will come and join with us as we show him our love and thanks."

In lower photo, the children's department, of First United Methodist Church, enjoys Bill Kelly's talents each Sunday morning, teaching them lively songs.

Organist Remembered

"BILL KELLY can make the most ordinary hymn sound extraordinary," said The Rev. Russell Gallimore, pastor of First United Methodist Church (FUMC) in Ripley. "In my forty years of ministry I have never worked with anyone equal to his talents."
 Sunday, Oct. 15th has been declared "Bill Kelly Day" at FUMC and the congregation will honor him beginning with the entire 10:55 a.m. service planned around him. A pot-luck lunch will follow. At 2 p.m. a musical tribute to Bill, featuring friends of the talented musician, will be held in the church sanctuary. The public is invited.

 William Kelly, Jr. began his musical career at the age of eight studying with Zell (Mrs. Hayden) Williams, of Gates.
 "I knew right off that Bill was a special little boy," remembers Mrs. Williams. "He always came prepared. His mother, the late Gladys Hill Kelly, said that punishment to him was not letting him practice." It was a rule in the Kelly household that everyone studied piano for two years. This was closely monitored by their mother and enjoyed by their father who faithfully attended all of the recitals and programs.

 Bill's next teacher was Jane Hendrix, of Maury City. He wound up his high school days studying under the late Mrs. Pat Hurt. Shortly before her death her former students honored her with a program, largely due to Bill's efforts.
 Thanks to his talents, Bill was awarded a full scholarship to Lambuth College in Jackson where he studied under Dr. Don Honeycutt, a big influence on his career, as were all of his teachers. During his junior year, Bill began playing the organ because he had to have a second instrument.
 Bill is a popular musician in the West Tennessee area and beyond, playing for programs and weddings. He is in much demand and has appeared on Good Morning From Memphis several times and played for a Christmas concert on radio station WEZI.
 The congregation of FUMC has enjoyed watching Bill's son, Warren, now a freshman at Vanderbilt, grow up. Each Sunday found him seated beside his father as he played the organ for services.

 In addition to being the director at FUMC since Dec. 28, 1968, this busy person teaches public school music at Halls Elementary and has 22 private students. He also gives recitals in area churches and lately has begun giving a short witness, in addition to playing, telling the audience about his faith.

Harley Patterson, the song director at FUMC, is proud of his association with Bill. "I had heard about Bill Kelly before I came to Ripley as band director," he stated. "When I was offered the job as choir director, the very first thing I thought about was having the opportunity to work with Bill and I was thrilled. He is definitely a musicians' musician."

One of the highlights of Bill's musical career, was being chosen to study under Ruth Slenczynska, of St. Louis, Mo. She is a world renowned teacher, being the world's most famous child land which I owned.

"I have been told of the rumors that some are spreading, namely, the rumor that I am a crooked man that would do anything for money. Such statements are simply not true. I am a man that believes in doing what is right. I believe that all individuals should abide by the same set of laws and regulations set forth at the county, state, and federal levels. It is my understanding that these laws do allow free enterprise for all. My family and I have been honest and diligent in our efforts to receive the I2 zoning for the proposed land-fill and re-cycling center.

"I ask you to reflect on the discussions of those previously speaking on behalf of the proposed land-fill and re-cycling center. These are experts who know the state and federal guidelines involving a Class I land-fill. They have told you that the proposed site meets all criteria set forth by the law. I assure you that Western TN Enterprises has every intention of being a model facility, not only for the environment of Lauderdale County, but also for the economy of Lauderdale County..."

"As county commissioners, you are responsible for the well-fair of Lauderdale County. This proposed land-fill and re-cycling center will create more county revenue; it will be job security for some 100 employees; it will attract new industry to Lauderdale County; and it will create new jobs for Lauderdale County residents."

Speaking previously to support the land-fill were William Griggs, of Griggs and Maley, of Murfreesboro, engineers, who said the project posed no fire, water-shed nor wild-life problems; Sharon Younger, of Younger and Associates in Jackson, who said the project would benefit the county's economy; David Wright, with Safety Training Ecology Design, Inc., of Covington, who said land-fills had never been safer; and attorneys Will Bell, of Jackson, and Robert M. Johnson, of the firm of Wolff, Ardis, in Memphis. The attorneys raised issues of constitutional and civil rights, preparing the way for the Hutchersons' next possible step, an appeal to Chancery Court.

Opposing the project were Warlene Smith Allen, Gene Davis, Ray Nolen, and Shirley Roberts, of the area to be affected; Richard O'Brian, of the State Planning Office in Jackson; and Highway Commissioner Douglas Collins, who said the project would require the county to spend $313,200 to construct an adequate road to the land-fill.

Country Ham: Not Just For Holidays

By Susan Mack

Country ham conjures up visions of sideboards loaded for the Christmas buffet with turkey and trimmings on one end and a country ham, mahogany and regal, on the other. Or, steaming hot hunt breakfasts looking at winter mornings through frosty windows. Or piles of fat baby biscuits stuffed with ham slivers at wedding brunches or christening parties. Celebration food marking our life's momentous events.

Country ham deserves its position as the quintessential occasion food. It takes a year for a fresh ham to cure into a proper country ham. Some hams are much older and still quite edible. (The ancient ham was cured in 1902 by the Gwalney Ham Company. Eighty years later, the uncured and unrefrigerated ham won notice in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" as the oldest piece of edible meat on earth.) The aging process carries the mystique of fine wine-making with secret curing formulas known only to cellar masters, called cure masters.

The tradition of country ham preserving began at the Jamestown settlement 350 years ago. The settlers observed the Indians rubbing venison with a dry salt cure, then smoking it—a technique they applied to curing their hogs. Cured hams were sought-after imports by European nobles a few years later. The same slow process of hand rubbing a dry salt cure, aging, then smoking or drying continues today in family smokehouses or in the well-known commercial cure-houses in Smithfield, Virginia, Cadiz, Kentucky or middle Tennessee. Yes, "old ham," as country hams are also called, deserves its exalted reputation.

The reason country ham is served on special occasions is its luxury, its elegance, and its rich mouth-filling salty, sweet smoky taste. The texture of a fine old ham is like silk with an iridescent sheen.

Preparing a country ham for the table is also a complex operation. First, the ham must have the mold scrubbed off. (The mold is very misunderstood. Many people are convinced it makes the hams unfit to eat. According to Dr. Norm Marriott, a food technologist from Virginia Tech, "It is like the mold on the cheese rind. There are certain cheeses where mold is actually permitted to grow for the development of a unique flavor. And that's somewhat true for country ham.") Then the ham has to soak in water, sometimes flavored with Coke or bourbon, to draw out some of the salt. A slow, gentle 6-7 hour simmer in a ham kettle follows. Then it cools in its liquid and is chilled before being sliced—not exactly a procedure the busy home cook can fit in between car pool and dinner.

How can we avoid losing this magnificent Southern food, our culinary heritage? Although young chefs today are doing their part to preserve and showcase the best foods of the region, country ham seldom appears on the dinner table in our homes. One problem is that few cooks want to buy—or prepare—a whole ham. Accordingly, country ham curers of the South have changed their marketing and packaging methods. After the hams have been cured and aged, they shrink-wrap half-pound packages, such as center ham slices, for delivery to grocery stores and through catalogs. Consequently, you do not have to wait for 20 dinner guests or throw a cocktail party to enjoy country ham.

But ham is too fatty to eat except on special occasions? No. Ham is salty, not necessarily fatty. After the curing process a lot of the fat is trimmed away. Also, pork itself has gone on a diet. Pork is 40% leaner than it was 25 years ago. Two ounces of country ham, an average serving, because the flavor is so intense, has 4-6 grams of fat per serving. Actually, many cookbook authors and nutritionists consider country ham a boost to the healthy kitchen.

Country ham has a unique aroma and flavor. The taste fills your mouth and senses with bygone flavors and taste memories. Many recipes use this property of ham, its intensity, to keep the amount necessary to do the flavoring job to a few ounces.

A good use of ham is as a substitute for bacon—a current culinary outcast. I finely chop two ounces of trimmed country ham, saute it in 1 tablespoon of olive oil and use wherever bacon drippings are specified. This mixture seasons cabbage or other vegetables with old south flavor, or becomes a base for vegetable or bean soups. The fat and calories are greatly diminished with no compromise in the taste.

Ham is a wonderful garnish for salad or wherever you would use bacon. Crabmeat and ham complement each other. A summer supper of a crab salad dressed with a sherry salad dressing and garnished with bits of ham is dinner for the gods.

Country ham enlivens jambalaya and hoppin john, whether you serve the black-eyed peas hot as an entree or cold as a salad. Early fall succotash becomes a satisfying main course with slivers of ham added to the simmering pot of beans, peas and late harvest corn.

Country ham is a rich melodious flavoring agent for soups, whether steeped in a broth or with a handful of finely chopped ham thrown into the pot of simmering food. Chinese soups taste so rich and deep because a pork knuckle or a ham bone and a splash of vinegar is regularly added to the chicken broth. Southern cooks create the same richness with the addition of country ham trimmings. Ham naturally pairs with mushrooms, with cheese, with eggs, with onions, with potatoes. More flavor bang for the buck is found in country ham than in the "water added" red ham.

I use country ham frequently in Italian cooking. Prosciutto hams are cured in a manner very similar to our fine country hams and you can use them interchangeably. A scrumptious dinner in minutes consists of a bowl of pasta, 4 ounces of finely chopped country ham, a package of microwaved chopped broccoli and a tablespoon of pesto stirred together. Or even simpler a bowl of pasta, a handful of ham, parmesan cheese and a drizzle of lemon olive oil.

Tennessee Farm Bureau
E-85 TO BE NEW TERM AT GAS PUMPS

By Guest Columnist Stewart Truelson,
American Farm Bureau

"Regular or ethyl?" You probably haven't heard that question asked in a while. Before unleaded gas and self-service pumps, gas station attendants would ask motorists if they wanted high octane ethyl gasoline or regular leaded. In the very near future, motorists may be deciding if they want E-85 in their tanks. E-85 is a fuel that is 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline.

There has been a succession of good news this year for the ethanol industry, farm groups and others who support E-85. Just recently there was a ground breaking in St. Louis for the first fueling station in a metropolitan area to sell E-85 at the pump. Right now, E-85 is being used in fleets belonging to federal, state and local governments. However, the general public will soon get into the act. In February, Ford Motor Company announced that beginning next year it will offer a model of its Taurus automobile capable of running on 85 percent ethanol. General Motors followed in May with the announcement that it will equip light duty trucks in 1997 to run on the fuel. Vehicles that can run on E-85 are also sporting a new name. They are referred to as flexible fuel vehicles, because they can run on unleaded gasoline or any mixture up to 85 percent ethanol. An on-board computer makes the proper adjustment for engine performance. Ethanol has seemingly had more lives than a cat. Every time the industry suffers a set-

Local Education Fiscal Capacity

Many factors influence local governments' ability to raise revenue for education. The fiscal capacity figures used to determine the required local share in the Basic Education Program (BEP) formula are provided by the Tennessee Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (TACIR). They are calculated for each of the 95 county areas and are based on the factors that best predict the amount of revenue local governments in Tennessee can be expected to raise for education. Those factors and other related data for the county in which this system is located are presented in the following table.

back at the hands of lawmakers, regulators, the courts, or the oil industry, it regroups and moves forward again. The reason is simple. It makes common sense to promote a renewable fuel like ethanol made from corn.

Ethanol-blended fuel now represents 10 percent of U.S. fuel sales. It consumes more than 500 million bushels of grain a year. According to industry figures, every 100 million bushels of corn used in ethanol production adds three to five cents to a bushel of corn. Demand was expected to nearly double by the year 2010, but that was before the increase in E-85 vehicles. Now, it looks like corn ethanol will reach that figure considerably sooner. All this is good news for farmers, especially with some members of Congress demanding a phase-out of farm programs. Ethanol is a reliable, domestic market for corn. It not only will enhance the price

Goals and Standards

Setting goals for education and measuring the annual progress toward these goals help to determine how well students, schools, and local school systems are doing. These goals were recommended by the Tennessee Department of Education and approved by the State Board of Education on July 31, 1992. Goals for the five performance indicators must be met by local school systems by the year 2000.

The chart below reports the method used to measure each performance indicator, the state goal for the year 2000, local system progress made for school years 1993-94 and 1994-95, and local system progress standards for the school year 1995-96.

21st Century Schools Program Funding¹

The funding formula for K-12 education adopted by the state legislature in 1992 as part of the 21st Century Schools Program is entering its fourth year. This new formula replaced a broad array of categorical funding programs, as well as the foundation program formula, and is being phased in over a six-year period. Increases over that period are added to the funds that were received under the old programs, which now comprise the base funding. Base funding includes restoration of the 1991-92 reduction in state funds. Funding amounts are shown in thousands of dollars.

Williams in Old Ripley Cemetery on Lake Drive Oct. 10th.

Joseph Seawell Williams, author of Old Times In West Tennessee, is buried in Old Ripley Cemetery on Lake Drive in Ripley.

He was born September 23, 1814 in North Carolina and died February 6, 1878 in Lauderdale County.

In his 64 years, Joseph S. Williams experienced adventures that most of us only dream about. In his book, Old Times In West Tennessee, published in 1873, Williams writes of the formation of the counties, names many of of the early pioneers and describes their part in the setting of West Tennessee.

Joseph S. Williams, with his parents and six siblings, left North Carolina in 1822 and moved to Mississippi. They traveled through South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama to Mississippi.

After two years in Mississippi, they traveled through Choctaw and Chickasaw Indian nations to the Big Hatchie country in West Tennessee. In Old Times Williams describes vividly the contacts with the Indians and the encounters with bears and panthers.

Fort Prudhomme Chapter NSDAR reprinted Williams' book as a bicentennial project in 1975-76 and again in 1992. The book is again out of print and is in demand having been sold to universities, libraries throughout the United States.

Fort Prudhomme Chapter, NSDAR received permission from the Historian General, NSDAR, to place a DAR historical marker at the grave of Joseph S. Williams.

For Miles Around

By Murray Miles
Tennessee Farm Bureau

FARMERS MUST KEEP PESTICIDE RECORDS

Most farmers have always kept records of pesticide use. It's good business sense to know when, how much, where, and the cost of applications. You can add another reason to that now. Federal law requires it.

In fact, there are two laws and two federal agencies involved in pesticide record keeping. The 1990 farm bill contains provisions which require certified private applicators to record and maintain records on all applications of restricted use pesticides (known by the initials RUPs). Under the provisions of the 1990 farm law, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was responsible for developing regulations on RUP record keeping. State pesticide regulatory agencies are responsible for enforcing the regulations. In this state, that is the Tennessee Department of Agriculture.

The other law is the Worker Protection Standard (WPS) for agricultural pesticides. It also requires farmers to record pesticide applications and post them in a central location on farms. These regulations were developed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The authority for them to do so comes under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA).

So, farmers have to carefully follow both the USDA and EPA requirements. Four general rules apply.

(1) If farmers employ workers outside their immediate family, but do not apply restricted use pesticides, the EPA requirements apply. This means they must record and post every pesticide application.

(2) If farmers employ workers outside their immediate family and apply restricted use pesticides, both the USDA and EPA rule requirements apply. This means they must record and post pesticide use both before and after every application, and then record separately all the applications of the restricted use pesticides.

(3) If farmers do not employ any workers outside their immediate family, USDA requirements apply. This means they must record every application of a restricted use pesticide. It is also suggested that they keep a record of any pesticide application.

(4) If farmers do not apply pesticides themselves, but hire a custom applicator to do it, the custom applicator must provide all records to the farmers. Farmers are required to maintain all this information on the farm, and post it if necessary.

The only farmers who do not need to record applications are those who do not employ any workers and who do not use any restricted use pesticides. However, if they hire workers within 30 days after using any pesticides, then they must keep the records.

In addition, these workers may also need worker protection training if they may come into contact with treated areas. For example, if a farmer hires someone to assist in harvesting, he must post pesticide applications and provide training if that worker begins within 30 days of the last pesticide application. This is why it is a good idea to record all pesticide application information even if the law does not require it.

All this may sound like a paperwork nightmare, and it obviously is. However, it is the law, and means that farmers will continue to spend more and more time filling out forms rather than spending time in the field or barn where his time is probably more valuable as he raises the food and fiber for the rest of us.

Co-Op Workers Attend Seminar

To better meet the needs of patrons, Todd Taylor, Billy Rose, Larry Skinner, Mark Bentley, Ronnie Hines, Dwight Cox, Mike Moore, Ronnie Weatherly, Jerry White and Jeff Wright, of Dyer-Lauderdale Farmers, Inc., attended an FFR Seed Seminar and Tour. They joined nearly 100 other co-op employees from across the state in the training seminar designed to keep them abreast of new product developments, technological advances and useful crop management practices.

Co-op personnel, along with FFR Cooperative breeders from West Lafayette, Ind., and representatives of Tennessee Farmers Cooperative (TFC) participated in the two day event which was created to train and educate salespersons responsible for recommending FFR varieties to local co-op patrons.

Attendees questioned and spoke with breeders who conduct research and develop soybean, hybrid corn, small grain and forage varieties for farmers. Assisting with the discussion were TFC crop specialists who localized presentation with comments and test-data on performance of each variety in Tennessee soils.

At FFR, participants toured test plots of hybrid corn and soybean varieties, taking special notice of row spacings and plant populations. "Attention to this type of detail is what differentiates co-op from its competitors," says Don Ledford, manager of TFC's Seed Department. When assisting farmers with recommendations about varieties and crop decisions, co-op employees must be knowledgeable about which planting methods work best with each variety to produce the most profitable crop.

In addition to field tours, 20-minute presentations were led by FFR experts on forage management, soybean disease control and intensive wheat management providing details for utilizing various management techniques, why they are profitable, and reasons they should be used with FFR varieties.

"Today with all the new technologies and the increased use of conservation tillage, it's becoming a necessity for co-op employees to know and understand the management practices that go along with them," says Alan Sparkman, TFC crops marketing manager. "When farmers go to the co-op for advice, employees will be armed with the most modern and helpful information available. After all, the co-op name is synonymous with service, and getting knowledgeable information on profitable management practices is just another service farmers can count on at co-op."

Halls Victors Host Top-Slot Twisters

Halls High School's Tigers, winners from McKenzie last week, 15-14, this Friday host Union City's Golden Tornado.

The Twisters are tied with Huntingdon and Martin Westview, 4-1, for leadership in Region 7-2A, which will award four play-off berths.

Trenton Peabody trails at 3-2. Camden ties Halls at 2-3. McKenzie is 1-4, Middleton 0-5.

Union City has bowed in the second round of the play-offs four consecutive years.

It was 9-3 last fall, in 3A, losing in Portland, in the second play-off round, 47-21.

Two games last fall were won in over-time, and one on a last-minute kick-off return.

Coach Randy Barnes, a Ripley High School product, is 114-39 in his 13th season at UCHS, 11 of those included eight or more victories.

Losing 14 seniors, he had back this fall only three starters on each side of the ball, but the drop to a 2A schedule has been helpful, with Halls and Middleton replacing Humboldt and McNairy.

Key Twister is Bradley Robinson (5-9, 166, 4.5 in the 40), playing six positions, twice all-district and an honorable mention for an all-state squad last fall.

Last year, he posted 1,942 yards and 15 TDs, including a 92-yard interception to score.

This fall, Union City has won from Dyer County, 27-6, McKenzie, 21-7, Westview, 27-24, Obion County, 14-13, Middleton, 26-6, and Camden, 32-13. Losses have been to Lake County, 18-6, and Trenton, 21-7.

Slayer Of 'Dood' Daniels Given Life Without Parole

Kelvin Anthony Lee, 18, convicted of killing William "Dood" Daniels, 60, of Henning, Sept. 17, 1994, was sentenced in Circuit Court Saturday to life in prison, without parole.

The verdict, from a jury which deliberated for 80 minutes, was between that and a life sentence with eligibility for parole.

It was the first such verdict won in the 25th Judicial District by Atty. Gen. Elizabeth T. Rice, of Somerville, since a law change in July, 1993, provided the option.

Testimony was that Lee rode a bicycle, about a mile, to Daniels' farm, shot him 14 times, and ran over him with a pick-up truck.

Mrs. Rice credits Ron Rickard, then in his first three weeks as sheriff, Gaston Garrett, investigator, and Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agent Jack Van Hooser for expert assistance.

ANIMAL RIGHTS GROUP PUT THEIR HOOKS IN FISHERMEN

First it was the fur people, then the rodeo business, and farmers, and now the extremists of the animal rights movement are after the fishermen.

According to a recent story in the Wall Street Journal, the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, better known as PETA, wants to ban fishing. The article noted that they don't just want to ban commercial fishing, but all fishing. This means from ocean commercial fishing to trout fishing in the Little Pigeon River in the Smoky Mountains and on down to the smallest farm pond where some youngster is fishing for catfish with a cane pole and a worm.

According to Tracy Peiman, a spokesman for PETA, as quoted in the Wall Street Journal, "Just because fish and lobsters aren't cute and cuddly doesn't mean they don't suffer excruciating pain. You wouldn't sink a hook into your cat and leave it flopping on the deck gasping for air would you?"

And how are they going about their campaign? Up in Montana, a man was fly fishing for rainbow trout when two young men began throwing rocks about the size of baseballs. The fisherman yelled at them that they were going to scare the fish. "That's the point", they said.

The fishermen then began to cast his fishhook equipped line at them, and they took off. However, he later found anti-fishing leaflets all over his truck. I can't help but wonder what some good ole boy here in Tennessee would do if PETA protesters threw rocks at him while he was fishing in one of our streams or lakes.

Now, it's one thing to intimidate fur raisers and retailers, farmers, and even the rodeo people, but they may have gotten their hooks into something that they can't handle when they took on fishermen.

According to the Wall Street Journal, there are 54 million people in this country that fish, either as a business, or a sport, and the vast majority are in the latter category.

Even the main stream animal welfare groups (and there is a difference between animal rights and animal welfare groups) are skeptical of PETA's latest rights campaign. Wayne Panchelle, lobbyist with the Humane Society of the U.S. says tackling fishing "is somewhat silly and possibly counterproductive when the movement has so many other priorities".

In addition to the rock throwing incident at the Montana fisherman, the Journal cited other ways that PETA members are working to stop fishing. Among these were in England where scuba divers went underwater during fishing tournaments and herded away the fish or snipped lures off the fishermen's lines.

Also they try to stop such events by filling the water with 20-foot bamboo poles to scatter the fish.

At Ft. Lauderdale, Florida last spring 30 PETA protesters went to a fishing pier and waved banners reading "Fishing: Cold blooded sport" and "Get Hooked on Compassion, Not Fishing". As you might suspect, they were greeted with boos and shouts of "Get a life".

I was raised in a house right on the river bank, but I never was much interested in fishing. However, this is a sport enjoyed by a lot of people. The manager of the fishing pier picketed at Fort Lauderdale told the Wall Street Journal reporter, "What these protesters don't understand is that people here love fishing more than anything...with the possible exception of their mamas".

There is probably no doubt that fish suffer some pain, but, a marine specialist noted that life at sea is naturally rough, and that getting caught and eaten by a fisherman is probably no worse than getting caught and eaten by a shark or some other larger fish. "No sardine ever died a happy death", he said.

There is one good thing to come out of this, and that is fishermen can now understand what livestock producers and a lot of others have been going through.

JANE BROWN WEDS CARMEN ORTASIC Miss Erin Jane Brown, daughter of Mrs. Y. S. Brown, became the bride of Mr. Carmen Ortasic of Washington, D. C., in a brilliant ceremony at the First Methodist Church Saturday evening at eight p. m. The chancel banked by southern smilax and ferns was the glow of numerous candles in cathedral holders. Two huge gardenia trees added their beauty to the altar where the vows were exchanged. The Rev. W. F. Maxe-don read the marriage ceremony. A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Wymond Hurt, pianist, and Mrs. Henry Murchison, vocalist. Entering the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, T. T. Flynn, who gave her in marriage, the bride was lovely in her wedding dress of antique ivory brocade satin. Her veil was of misty illusion and fell from a headress of stambed lace. Her only ornament was a diamond pendant of her mother's. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and stephanotis. Mrs. T. T. Flynn, matron of honor, and sister of the bride, wore an aquamarine jewelry dress fashioned with Priscilla bodice and pleated skirt. Her shower bouquet was of yellow roses. Frank Thompson, of Memphis, served Mr. Ortasic as best man. Ushers were W. G. Spence and Charles Alsbrook. A reception was held at the Brown home immediately following the ceremony. A three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom centered the refreshment table. Mr. and Mrs. Ortasic will make their home in Washington, D. C., after a wedding trip. Mrs. Wymond Hurt and Mrs. Henry Murchison entertained with a Theatre Party Thursday afternoon, in compliment to Miss Jane Brown, bride-elect. Guests were Miss Brown, Mrs. T. T. Flynn, Miss Marcelline Harward, Mrs. Charles Alsbrook and Mrs. Clyde Younger. Refreshments were served at the Drug Store following the show. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alsbrook, Mrs. Birdie Spence and W. G. Spence were hosts at dinner for members of the Brown-Ortasic wedding party at six o'clock Friday evening. A delicious three-course meal was served the following: Miss Brown, Mr. Ortasic, Mrs. Y. S. Brown, mother of the bride-elect, Mrs. B. B. Brown, grandmother of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Flynn, Memphis, Mrs. J. C. Alexander, Cabot, Ark., Mrs. Wymond Hurt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Murchison, and Miss Spence. BILL FRIST

U.S. Senator Tennessee

LESSONS OF WORLD WAR II ARE TOO IMPORTANT TO FORGET

With each passing year, the heroics and the horrors of World War II have begun to recede further and further in our nation's mind. Those valiant soldiers who successfully battled enemy troops on multiple fronts fifty years ago are now falling victim to the battle of time. And as they go, so do the memories, the stories, and the hard-learned lessons of a war that involved more than 30 countries in every hemisphere of the world.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of that monumental war's end. On this historic occasion, I would like to pay tribute to all of those Americans who made huge sacrifices then to preserve the freedoms we enjoy now -- from the soldiers who gave up their innocence, their youth and sometimes their lives in Europe and the Pacific to the civilians back home who worked hard to manufacture war materials and keep the country productive.

On October 11, 1995, the United States Senate and House of Representatives held a joint meeting to commemorate the end of World War II and to proclaim that our nation will never forget those who served our country and saved the world. Celebrations to recognize and remember the end of the war will continue throughout the fall, as we approach November 11, 1995 -- the 50th anniversary of Veterans' Day.

More than 17 million Americans served in the military between the time the United States officially entered the war in 1941 and the time our soldiers returned to American soil victorious in 1945. These soldiers led the war effort against the Axis powers, and many made the ultimate sacrifice when they lost their lives in that worldwide fight for freedom.

Those 17 million Americans were on the front lines. On the home front, more than 19.5 million women joined the workforce to produce the tools necessary to fight the war successfully -- guns, ammunition, jeeps, and tanks. Millions more civilians, including women, the elderly, and children, joined the war effort in other ways, from collecting scrap metal and rationing food and gas to planting victory gardens and joining the non-defense workforce to keep the country functional domestically. In fact, the output of manufactured goods in America increased by 300 percent during the war years, and American farmers mobilized to produce enough food to support the world.

While the number of soldiers from the front lines and the homefront continue to dwindle each year, America cannot afford to let their memories of World War II die, nor can we ignore the lessons they learned. The Second World War tore the world apart. At the same time, it brought this nation together in a way that we can never forget. Our parents and grandparents came together and sacrificed for four long years to preserve the freedom and liberty that are fundamental to our country. It is now up to us to ensure that their sacrifices weren't in vain.

Jack Jouett was the Paul Revere of the South, but without the poet-publicist. In 1781, he learned of a British plan to capture Thomas Jefferson and rode 40 miles to warn him.

The first rickshaw was invented in 1869 by an American Baptist minister, the Rev. Jonathan Scoble, to transport his invalid wife about the streets of Yokohama, Japan.
